Bridge Project At RLF Set To Start Monday

Construction is scheduled to begin Monday, June 11, for a $383,719 deck replacement project on the Trunk Highway 32 bridge over the Clearwater River in Red Lake Falls.

According to Lloyd Larson, district bridge engineer for the Minnesota department of transportation, crews from Swigen Construction Co. of Grand Forks will be moving onto the work site Monday or Tuesday and setting up signals that will control traffic during construction.

Traffic will be restricted to one lane on the bridge during the entire construction period and this will require caution and patience on the part of motorists, according to Larson. Also, since width of the traffic lane will be limited to 11.5 feet, wider loads will have to travel an alternate route.

South side of the bride will be worked on first, and will include replacement of the sidewalk. Larson said that this will be done first so that the sidewalk will be completed by the time school starts next fall. In the meantime, no special allowances are planned for pedestrians on the bridge. The sidewalk will be in place for pedestrians during construction of the north half of the bridge.

Transportation Meeting To Be At RLF Monday

Northwest regional development commission's transportation advisory committee will be meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, June 11, in the Wheat Growers building in Red Lake Falls. Meeting is open to the public.

Main topic will be studies being done to identify routes for movement of agricultural commodities with the purpose of finding options to make that movement more efficient. John Sem, state director of the commercial movement study unit for the Minnesota department of transportation will review the state's efforts in that program.

Also present will be Bob Wolfe, district engineer for the transportation department, who will discuss concerns over possible cutbacks in routes and the impact on city and county government funding as routes are turned over to their responsibility. Those concerns result from legislative highway study committee hearings scheduled for June 28.

Property Tax Changes Noted By Legislators

(Editor's Note: Because of the concern about property tax levels in northwest Minnesota, area legislators Jim Tunheim of Kennedy and Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls prepared a two-part column on the issue which they are presenting jointly to citizens throughout District 1. The first part of the two-part series outlined the history of property taxes from their inception to 1984. This part will explain the 1984 tax provisions passed by the legislature.)

The 1984 tax bill holds out significant promise for the future of Minnesota property tax payers, particularly farmers who have been the hardest hit by tax increases in the last year.

The state does not receive any revenue from property taxes. Property taxes are levied and collected at the local level. But it has been legislative policy in the past to provide property tax relief by increasing state aids for schools and local government services and by providing a number of programs such as state-paid homestead credit, agriculture credit and property tax refunds to farmers and homeowners.

Unfortunately, the recent recession resulted in cuts in these programs because revenue collected through state income and sales taxes went down. Property tax relief programs, such as those mentioned above, could not be funded at the customary level and farmers and homeowners had to pick up a larger share of their property tax bills.

This year, with the state returning to financial health, the legislature took action to help those with property taxes that went up more than 20 per cent. For taxes payable this year, the targeting program will refund to farmers and homeowners 100 per cent of that part of their tax bill which exceeds 20 per cent of their last year's taxes — with certain income limitations. Next year, the state will pay 50 per cent of any increase above 12½ per cent — up to a maximum of $400 with no income limitation. Refunds are due to go out in October.

The maximum agriculture credit available to farmers to reduce their property taxes has been increased from $2,000 to $4,000 this year. Property owners whose tax bill came up against the old $2,000 maximum this year will be sent an adjusted statement making them eligible for an additional credit or refund.

The state requires a certain amount of local effort in the funding of schools in order for school districts to receive additional state aid. This year the legislature, in a futher attempt to lower property taxes, reduced that local effort from 24 to 23½ mills.

The wetlands credit available to farmers on their income taxes was eliminated during the state's fiscal crisis, but the legislature restored that tax break this year. Once again, land designated by the department of natural resources as wetland will be eligible for the wetlands credit. And a new 10 per cent income tax credit will be allowed on the purchase of conservation tillage planters.

The state has also agreed to pick up property tax increases which would have been caused by a recent court finding that railroads had been paying too high a tax and must be reimbursed. Without the law passed this year to put this burden on the state, local property taxes in districts which have a rail line would have had to fund the reimbursement.

All of these credits, schools aids, local government aids and other reimbursements paid by the state result in significant property tax relief for farmers and homeowners. It is interesting to note that the counties in our legislative district receive more money from the state than we pay into the state in our income and sales taxes.

For instance, the major property tax relief aids to Pennington county for 1982-83 totaled about $9.2 million, while sales and income taxes collected from within this county were only $6.1 million. In Marshall county, $8.3 million came back from the state while only $3.8 million went in to the state, and Red Lake county received $4.1 million while paying only $1.4 million.

The legislature favored small businesses in several law changes affecting their taxes. For instance, a change in classification procedures will give more favorable tax treatment than before to those who have their homes in the same building as their business.

Also of benefit to resort owners and other seasonal businesses is the provision that their property taxes can be paid on May 30 instead of May 15.

Additional tax cuts for businesses include property tax reductions on the first $60,000 of commercial and industrial property.

Altogether, property tax relief for this year and next year total over $70 million for farmers, small business owners and other homeowners. If the economy continues to do well, we should be in a position to relieve property taxes even further next year.

SCS Can Help Farmers In Several Ways

According to Ralph Rundell, soil conservation technician at Grygla, soil and water conservation districts and the soil conservation service profice several services to landowners and land users. Assistance is available in several ways.

Planning or helping to plan farming or other land uses may include cropping systems or rotations which are planned to protect the soil from degradation by wind or water erosion as well as complementary practices such as drainage, residue management, alternative crops, chemical use and a fertility program.

Planning farmstead or field windbreaks serve as energy saving, beautification, erosion control, wildlife area improvement and other purposes. The SWCD can help plan and, if desired, order the trees and assist in the tree planting.

Planning pasture or hayland practices includes re-seeding, pasture management practices for optimum production and proper cutting times for hayland. It can also include a fertilizer program and weed control methods.

The SWCD can assist landowners or landusers through the state cost-share program which it administers. This is a cost-share program to help install certain conservation practices to protect the farmer's soils base.

Information and education programs include classroom presentations with schools as well as providing conservation materials. The SWCD sponsors the conservation essay and conservation poster contests as an educational tool. The SWCD and the SCS personnel are available to present talks or slide talks to public meetings or groups. The information-educational program also includes the weekly column and special conservation articles or pictures in local newspapers.

If you have a conservation or land-use question or problem, contact your local SWCD office and find out if there is any assistance available to help you. Call 294-6144 or stop in at the SWCD office in Grygla.

Job Program Available To Eligible Vets

Veterans administration (VA) is urging veterans and employers to take advantage of the "Emergency Veterans' Job Training Act." VA Administrator Harry N. Walters said there is still time and money available.

Program, aimed at helping unemployed Vietnam-era and Korean conflict veterans, is administered jointly by the VA and the department of labor. It funds 50 per cent of the veteran's starting hourly wages up to $10,000, to provide a maximum of 15 months' training for certain veterans with service-connected disabilities, and up to nine months for other participants.

As of this month, more than 120,000 veterans have been granted certificates of eligibility. Also, over 14,000 employers, representing 31,000 jobs, have been approved for participation. More than 5,200 veterans have actually been placed in jobs. Approximately $23.5 million has been committed to train these veterans out of the $130 million available. "The program seems to be gaining momentum and we are urging veterans and employers to take advantage of it," Walters stated.

To be eligible, a veteran must have been unemployed for at least 15 of the 20 weeks immediately preceding the date of his or her application. VA provides eligible veterans a certificate of eligibility to be presented to an employer offering a job training program that meet specified requirements. Veterans are generally notified of certification within seven working days, and employers within 10. Under present law, veterans' applications must be submitted by November 29. Certificate of eligibility is good for 60 days and may be renewed.

Applications may be obtained from any VA regional office or local state employment job service offices. Employers wishing to take part in the program are urged to contact the local VA or Job Service office. Approvals of training programs are made by the VA.

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District 1

As vice chairman of the Minnesota Senate's education committee and a long-time supporter of our public educational system, I was pleased with the overall effort and support given to our public schools by the past session of the state legislature.

This session, we were finally able to reverse one of the most troubling legacies of the past three years of budget cuts which contributed to a definite decline in state support for public education and a corresponding increase in local property taxes for pay for this reduced state support.

The omnibus education aids bill passed by the legislature this session made a number of improvements in funding, especially by increasing education aids by 7.5 per cent during the 1985-86 school year, from $1,475 per pupil unit to $1,585. This will add over $29 million into our educational system next year.

We also made an effort to reduce the local property tax burden for education by dropping the local tax requirement from 24 to 23.5 mills, while further aiding school districts that have more experienced and expensive staff. The bill also restores state-paid summer school aid and provides for an estimated $100 million in total aid for the next two-year, biennial period, without any expected increases in the local tax burden.

As a lawmaker with an active interest in the need to adequately fund our education system this year, I have witnessed the progress of and evolution in this system since the establishment of the "Minnesota Miracle" back in 1970 under then-Governor Wendell Anderson.

Since that time, the basic goals for financing our education system have been to follow two constitutionally-fundamental principles — first, to require the opportunity for a general and uniform system of education for all school-age children and, secondly, to require a system that is also cost-efficient and effective in delivering this educational product.

For many years prior to the establishment of the "Minnesota Miracle" in 1971, the legislature delegated most of the responsibility for school district operations to local school boards and to local property taxes. However, by 1970-71, the Minnesota state foundation aid program began providing all districts with an additional or "equalized aid" amount to fund basic instructional costs.

Many of the disparities between and among school districts in the intervening years have since been dealt with and balanced as much as possible. The basic foundation aid formula has stood the test of time in terms of offering a roughly-equivalent quality of education for all Minnesota children.

Since 1972, for example, the state's per-pupil contribution has increased, from $750 in 1972 to the budgeted $1,585 level by the 1985-86 school year.

Over this time, the level of local property tax burden to pay for the majority of this cost has reduced, from a high of 30 equalized mills in 1972 to 23.5 mills by the 1985-86 school year. State support for education reached its height in 1981-82, with the state supporting 71.2 per cent of costs. This support dropped dramatically to 45.3 per cent in 1982 due to the recession and state cutbacks, but since the 1983 budget session, the legislature has renewed its commitment to education by bringing this level of support up to a 60.3 per cent llevel.

Contrary to some popular, but inaccurate, beliefs, our educational system in Minnesota is quite strong, and has out-performed most other states in the country. This was proved rather clearly by survey results reported by the state department of education.

Those results verified that our state is among the national leaders in terms of graduating students (91.5 per cent — first); in college entrance scores (20.2 per cent — third) and in pupil-teacher ratio (17 to 1 — 16th).

While this system may not live up to everyone's expectations, I for one am pleased with the strides our state has made in investing in education which, after all, is an investment in the future success of our state and nation.

If you have any comments regarding this or any other issue, please do not hesitate to contact my office at 306 Capitol Building, St. Paul, MN 55155 or call (612) 296-8660.

Legion Baseball Underway

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team, which has averaged over 27 wins per season in the past four years under the coaching of Nick Drees, Harley Drees and Howard Dalager, is scheduled to host Detroit Lakes Saturday in a 12-noon doubleheader on the fairgrounds diamond to open its 1984 home slate.

Post 117 has been a proven winner in the past, and 1984 should be no different. Unlike a year ago when a number of high school varsity players were missing from the American Legion program, some two-dozen of them, including most of the seniors who helped lead the Prowlers into the North Sub-Region 8AA finals last week, will be in the line-up this summer. A number of players from the Middle River and Newfolden communities may also join the two-team Thief River Falls American Legion program.

It should be a very competitive summer of baseball. Northwest League line-up, which has fluctuated in the past with the addition and subtraction of teams from the smaller communities in northwestern Minnesota, remains unchanged from a year ago with Thief River Falls, Roseau, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Warroad, Karlstad and Hallock. Thief River Falls has always been a contender; East Grand Forks is expecting big things this summer; Roseau was a 3-0 winner over Thief River Falls in high school play this spring and is a Region 8A tournament finalist; Crookston, although having struggled through a high school schedule, should still be very competitive; and Warroad may be tough, with the Warriors once beating Roseau 10-0 during the 1984 regular season high school schedule.

Northwest League has had a different regular season pennant winner in each of the past six years. Nobody has been able to repeat as champion since Thief River Falls won four straight titles in 1975, 1976, 1977 and 1978. The pennant changed hands when Crookston won it in 1979, Thief River Falls 1980, Crookston 1981, Thief River Falls 1982 and East Grand Forks in 1983.

At the Ninth District level you have to look once again at the Moorhead Blues. They've won it for three straight years, have taken nine of the past 10 titles and 10 of the last 12 dating back to 1972. Only other Ninth District winners in that span were Breckenridge in 1973, with Moorhead then winning six-in-a-row, and Detroit Lakes in 1980, with Moorhead now on a three-year winning streak.

Twenty teams have won Ninth District tournament titles in the 56-year history of the tournament (with 1983's two-class system producing two champions in Moorhead and Breckenridge), and Moorhead has 20 of them. Next in line is Fergus Falls with seven Ninth District titles — but none since 1962. East Grand Forks has five and Breckenridge three. Nobody else has more than two. Thief River Falls' only titles came on back-to-back season in 1954 and 1955.

Fergus Falls won in 1927, 1938, 1952, 1959, 1960, 1961 and 1962.

East Grand Forks won in 1934, 1941, 1942, 1963 and 1971.

Breckenridge won in 1949, 1973 and 1983 (Class A).

Joining Thief River Falls as two-time winners are Parkers Prairie in 1929 and 1930; Ulen in 1936 and 1937; Barnesville in 1940 and 1953; Detroit Lakes in 1948 and 1980; and Deer Creek in 1964 and 1965.

One-time winners include Hawley 1928; Bagley 1933; Hitterdahl 1935; Underwood 1939; Dilworth 1943; Fertile 1956; Ada 1958; Glyndon 1966; Winger 1968; and the combination of Underwood-Battle Lake in 1970.

And Moorhead will very likely be tough to beat again this summer. Thief River Falls did it once this spring, 4-2 early in the high school baseball season. But going into tonight's (Wednesday) Region 8AA tournament championship game against St. Cloud Apollo, the Spuds' starters carry a .365 team batting average.

First baseman Jon Kappes leads the way with a .520 average — after a slow start, according to the Fargo Forum. Other Moorhead starters above .300 include outfielder Donnie Thompson, who had a first-inning grand slam home run for the Spuds' 14-7 North Sub-Region 8AA championship game win over Thief River Falls, at .431; catcher Vance Zuehlsdorff .408; outfielder Brad Steffan .378; third baseman Dan Gnadt .369; pitcher-shortstop Darin Kraemer .327; pitcher-outfielder Tim Hill .321; and catcher Jamie Peterson .320.

Moorhead has revenge on its mind in tonight's Region 8AA finals when the Spuds will face Apollo pitcher Paul Gross. It was Gross who pitched the final three innings of Apollo's 6-4 victory over Moorhead in the 1983 Region 8AA finals, ending the Spuds' season at 17-2. And it was Gross who had a complete game 6-5 win as he pitched Waite Park past the Moorhead Blues in the 1983 American Legion state tournament in New Ulm, ending the Blues' year at 34-9.

Three Seniors Lead Prowlers' '84 Baseball Season Statistics

Seniors Tim Bottem, Ryan Bakke and Rick Spong closed out their high school baseball careers in fine fashion this spring as they topped the 1984 Thief River Falls statistical chart released this week by coach Charlie Cornell.

Bottem, Bakke and Spong all made significant improvement in their offensive production as they helped lead the Prowlers into the North Sub-Region 8AA tournament finals last Thursday in Moorhead where a 10-7 season ended in a 14-7 loss to the host Spuds.

A fixture at shortstop for several seasons, Bottem bounced back from a sub-par .239 batting average he compiled as a junior in 1983 to lead the 1984 Prowlers with a .333 average. He led the team in number of at-bats (54), runs (18), hits (18) and doubles (3), while sharing the team lead in stolen bases (9) and home runs (2).

When captain-elect Al Ness was relegated to a few pinch-hitting roles for the entire 1984 season because of an arm injury, Bakke became the Prowlers' regular catcher, and he responded by hitting .316 after a .228 junior campaign. He led the team by drawing 17 walks to go along with his 12-for-38 hitting for a team-leading .611 on-base percentage. Second in that category was senior Bill Benedict, who alternated at second base with junior Bob Huot, with a .579 on-base fiture, although he hit just .231.

Spong was the team's season-longer centerfielder and he hit .311, up from the .277 mark he had a year ago. Spong, who was 14-for-45 at the plate, shared the team lead in stolen bases with Bottem with nine.

Junior third basemen Joe Blankenfeld tied Bottem for the team lead in the home run department with two and led the Prowlers in runs-batted-in with 12. He hit .282.

Only other person in double figures in the RBI category was junior pitcher-outfielder Tim Nyland with 10. He hit .261 and had a third-high on-base percentage of .548 for the Prowlers.

Thief River Falls hit .268 as a team this spring, an improvement over the .239 average the Prowlers had in 1983, but the record remained virtually the same as the 10-6 mark of a year ago.

Junior lefthander Ryan Drees was the busiest Thief River Falls pitcher, working 43 and one-third innings, giving up 42 hits, 29 runs, and 16 earned runs while walking 25, striking out 26 and posting a 2.58 earned-run-average to go along with a 4-3 won-loss record.

Thief River Falls got off to a 7-1 start this spring by beating Red Lake Falls 4-3, oorhead 4-2 and Middle River-Marshall County Central 10-0, then sweeping doubleheaders from Crookston 9-4, 12-6 and Ada 7-4, 22-11 while losing only an eight-inning 5-4 game to Bemidji.

But then came a string of five straight losses as the Prowlers fell to Moorhead 4-0 and Minot, N.D. 11-4 in the four-team Moorhead Invitational and Bemidji 6-5, while dropping a split doubleheader to eventual Region 8A semifinalists Roseau 3-0 and Lake of the Woods 5-3 before the Prowlers finished the regular season with an 11-1 decision over Bagley.

Thief River Falls ended three years of unproductive post-season play with two tournament wins this spring, beating Park Rapids 12-1 and Bemidji 7-3 in the quarterfinals and semifinals of the North Sub-Region 8AA playoffs before losing to Moorhead.

Cornell completed his tenth year as Thief River Falls head coach this spring.

1984 TRF Legion Baseball Schedule Starts This Week

Between 25-to-30 ball players are expected to take part in the 1984 Thief River Falls American Legion baseball program, with Post 117 fielding two teams this summer — an A team and a B team affectionately known as the Bombers.

Nick Drees and Harley Drees will once again serve as coaches, with Mark Harder, who coached at the Babe Ruth level here last summer, handling the Bombers. Howard Dalager, who has helped in a coaching capacity in the past, and Greg Brekke of the American Legion Club, are also instrumental in maintaining a strong baseball program for players who will not reach their 19th birthday before August 1.

Tentative schedules will find Post 117 playing some 25 A games and 20 B games, but the start of the season has already been delayed when Thompson, N.D. backed out of a scheduled game tonight (Wednesday), and with Roseau still involved in the Region 8A high school tournament, a scheduled Thief River Falls trip to Roseau Thursday is obviously in limbo. Thief River Falls will likely have its season opener Saturday when Detroit Lakes is scheduled to be at the fairgrounds diamond here for a doubleheader beginning at 12-noon.

Bombers, meanwhile, will open with a 6:30 p.m. doubleheader at Hallock Thursday.

Thief River Falls, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Roseau, Warroad, Karlstad and Hallock will again form the Northwest League line-up this summer, but those standings, which used to produce the Sub-District 4 tournament pairings, become obsolete in that regard because the Ninth District is again broken into two Classes — A and AA.

East Grand Forks, Crookston, Thief River Falls, Moorhead Blues, Detroit Lakes and Fergus Falls remain as Class AA teams. Like 1983 when the two-class system was first used, the Ninth District will have a Class AA and Class A tournament, with the two winners meeting in a 2-out-of-3 game state tournament-qualifying playoff series. A year ago Moorhead beat Breckenridge in that series to earn a berth in the state tournament at New Ulm. The 1984 Ninth District Class AA tournament is expected to be played in East Grand Forks later this summer.

Region Baseball Title Games Are Set For Tonight In 8A, 8AA

Championship games in both the Region 8A and Region 8AA high school baseball tournaments are scheduled to be played tonight (Wednesday) at 7 p.m.

Roseau and Blackduck were semifinal winners Tuesday and will meet in the Region 8A championship game at Red Lake Falls. Sub-region winners Moorhead and St. Cloud Apollo will meet in the Region 8AA finals at Matson Field in Moorhead.

State tournament berths await the winners. The Class A state tournament will be played June 14-15 at Municipal Stadium in St. Cloud, with the Class AA state meet being played June 12-13 at Municipal Stadium in St. Paul.

In Tuesday's Region 8A semifinals at Red Lake Falls, North Sub-Region champion Roseau edged South Sub-Region runner-up Laporte 6-4 while South Sub-Region champion Blackduck shut out North Sub-Region runner-up Lake of the Woods 5-0.

Moorhead and Apollo won their way into the Region 8AA finals last week when the Spuds out-scored Thief River Falls 14-7 in the North Sub-Region 8AA tournament title game while the Eagles knocked off St. Cloud Tech 5-2 in the South Sub-Region 8AA title game. Tech had beaten Apollo twice during the regular season. Moorhead and Thief River Falls had split a pair of regular season decisions.

Hardees became the first three-game winner in the Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league Monday with a 23-6 victory over Northland-Thomas and a 12-10 decision over the Schmidt Stealers.

Marcie Sandahl was 3-for-3 and Brenda Marben homered in Hardees' first-game win over Northland-Thomas, while Janet Reed was 3-for-3 and Lori Sorvig homered in the second-game victory over the Schmidt Stealers, who had home runs from Colleen Kron and Barb Natvik.

Roseau Transport was also a doubleheader winner Monday with narrow wins over the Mushrettes 19-17 and Pizza Hut 12-11.

Ridgerunners scored nine times in the sixth inning for a come-from-behind 13-6 conquest of Russells-Kees, and the Health Hustlers edged Hutchinson-Sheldons 9-8 as Dee Larson homered. Janet Skjerping and Val Peterson homered for the losers.

Men's Slow Pitch

Stone's Mobile Radio was a doubleheader winner Tuesday in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball league, beating Jack Daniels 18-7, then knocking off The Aggies 6-3 on the strength of a three-run home run by Loren Swanson as the winners upped their Division II record to 5-2.

Elsewhere Tuesday, TG Sporting Goods was a doubleheader winner in Division I with wins over Best Western 4-3 and Big Johns-Meadowbrook 6-5.

On Monday, Norwest Insurance surprised Pepsi Bottling 7-6, The Blacksheep beat Fleet Supply 12-7, Hamms-Pizza Hut got by Nelson Implement 12-9 and Coors out-scored The Blacksheep 23-12.

Tuesday's slate of games also included a pair of double forfeits, according to league president Dennis Bendickson. No scores were received on games matching The Source-Wennberg's Welding vs. Big Johns-Meadowbrook or Falls Clinic vs. Best Western, so all four will be charged with losses with the league standings.

League play resumes with three doubleheaders tonight (Wednesday) and Thursday on the four slow pitch diamonds located on Highway 1, just east of the Thief River Falls Area Vocational-Technical Institute.

Transportation Rules

Anglers have been reminded by the Department of Natural Resources that Minnesota conservation officers will be enforcing regulations on transporting fish.

All fish being transported must be packed and wrapped so that they may be readily unpacked, separated, counted and examined.

"The intent of this regulation is to enable conservation officers to count and identify the catch, to ensure Minnesota's possession limits are observed," said Fred Hammer, Director of Enforcement.

Anglers may transport their fish only in the following ways:

1. Fish prepared and packaged by a Fish Packer; or

2. Dressed fish (including filleted fish), except bullheads, sunfish, and crappies, must have a one inch square patch of skin with scales on each fillet. Dressed fish may not contain more than two fillets per fish. When saugers are dressed they are counted as walleyes. Fish with length limits must be transported undressed with heads and tails attached. The entrails and gills may be removed; or

3. Fish may be transported undressed, which means the tail, fins, and skin intact.

All fish with length limits must be undressed with heads and tails attached.

Hammer cautions that under state law, failure to comply with these regulations is a misdemeanor.

Permits Needed

Persons planning to control vegetation, algae, or swimmers' itch in lakes and other public waters are reminded to first obtain a permit from the Department of Natural Resources. Permits are issued by DNR Regional Fisheries Offices.

Permits are required because the unregulated use of chemicals or cutting of vegetation is a potential threat to public health and to the aquatic environment, including fish habitat. Any use of chemicals in public waters requires a permit from the DNR.

Lakeshore property owners do not need a permit for cutting or pulling of aquatic vegetation in a maximum area of 2,500 square feet. The control site may not extend more than 50 feet along the owner's lake frontage or one-half the length of the frontage, whichever is less.

Property owners may also include a 15-foot wide boat channel to open water, but must not increase the 50-foot width limitation on shoreline frontage.

Such work is restricted to the use of hand or power-operated cutters, rakes and similar tools, and may not be done with draglines, bulldozers, hydraulic jets, suction dredges, or other power-operated earth-moving equipment.

After cutting and pulling, the vegetation must be removed from the water.

Persons who are in doubt as to whether they need a permit should contact any Regional Fisheries Office (Bemidji, Grand Rapids, Brainerd, New Ulm, St. Paul-Rochester), or the DNR Ecological Services Section, St. Paul; phone (612) 296-2835.

Public Access Sites

Minnesota boating public will have many new and improved opportunities to enjoy state lakes and rivers, thanks to projects currently underway on 41 public access sites, the Department of Natural Resources announced recently.

Minnesota is the top state in the nation for boating popularity with an average of one boat for every 5.5 persons.

"Fishing and boating continually rank as the most popular forms of summer outdoor recreation in the state," according to Mike Markell, supervisor of the public access and river recreation program. The waters of the state are a public resource to which the public has the right to free and adequate access."

Several of the 41 access projects are nearing completion, said Markell, while many others are expected to be finished by July 1.

New developments — Hanson Lake, Aitkin county; North Center, Chisago; Tom, Cook; Perch, Crow Wing; Long, Hubbard; Little Jessie, Itasca; Pomroy, Kanabec; Kife, Kanabec; Lake Andrew, Kandiyohi; Loon, Kanabec; Hunt, Rice; Rice's Point (Superior), St. Louis; Little Elk, Sherburne; Lake Demontreville, Washington; St. Croix River, Washington.

Rehabiliations — Farm Island, Aitkin county; Lone, Aitkin; Big Cormorant, Becker; Chub, Carlton; Eagle, Carver; Eagle, Cass; Edwards, Crow Wing; Gull, Crow Wing; Rush Island, Itasca; Wabana, Itasca; Long, Kandiyohi; Elizabeth, Kandiyohi; Norway, Kandiyohi; Solomon, Kandiyohi; Shakotan, Lincoln; Buchanon, Ottertail; Prairie, Ottertail; Bass (Elbow), Ottertail; Round, Ottertail; Rush, Ottertail; Sarah, Polk; Cedar, Rice; Clyde Ave. (Superior), St. Louis; Camp, Swift; Anne, Wright; Sugar, Wright.

DNR currently administers approximately 1,000 public accesses statewide. A typical DNR access provides a designated off road parking area, a turnaround space and a concrete launch ramp.

Funds to acquire and develop public accesses are provided by the Legislative Commission on Minnesota Resources (which derives revenue from the cigarette tax) the Resource 2000 Bonding Program and the unrefunded marine gas tax.

Maps showing the location of free public access are available free by calling 1-800-652-9747 in outstate locations and asking for "access maps," or by calling 296-6699 in the metro area. An order form for the maps can be obtained by writing to DNR Trails and Waterways, Box 52, Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Report Dead Loons

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA), are asking residents or visitors in northern Minnesota to watch for dead loons this summer.

A large die-off of wintering loons in the Gulf of Mexico occurred in 1983. Some of these loons had significant amounts of mercury in their bodies and two of them were banded in Minnesota.

More information is needed, because it is not known if mercury caused their deaths.

Any dead loons, especially those encountered in Lake, Cook, St. Louis and Itasca counties, should be reported to the local Conservation Officer; to Regional Nongame Specialist Jack Mooty in Grand Rapids (218) 327-1721; or to the Area Wildlife Manager, Bill Peterson in Grand Marais (218) 387-2370.

Carcasses should be preserved by freezing them in a clean plastic bag. A label should be attached, identifying the person finding the loon, date found, lake, nearest town and cause of death — if known. The loons will be analyzed for mercury content through a cooperative effort of the DNR and MPCA.

Minnesota has a larger population of loons than any other state except Alaska. Mercury is abnormally high in some of the fish in the Arrowhead Region. Since loons depend on fish for food, the DNR and the MPCA are concerned that loons are accumulating mercury, adversely affecting their survival and reproduction.

DNR Report Aid Rivers

June is "Minnesota Rivers Month" and the DNR, Division of Waters, announces the completion of Shoreland Update Report No. 5, "A River Classification System."

The report, soon available to state shoreland managers, is a product of a two year project funded by the legislature.

The report offers five class types for state rivers: primitive, semi-primitive; natural-rural in forest; natural in agriculture; agriculture; and urban. The classes were identified by analyzing land use data, road accessibility, urban center proximity, recreational settings, development occurrences and the physical characteristics from a sample group of state rivers.

General management objectives and specific recommendations for meeting the objectives have been developed for each class.

"This report will provide state agencies and local shoreland managers with an alternative approach to managing river shoreland," says Bill Zachmann, the report's author. "In the past, the state's lakeshore classification system and accompanying regulations have also been applied to rivers. The new system, specifically designed for rivers, definitely offers a potential improvement for management of Minnesota's rivers."

For more information, contact Bill Zachmann, Box 32, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, Division of Waters, Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Wildlife Group Has Acid Rain Posters Printed

What is acid rain? Where does it fall? What are its effects — and its solutions?

Answers to these acid rain questions are illustrated in six four-color educational posters, developed as a cooperative project between the National Wildlife Federation and the Canadian Embassy, now available to the public. Designed for use in classrooms, nature centers and clubs, the posters measure 18x24 inches and are printed on glossy poster stock.

Among the facts printed on the posters are:

+ Major sources of pollution that cause acid rain are coal-burning power plants in the central and eastern regions of the United States, and nonferrous smelters in eastern Canada.

+ Acid rain has destroyed fish and plant life in hundreds of lakes and streams in the United States and Canada; it can affect human health, releasing lead, copper and cadmium from pipes into drinking water; it is also believed to reduce crop and forest growth.

+ Only permanent solution to acid rain is to keep sulfur and nitrogen pollution out of the air; both sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide pollution can also be reduced through energy conservation.

A set of six rolled posters, mailed in a protective carton, plus a booklet on Acid Rain — How You Can Help, and an Acid Rain Teacher's Guide are available for $2.95 to help defray shopping costs; a set of just six posters is available for $1. The offer is available while suplies last. Please send check or money order to Acid Rain Posters, National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036.

If you would like more information on how your organization might obtain a quantity of the posters for distribution, call Rue Gordon at (703)790-4402.

Gun Safety Is Taught To 45 Young People

Forty-five Thief River Falls area young people recently completed a Minnesota firearms safety training program sponsored by the Pennington County Sportsmen Club in cooperation with the Minnesota department of natural resources.

Certificates were issued to the students which will authorize them to carry firearms in the field until they are 16 years old. They will also be authorized to purchase a Minnesota big game license.

Students are required to attend 10 hours of classroom training in the basement of city auditorium, during which they are instructed on various aspects of firearms use, including orientation, game laws, hunter ethics, types of firearms, bowhunting, care of game, black powder hunting, first aid and survival, and conservation.

Principal instructor for the course was Irving Swanson, assisted by Hardy Hodge, Dana Kloe, Howard Hagen, Duane Holland and Victor Pogatchnik, ~~who~~ each covered specific areas of the training. In addition, after successfully completing the classroom experience and taking a final test, 39 of the students attended a field trip to the Sportsmen Club's shooting range on Saturday, where they were given a chance to demonstrate their proficiency with firearms, both in shooting with live ammunition, and in safely carrying them under different conditions on a hike in the field. Assistants at the range included Gary Wilkenson, Glen Anderson and Allen Paulson.

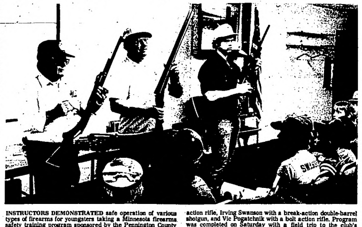
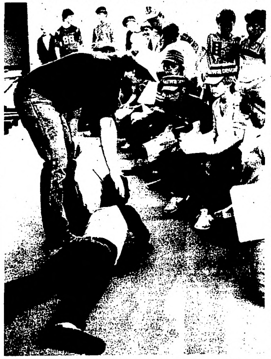
Also, Todd Alan Lerol, Travis Eugene Lewis, Spencer Michael Manke, Keith Allen Martinson, Wayne David Miller, Jason Ryan Sauve, Jeffrey Allen Schele, Gregory Rodney Smidt, David Gale Stengrim, Trevor Ryan Swanson, Darin Scott Tele, Terry Lee Wahl, Wade Ryan Jorde, Aaron Matthew Janish, Jason Robert Skalsky, Craig Allan Lindahl, Matthew Edward Russell, David William Russell, Kris Michael Rokke and Shane Michael Defreece.



INSTRUCTORS DEMONSTRATED safe operation of various types of firearms for youngsters taking a Minnesota firearms safety training program sponsored by the Pennington County Sportsmen Club and the Minnesota department of natural resources recently. From left are: Hardy Hodge with a lever action rifle, Irving Swanson with a break-action double-barrel shotgun, and Vic Pogatchnik with a bolt action rifle. Program was completed on Saturday with a field trip to the club's shooting range, where the young people were given an opportunity to demonstrate their new skills.



SHOOTING POSITIONS were demonstrated as part of a firearms safety training program for area youngsters, which was sponsored by the Pennington county sportsmen club recently. Students watched intently as instructor Vic Pogatchnik aided a fellow student in assuming the prone position. Classes were completed last Saturday, with a practical demonstration and field trip to the club' shooting range. Another class will be scheduled in the fall.

Advice Given On Gap Filling For Medicare

If you are covered by Medicare, it is no surprise to you to hear that Medicare does not pay the full cost of your medical bills and services. In fact, you may have purchased additional insurance to fill the Medicare gaps, coverage known as "medigap" insurance. For many persons on social security, saving for such insurance premiums means scrimping on food or other essentials. If you are in this situation, comparison shop, and be informed about the options you have for filling the Medicare gap. There are several:

(1) The best way to fill Medicare gaps is to get Medical Assistance (MA) if you can. Low-income persons over 65, and some disabled persons under 65, are eligible for MA if their income and assets are within certain limits. At this writing, persons eligible for MA don't need additional health insurance. MA pays for almost all health care services, including many not covered by Medicare, such as dental work, hearing aids, glasses and custodial nursing home care.

If there is any chance you are eligible for MA, insist on applying. Apply at your county human services department, not your social security office. The county cannot decide if you are eligible until you have signed a completed application form. For more information, contact your county human services office.

(2) another option you may have for filling the Medicare gap is a health maintenance organization (or HMO). HMO's provide and pay for needed services and care for members who have paid a fixed monthly charge collected in advance (plus a small co-payment for some services.) By joining an HMO, you receive all Medicare benefits plus those provided by the HMO. Current HMO charges range from $18 to $37 monthly, depending on the HMO.

If you join an HMO, remember that you are agreeing to receive all health care services from doctors, hospitals and other providers associated with that HMO. It will pay only for health services approved by its doctors except in emergency cases. Also, if your present doctor is not the HMO, you will have to change doctors to one who is.

(3) Another option for some seniors is comprehensive health care programs affiliated with the Minnesota senior federation. Participating hospitals and doctors accept Medicare payments in full and bill Medicare directly. Members don't have to pay deductibles, copayments, or charges above what Medicare considers "reasonable," thus avoiding most claim forms and paperwork.

(4) Another option is Medicare supplement insurance. It is sold by many private insurance companies to fill in some of the gaps in Medicare coverage. However no policy covers all the gaps, and buying this insurance can be very confusing. To help consumers, a state law was passed requiring all such policies to be rated according to certain set minimum standards of coverage, ranging from "1+" for policies with the highest minimum standards, decreasing to "1", "2", and "3" for policies with the lowest minimum standards.

Do not assume, however, that a lower rated policy offers less coverage than a higher rated policy, or that all policies with the same rating offer the same coverage. A policy must provide the minimum coverage required by its rating, but it may provide more benefits than its particular rating requires. For example, a "3" policy may provide more benefits than some policies rated "2". If you want greater coverage, it's usually best to buy a higher rated policy such as a "1+" rather than a low rated policy with "riders."

For more information on this and on your legal rights in buying "Medigap" insurance, write for the free book, "Filling the Medicare Gaps," at the CLE Program, 2507 Fremont North, Mpls., MN 55411. Persons not low-income are asked to include a donation for postage and handling.

Gold Coins: What Experts Advise

For thousands of years, man used gold to adorn temples, tombs and as jewelry. According to historians, it wasn't until 560 B.C., that King Croesus of Lydia found another use for gold — as coins which, to this day, are a world-recognized medium of exchange.

Today, gold is a vital stabilizer in the hectic financial world. It's a relatively secure yet innovative investment, especially in long terms.

"Gold is a proven hedge against inflation and a recommended way to preserve your assets," says R. Leslie Deak, president and chief executive officer of Deak-Perera, U.S., Inc., the nation's oldest and largest foreign exchange and precious metals organization.

Deak explains gold's short term price changes are day-to-day reflections of the dollar's value. When inflation or international problems increase, the consumer finds that gold is an attractive alternative to dollars.

The Canadian Maple Leaf is one of the most popular bullion coins in the world.

Investment experts point out that gold is available in a variety of forms. Bullion coins, like the Canadian Gold Maple Leaf, are the most popular because they have wide acceptance and are available in sizes directly relative to the ounce. Bullion bars are also available, as well as gold storage programs.

Investors should be careful to check the details of a storage program before making any financial commitments. The safest programs, offered by established precious metals dealers, provide segregated storage in independent bank depositories and insurance coverage, and are audited regularly.

Auditor Gives Ideas To Keep Credit Rating

In a letter to local government officials throughout Minnesota, State Auditor Arne Carlson discussed what the local governments can do to improve or maintain their credit ratings.

Carlson's conclusions were drawn from a May 3 meeting he sponsored with Moody's Investors Service concerning why that firm lowered credit ratings of 17 local governments in Minnesota in 1983. Because the credit ratings affect interest rates on bonds and other debt, lowered ratings can be very clostly to governments, the auditor noted.

Carlson cited external economic factors such as the state and national economies as significant in the credit determinations. Thus, some of the rating factors cannot be controlled by the governments being rated.

Although the Moody's representatives mentioned numerous data sources on which they base their decisions, they indicated several times that judgment is an element in the final evaluations. They also said that specific types of debt commonly used in Minnesota — special assessments, tax increment financing, and temporary bonds — raise questions for them, and they scrutinize such debt issues very thorougly.

What can local governments do to improve their credit ratings? Primarily, they can make their own case, Carlson said. A candid explanation to the rating agency of the strengths and weaknesses of the local financial situation will help prevent misunderstandings.

Problems noted in the credit rating process itself include the need for more timely ratings and the need for a formal appeals process.

Carlson stated his intention to continue to work for top credit ratings for Minnesota local governments. Meetings such as this one, he said, have far-reaching benefits by fostering an atmosphere of cooperation and communication between ratings agencies and the organizations they assess.

THE RING OF TRUTH

How much we depend on symbols to express our thoughts, our feelings, our convictions!

This ring says "We're engaged." It speaks of love and promises given. It prophesies marriage and vows to be taken. It proclaims to the world that two lives shall be forever intertwined.

But can anyone be sure that such a symbol speaks truth?

We can express with this ring only what is real and honest in our hearts. If our hearts lie or deceive, the symbol becomes part of the fraud.

If this ring then is to speak truth, he who gives it and she who wears it must have learned within themselves to separate truth from falsehood in thought, in feeling, in conviction.

The Church has a great deal to do with the sacredness of love and marriage. It can fulfill its duty best if given the opportunity to mold the character of our sons and daughters long before their wedding-day.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

FUN FOODS FOR KIDS CAN BE NUTRITIOUS

What did Inky say when Pac-Man was about to eat him?

"I haven't a ghost of a chance."

That's just one of the riddles appearing on the back of each label of a new version of an old family treat: pasta that looks like Pac-Man. Pac-Man Pasta from Chef Boy-ar-dee is a nutritious, new canned pasta line by American Home Foods. It is made to bring space age excitement to mealtime for youngsters.

The fun food for youngsters comes in three new flavors, Pac-Man Pasta in Spaghetti Sauce with Mini Meatballs, Pac-Man Pasta in Spaghetti Sauce with Cheese Flavor, and Pac-Man Pasta in Golden Chicken Flavored Sauce. All are being offered in a 15 oz. size.

The colorful new packaging design features strong Pac-Man emphasis and includes a variety of riddles, games, and puzzles on the label. "Kids obviously love games and we feel that this new packaging approach has much appeal for the young consumer," said the Director of Marketing Services. "With 46,000,000 women working, men and children are actually food shopping and preparing foods. The entire family is included in our marketing plans."

In developing the new product extensive research was conducted to determine young consumer preferences. Children 6 to 12 years old were included in focus groups and quantitative studies. Pasta shapes and sauce flavors were researched for consumer appeal and acceptability. The Pac-Man pasta shape won far and above other pasta shapes, and the cheese-flavored sauce was preferred nationally 45.8% over the other leading sauce by the young panelists.

PASTA & PUZZLES: Youngsters are likely to like mealtime more if you present them with the riddles that appear on the back of each Pac-Man Pasta label. Answers plus another riddle and puzzles are printed on the reverse side of each label.

Insurance and Safety Tips
By: CARL L. ANDERSON

HOMEOWNERS SHOULD INCLUDE REPLACEMENT COST ON CONTENTS

There's no doubt that your Homeowners insurance is among the most valuable forms of protection you have. But you can make it even more valuable, and avoid unexpected expenses and frustration, by expanding it so that you receive full replacement cost if personal property is damaged or stolen.

Standard homeowners coverage pays only for actual cash value, which is replacement cost less depreciation. For just a small increase in premiums, you can purchase an endorsement that guarantees to pay for the total replacement cost of such items as furniture, TV, stereo, clothing and appliances. In this world of ever-rising prices, that's a real boon.

Other options you may consider adding to your basic Homeowners policy include increased limits for money and securities, Valuable Personal Articles (VPA), professional office or studio occupancy and excess personal liability.

We represent INA/Aetna. But we work for you.

Piscatorial Politics

We're growing more than a little weary of political people playing politics with the boundary waters fishery. U.S. and Canadian relationships are being strained, a viable and honorable industry is being junked, the ecology of a fantastic natural area is at risk and the basis of it all is theory and emotion rather than facts or knowledge.

The most recent in a series of what can most kindly be termed less than illustrious acts wafts this way from Washington, DC. That is where Minnesota Senators Dave Durenberger and Rudy Boschwitz introduced legislation to place a tariff of $3 per pound on walleyed pike imported from Canada.

"Our aim is not to place an economic hardship on Ontario's commercial fisheries," states Sen. Durenberger is a news release on the proposed tariff, "but merely to bring U.S. regulations into philosophical conformity with those in Canada."

That is akin to Salome asking for John the Baptist's head on a platter, then saying, "I didn't want to cause him any trouble, just adjust his followers' thinking more along the lines of that of the emperor."

We're really not too surprised that Sen. Durenberger would be a partner to such a tariff suggestion, but we are disappointed in Sen. Boschwitz, who has at least occasionally shown a willingness to reason before jumping off the deep end. The action is stark contrast to the efforts by Congressman Arlan Stangeland who has attempted to bring international interests together for settlement of differences on a mutually conciliated and acceptable basis.

Realistically, one would expect that Senators Durenberger and Boschwitz know full well their proposal would go nowhere in the Senate and are merely making the proposal as a warning flag to put the fear of God (or at least Congress) into Canadian officials. We don't pretend to be familiar with the nuances of political gamesmanship, but it seems likely that anyone with any common sense at all wouldn't be serious about introducing such legislation if there is any chance it could become law.

Legislation by retaliation is a poor course to follow in any circumstance, and as it involves a sensitive international question it is even more insane. Even in Washington you don't douse a brush fire by tossing on gasoline.

Minnesota's legislature has already succeeded — barring a resurrection of common sense in the immediate future — in dealing a death blow to the Minnesota commercial walleye fishery. It has done so on the apparent rationale that the fish which swim in Lake of the Woods and Rainy Lake are the exclusive entitlement of those who angle with hook and line. People who choose not to fish, or who are physically unable to fish, are not entitled to have others catch their fish for them as part of a total sustained yield of a natural resource belonging to all Minnesotans. Or so it would seem in the eyes of the legislature.

Now that the state's governing body has shut off that source of supply, our national lawmakers propose to choke off the next most available means of providing fish to our state's restaurants and grocery stores.

And the frustrating part of the whole business is that all of the actions are the result of emotion, supposition and political pressures rather than an objective assessment after scientific study and analysis.

It is an enigma that Congress feels it necessary to spend millions of dollars on a study to determine why the Pentagon spends $900 for 50-cent bolts, yet our two senators are willing to initiate a sweeping action against an entire international industry without the benefit of any supporting study at all!

It has been pointed out before that a lack of knowledge isn't as dangerous as knowledge of something that isn't so. That axiom could well apply here. Statistics cited by Sen. Durenberger in his news release are inaccurate, yet they are used to justify his proposal. He states that "only about four per cent of the walleye catch on Ontario waters goes to individual anglers, whether American or Canadian." While exact numbers are unknown, it had previously been projected by the Ontario department of natural resources that 40 per cent of the catch had gone to American anglers alone. That is a most significant disparity.

We do our sports angling on Lake of the Woods. We often take advantage of the privilege offered by Canadian provinces of Ontario or Manitoba to fish in their waters. But we recognize that we are there without any other entitlement than a legally-authorized license provides, and that we have no more right to utilize the fish swimming beneath us than any other Canadian or American, licensed or not.

We have very real fears that allowing the sports angler to concentrate on taking walleyes from Lake of the Woods while eliminating the balance of rough fish removal provided by commercial netters will do more harm than good for the future of angling on that great lake. Many others disagree, but there is a real lack of adequate, informed, scientific study to support either contention. And it looks more and more as if the possibility of getting that information is less of an interest to politicians than getting vocal special-interest (make that self-interest) sports anglers off their backs.

And as far as we're concerned, as someone once said in another situation, that's a helluva way to run a railroad.

Exports, Imports Imbalanced

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

America's foreign trade showed a record deficit in April for the fourth consecutive month.

According to reports released this week, the foreign trade deficit reached $12.19 billion in April.

Commerce Department figures show that U.S. exports experienced a 1.2 per cent foreign sales decline to $17.52 billion. The real problem, however, the report indicates, is that imports jumped six per cent to $29.71 billion.

The deficit is balmed on an American market flooded with imports of oil, foreign cars and other goods and a faster post-recession recovery in the United States compared to other nations. Exporters of goods have had a more difficult time selling goods abroad because foreign economies have not revived as rapidly as has the U.S.

The most disheartening news from U.S. Commerce Department specialists is that the trade imbalance could climb to $130 billion for the U.S. by the end of 1984 if the first fiscal quarter trend continues. Private analysts, however, are more optimistic but have been reluctant to make stabs at lower deficit figures although many suggest the Commerce Department figures are too high.

The rapid increase in the deficit may result, in part, from fast U.S. economic recovery from recession. Imports typically rise in the first year of an economic recovery. But there are other more fundamental, long-term problems.

A contributing factor to the trade deficit is a high valued U.S. dollar compared to other currencies. As a result, American goods are more expensive overseas and foreign goods are cheaper in the United States.

Many steps can be taken to help produce a better balance of trade.

Americans could purchase less goods from other countries. This would apply to both consumer and industrial goods. If differences in cost are small for comparable products, it would certainly make sense to buy an American product in preference to a foreign-made one. If the United States would continue to become less dependent upon foreign oil, that would help to reduce imports.

More aggressive selling of American products, both at home and abroad, can help reduce the deficit. Many American companies have done little to develop foreign markets. American trading companies have not expanded as expected a few years ago.

Higher tariffs and more restrictive import quotas could be imposed on foreign goods. This sometimes results in retaliatory actions by other countries. However, import restrictions should be applied to commodities that are offered in American markets at prices that do not cover the full costs of production.

The best answer is for American producers to improve the quality and lower the costs of goods which can be sold both at home and in other countries. This is a long-term task requiring the cooperation of workers, managers, suppliers and sometimes the assistance of government. Reductions in interest rates would also be helpful.

Trade deficits can not go on for long without creating serious economic problems. A concerted effort must be made to overcome our trade problems.

WE'RE ON THE LEVEL

It's true. Natural gas prices are leveling off. The rapid rate increases of the past are now behind us. You'll be happy to know that at Inter-City Gas Corp. we're doing our level best to keep our rates low. In fact, natural gas prices rose less than 2% from January 1983 to January 1984.

Because we purchase gas from four pipeline suppliers, however, our monthly billings to our customers will continue to fluctuate from month to month. Naturally, when their rates change, we have no alternative but to reflect those changes in our monthly billing. This is reflected on our monthly billing as a "Purchase Gas Adjustment."

Likewise, if one of our suppliers is granted a general rate increase, this, too, will be reflected on our monthly billing. Fortunately, over the past year, changes have been very small. Due to conservation and added incentives to discover new wells, supplies of natural gas are very good. And the future looks even more promising. When compared to other forms of energy, natural gas is still The Best Deal in Town. It's the least expensive; it's clean, it's ready to use right out of the pipeline; and it's simply unexcelled for efficiency. In fact, natural gas is ideal for today and tomorrow. Yes, we're going to be together for a long, long time.

If you'd like to learn more about natural gas, just give us a call. We'll be happy to level with you.

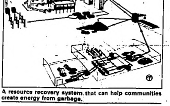
A Leader in Energy-Saving Resource Recovery Systems

One American company that's been a leader in energy technology for more than 65 years designs or supplies the equipment that produces over 40 percent of the thermal electric energy generated in the free world today.

Known for its energy technology worldwide, this firm's experience in the combustion of a variety of waste fuels extends back to the early 1930s. Its resource recovery systems are predicated on using simple preparation steps and efficient burning of refuse in a versatile furnace design that has been tested and improved for over 50 years.

A mid-1960 survey showed that systems from this company, Combustion Engineering, Inc. (C-E), were burning more refuse than all other continuous systems combined. At that time, the U.S. was using incineration to reduce the volume of waste, not to recover waste energy.

According to experts at the company, a single line of waste processing equipment can handle and prepare municipal solid waste at the rate of 100 tons an hour. Multiple line systems can economically process over 3,000 tons a day. In this system, more than 90 percent of the ferrous metal in the waste stream is extracted in a form that is readily acceptable to scrap markets.



A resource recovery system that can help communities create energy from garbage.

Other subsystems in the process line also use field-proven techniques for maximum reliability and availability. The primary output of a processing system is the refuse-derived fuel that is burned to generate steam used to make electricity.

To ensure that a solid waste problem is not simply converted to an air, water or noise pollution problem, the company designs systems that integrate engineering solutions with overall community requirements and objectives. To design such a system, the company calls on its many engineering disciplines as well as its planners, economists and any other skills that may be required.

The company plans, designs, constructs and operates resource recovery systems (such as one planned for the San Francisco Bay Area) using its in-house technical experts. The company also assists clients in financial planning for such projects.

Combustion Engineering is applying its experience with energy conversion systems to produce electric energy in a system that disposes of municipal wastes economically.

THE SUBJECT ISN'T HAIL.
IT'S RISK.

Maybe insurance isn't on the top of your list of priorities. But "risk" should be. Years ago, many farmers and ranchers could self-insure themselves. But today their investments are too great. They have too much at stake.

Farming has become capital-intensive. And because it is, insurance has become a very sophisticated subject. "What can I afford to put at risk?" is a much more pressing question to ask your insurance counselor than, "How much does hail insurance cost?" What's at stake is so much more than your sweat equity and a chunk of your savings. Today it's more often business equity and credit payments.

So who can help you measure your risk? At Production Credit, we're qualified to help. We serve farmers exclusively, and we have the financial and agricultural know-how to assist you.

How much hail insurance is right for your operation? At Production Credit, we'll give you competitive rates and straight answers. Call us today about hail insurance. Ask us questions, and we'll ask a few of our own. We think our expertise can help.

The Production Credit Association, part of Farm Credit Services. Helping you harvest the success you deserve.

CAR CARE CORNER

Protecting Your Investment

Just two gallons of paint are used to coat the exterior of your car. Yet these two gallons which represent only one percent of the total cost of the car, offer the greatest protection for your investment. Without this exterior shield, your valuable vehicle would literally be destroyed by the rust and corrosion that damages auto bodies.

Automotive paint is designed to withstand weather conditions ranging from the rust-producing humidity of Baton Rouge to the 40-below-zero temperatures of Fairbanks. The experts at the national Paint and Coatings Association offer these tips to help keep that protective coating looking good and performing its life-saving job.

- Wash your car at least once a week with warm water. Take it for a drive immediately afterward to blow water away from around moldings and other areas susceptible to rust.
- Wax the car two to three times a year. This protects nicks and prevents salty water, humidity and tannic acid from bird droppings from getting into the car body.
- Get touch-up paint when you get a new car. Repair small nicks and scratches promptly with this easy-to-apply paint to prevent corrosion.

By preserving the original finish, you will maintain—and potentially increase—its value at resale time. Used car dealers look closely at paint to determine the condition of a car's body. The original coating lets them know that the driver has not been involved in accidents that required major body work and increases resale value. A well-maintained finish will also give potential buyers the assurance that the overall condition is just as good.

Proper care of those important two gallons of paint on your car is one of the best investments you can make in your automobile.

Miss TRF At State Pageant In Austin

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Hoping to be among the 10 finalists in the first televised Miss Minnesota pageant, Beverly Rustad, Miss Thief River Falls, traveled to Austin by plane Sunday to participate in the week-long event. The state pageant will be televised on Channel 11 at 8 p.m. on Saturday.

Beverly was crowned Miss Thief River Falls last July 30 at the Jaycee Summerfest pageant and will be among 33 candidates at the state pageant in Austin. In addition to interviews, rehearsals, luncheons and other related activities, she will participate in preliminary pageants Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

According to her schedule, she will compete in the talent division at the Wednesday evening preliminary, swimsuit division on Thursday and evening gown division on Friday. Her talent presentation will be a flute solo entitled "Carnival of Venice" and she will be costumed as a clown for the musical presentation.

In preparation for the state competition, Beverly has attended a three-day session with Kathleen Munson as Image Grooming associates in Bloomington, participating in a basic charm course, and also received assistance from Caroline Melroe at The Academie in Fargo, ND.

She also took part in the state pageant's "Girl Talk" session on April 7, a preliminary event to permit the candidates to meet one another and to give them insight and information about the state contest. "Girl Talk" was held in Austin and attended by most of the 33 candidates who will be part of the state pageant this week.

During her reign as Miss Thief River Falls, Beverly has appeared at the Miss Grygla and Miss Middle River pageants, the Grygla parade, and assisted or entertained at such local events as the Jaycees' Operation Christmas, Jaycee Women's Christmas party for youngsters, charity ball and snowmobile race.

A graduate of McIntosh-Winger high school in 1983, she has completed her first year at Concordia college in Moorhead where she is majoring in psychology. She hopes to eventually work with a large corporation to apply her psychology knowledge in an industrial capacity. She is a member of the college band and toured with the group for 10 days this February.

In high school she was in both band and chorus, took part in two musicals and a one-act play, played varsity volleyball and was a cheerleader for varsity football and basketball teams.

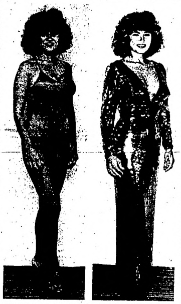
She has been named to both the District 30 honor band and honor choir, was selected outstanding solo performer at the District 30 grand concert, named to the John Philip Sousa national honors band, Who's Who in Music and recipient of the Sousa band award and national choral award for McIntosh high school. She was a girls state delegate and an honor graduate.

Beverly's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Rustad, operate a dairy farm north of McIntosh. She has two older sisters and a younger brother.

"It has already been a terrific year," she said of her reign as Miss Thief River Falls. "I have been able to meet so many different people, had such a good time and gained so much confidence. There is no question that I would do it all over again."

She also encouraged girls in the Thief River Falls area to enter the 1984 pageant which will select a successor for her title. "There were only a few girls at the pageant informatonal party," she said, "and that was sort of disappointing. If only the girls would realize how much fun and what a great experience it is, there would be a large number of entries every year."

Contestants for the Miss Minnesota pageant are quartered in private homes in Austin during the week of the pageant. Cards, letters or greetings may be addressed to Beverly Rustad, Miss Thief River Falls, c-o Miss Minnesota Pageant, P O. Box 92, Austin, MN 55912.



IN COMPETITION this week at the Miss Minnesota pageant in Austin is Beverly Rustad, Miss Thief River Falls of 1983. She will compete in preliminary pageants during the week, appearing in talent competition Wednesday, swimsuit Thursday and evening gown Friday. Her talent presentation will be a flute solo entitled "Carnival of Venice", for which she will be costumed as a clown. Ten finalists will be selected from the preliminary pageants for the Miss Minnesota finals Saturday evening. The final pageant will be televised at 8 p.m. on Channel 11.

Rev. Hushagen Resigns As Trinity Pastor

Resignation of Rev. Berton Hushagen as pastor of Trinity Lutheran church in Thief River Falls was received Sunday by Tom Kays, president of the church council, following Sunday morning's worship services.

The resignation was made at the request of Bishop Gilbert Lee of Northern Minnesota District of the American Lutheran church. Bishop Lee called for the resignation at a meeting with the church congregation Wednesday evening and Rev. Hushagen noted in his letter of resignation that it was being given in accordance with that request.

PENNINGTON COUNTY dairy princess Marlys Schindler is an enthusiastic horse-woman. She is shown with her four-year-old Arabian gelding "Fabian" on the Schindler farm located southeast of Thief River Falls. The horse shares the pasture with the Schindler dairy herd and "he seems to think he's one of the cows. . . he just loves them," Marlys said. She will represent Pennington county Tuesday at the Northwest Dairy Day princess contest in Thief River Falls.

Marlys Schindler Has County Princess Title

Representing Pennington county in the Region One dairy princess contest at Northwest dairy day Tuesday will be Marlys Schindler, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Schindler of rural Thief River Falls. She will be among 16 contestants for the regional title now held by Lori Olson of Fertile.

A 1984 graduate of Lincoln high school where she was a member of the National Honor society and in the upper 10 per cent of the class scholastically, she was recognized as Pennington county dairy princess at a dinner sponsored by the county American Dairy association Wednesday evening at Lon's restaurant.

The Schindlers have a herd of about 80 grade Holstein dairy cattle and currently are milking 32 head in a Grade A operation five miles southeast of Thief River Falls. They sell milk to Land O'Lakes in Thief River Falls and the family has been involved in dairying for more than 30 years.

The farm of 480 acres includes about 200 acres of cropland — used primarily to produce grain and corn for silage to feed the dairy herd — and the remainder in hay and pasture. The dairy barn is 34x80 in size with a 16x40 silo and a pole building also used in the operation. A 36x60 area of the pole building is used for hay storage and a 36x64 area is enclosed and used as a calf shed.

In 1954 the Schindlers moved to the farm from Red Lake Falls and they have remodeled and expanded the house and improved other buildings. Marlys is involved with field work, especially during haying time, as well as working with the house and yard and feeding and bedding cattle when her father and four brothers are busy with field work.

At Lincoln high school Marlys is a member of the wind ensemble which will be making its trip to Norway this summer, and she has been a

Curves are attractive, but not in your spine.

Calcium can help straighten you out! It's true. The proper amount of calcium in your diet can help keep your bones strong and may actually prevent a painful bone disease called osteoporosis.

What is osteoporosis?

Osteoporosis is also known as the "Brittle Bone Disease". This painful and often crippling condition affects both men and women. However, due to normal hormonal changes, it is most common in women over 40. When osteoporosis strikes, bones become so thin and brittle that they break very easily.

The key: Keep up your calcium.

Osteoporosis develops slowly. So slowly, in fact, that it may take years before you realize that you have it, and then, it's too late. There is no cure for osteoporosis. But, through proper diet, it may be prevented. So, give yourself a break, that's easy on your bones. Be sure you're getting a nutritious, balanced diet, which includes plenty of real dairy foods.

Dairy foods-The #1 source for calcium.

The recommended dietary allowance (RDA) for most people is 800 mg of calcium. But most doctors agree that women need even more calcium to avoid hormone-related calcium loss. Studies show that, between the ages of 35 and 50, women need as much as 1500 mg of calcium per day.

What are some good calcium sources? Dairy products are the most calcium-rich foods you can eat. Here's a sampling of the calcium content of some dairy foods:

| FOOD | | CALCIUM |
| WHOLE MILK | 1 CUP | 291 mg |
| SKIM MILK | 1 CUP | 302 mg |
| PLAIN LOWFAT YOGURT | 1 CUP | 415 mg |
| CHEDDAR CHEESE | 1 OZ. | 204 mg |
| SWISS CHEESE | 1 OZ. | 272 mg |

Osteoporosis may be prevented if you know the score on calcium. So support your bones with the good nutrition of dairy foods and they'll support you.

Don't be a calcium loser.

Governor To Proclaim 'Hire A Vet' Month

Gov. Rudy Perpich will sign a proclamation on June 13 designating June as "Hire-a-Vet" month in Minnesota.

The proclamation recognizes veterans' contributions to the labor force and encourages employers to consider benefits of hiring veterans. Gov. Perpich cites two statewide efforts to promote the hiring of veterans.

For more than 50 years, the Minnesota job service has supported hiring of veterans through its employment and job-training programs for veterans.

During the year ending Dec. 31, 1983, a total of 43,968 veterans registered with job service offices statewide. A total of 6,188 were placed in jobs, including 2,636 Vietnam-era veterans and 300 disabled veterans.

Perpich also said that in November of 1983 Congress passed the emergency veterans job training act to encourage employers to hire and train Korean and Vietnam-era veterans. The special job-training program is sponsored by the Veterans administration and Minnesota job service.

Employers who hire and train eligible veterans under the program are reimbursed up to half the wages paid during training, up to $10,000.

Mike Graham, assistant director of the veterans employment and training program, said that a U.S. department of labor survey indicates that 550,000 Minnesotans are veterans.

Graham said that employers interested in hiring veterans and veterans needing employment or job-training assistance should contact the nearest job service office.

Unusual Farm Equipment Is Display Item

Almost hidden among plows, tractors and other machinery in the main portion of the Marshall county historical society building at Warren are some rather unusual inventions to ease the labor of early farm families.

One such small machine is called a Banner Root Cutter, according to curator Jean Johnson. It is on loan from Dick Brown, formerly of Viking. Farms with poultry to feed would feed roots and vegetables into a grate which shook off clay and gravel. As they tumbled over the grate they were fed into a large circular blade and chopped into pieces of feeding size.

The blade was turned by hand and had a capacity of chopping 20 to 40 bushels an hour. This fresh cutting daily helped retain the nutrition of the vegetables for healthier flocks.

Also on display is a smut cleaner, also operated by hand, on loan from Melvin Peterson of Alvarado. Grain was poured into the hopper and passed through a formaldahyde solution to treat it against smut.

These and many other early 1900 farm conveniences may be seen at the fairgrounds museum open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Smoking In The Friendly Skies

John Hammer, managing editor of the Bemidji Pioneer, wrote the following comments about the CAB proposal to ban smoking on certain flights. Smokers and those who have kicked the habit should have no trouble understanding what he means:

The final decision on a regulation that could very well change the modern world as we know it will be made June 14.

That's when the Civil Aeronautics Board will officially decide whether or not to ban smoking on airline flights of less than two hours duration.

No one is expecting such a move, however. You see, the CAB met Thursday and, at the direction of the chairman, endorsed the smoking ban on such flights. But then he was persuaded to change his mind when CAB staff people said one whole passle of problems would result.

Yet there is still the possibility that the decision could be reversed again on the 14th.

I'm not suggesting that such a move will happen, but we should at least consider what effect it would have on life in the friendly skies.

There are some people I worry about when such a restriction is considered. Nervous people about to take their first flight, for example, need the calming, oral-retentive fix that a cigarette can provide. If they are smokers, that is.

Travelers who have forgotten their newspaper in the airport lounge, have already read the latest copy of "Fly By Night Report" or "McDonnell-Douglas Monthly," and who cannot fall asleep, should have something to do.

There are also those who are simply "nicaddicts," a phrase I just coined to describe people who cannot make it for an hour and a half or so without cigarette withdrawal fits.

I know of one of them. And I can just imagine the conversation that develops when she goes to see her travel agent to book a business flight or arrange passage to Mazatlan.

"This is . . . . calling, I need to book a flight to Denver on the 20th."

The agent then quotes several airlines and the service they have available Minneapolis-to-Denver. "And there's a good rate on the Wesnorth Airlines 10:05 flight," he adds. "Arrive Denver at 1 p.m."

"I'll take it she says, as long as there are enough seats available to get into smoking."

"Uh. . . well, I'm afraid there is no smoking anywhere on that flight," the agent says apologetically.

"No smoking? Well forget that one, try Democracy Airlines."

"Well, you see, that's non-smoking too. In fact they all are."

"That's ridiculous! There has to be a smoking class."

"Well, that's not the way the CAB sees it, because any flight of less than two hours is no smoking."

"But 10:05 'til 1 is almost three hours," she says in a near-frantic voice.

"No, actual travel time is 1 hour, 55 minutes. 1 p.m. is the Mountain Time."

A temper tantrum breaks out, directed toward the CAB, not the agent. "Look I want to get to Indianapolis on the 20th and I'm not going to spend two hours on a plane without a cigarette.

The agent says he'll work on it and call her back.

She slams down the receiver and lights up two cigarettes. The conversation took nearly five minutes and she's behind schedule on her fourth pack.

Then the agent is on the phone again.

"O.K. I think we got it. You leave Minneapolis at 9:35 on Elevator Express airlines arriving in Omaha in 50 minutes, depending on whether or not the pilot is a smoker. You've got 30 minutes on the ground, plenty of cigarette machines. You leave Omaha for Topeka on Cropduster Commuter Lines, getting there 30 minutes later. That's about five 'til 11. Plenty of time, nearly a half hour again, for a cigarette break. Then we get you on the Tobacco Shuttle that leaves Topeka on a converted Concorde SST and you're in Denver 37 minutes and 24 seconds later. That's why they call it the Tobacco Shuttle. They never stay in the air more than 40 minutes and travel full power from the time they clear the runway. It's a little tricky coming down in Denver, but it's worth it."

There is no response from the other end of the line.

So the agent chimes in with what he figures is the reason for the silence. "That comes to a total for the three fares of $992 one way."

"How much are cigarettes in Topeka?"

"Oh, Id say about, a buck a pack."
"I'll take it."

Now, I don't care one way or the other what they decide on June 14. Until they start messing with the liquor cart service or make the seats any smaller, they can make the smokers sit on the wings for all I care.

Every Move You Make

Following editorial is by editor Tom Ratzloff of the Detroit Lakes Tribune:

The next time you enter the bathroom at work, how would you like to have to punch a device that times your "pause" from your duties?

Such monitoring systems are already in place at some jobs, according to recent television reports, and they are becoming increasingly popular as managers attempt to improve employee efficiency and time management.

Thanks to more sophisticated computer systems, some businesses are now able to account for an employee's every move during a work day. For example, one large telephone company keeps logs of their operators' total activities — including their mistakes or even their yawns while on duty.

These data banks give managers the capability to measure job performance that goes beyond a simple time clock. The result of such monitoring is good or bad, depending on your perspective. Those in management are able to point with pride at increased profits thanks to increased output. They attribute this to the monitoring systems which supposedly discourage employee laziness or inattention.

However, workers have less charitable feelings about being chained to their desks by computerized shackles. They say that being constantly watched at work has engendered a climate of fear and paranoia. This additional stress leads, in many cases, to more errors and poorer quality work as employees focus frantically on output and speed. Recent university studies suggest that an increase in employee illness, chemical abuse and other problems might be linked to these employee monitoring devices.

Labor unions are lining up against such systems, saying that they are an invasion of privacy and a poor management tool. One state has reportedly banned them and others may follow suit.

This issue will become more prominent as computers become increasingly intertwined with our lives. Although we are adjusting to the computer age, many people genuinely fear becoming computer-controlled drones who increasingly lack autonomy and control over their lives.

And pushing a digital timer in the privacy of a company bathroom will do nothing to ease those fears.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Seven-year-old Kim said to her mother that she planned to marry her classmate Charlie.

"I see," her mother said. "Does Charlie have a job?"

"Oh, yes," Kim replied solemnly, "he erases the blackboard in school."

"Sorry, boss," the late arrival puffed, "but I had car trouble this morning."

"What seemed to be the problem," the boss asked.

"Well, mostly," the employee replied, "it was that I was a little late getting into it."

Girl: "I'm sorry, but I never kiss on the first date."

Boy: "What about on the last one?"

Boy: "You seem to be a sensible girl; will you marry me?"

Girl: "I am sensible, that's why I won't."

"Miss Johnson," the exasperated boss fumed, "when the little bell on your typewriter rings, it doesn't mean it's time for a coffee break!"

---

Two former classmates met in an airline terminal. "From the looks of you," the fat grad joked to the thin man, "there might have been a famine." "From the looks of you," the other shot back, "you might have caused it."

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Gov. Rudy Perpich

National standards are set in Minnesota.

Other states copy our laws ensuring equal pay for jobs of comparable worth and guiding use of computers in the classroom.

It is here too that the model chemical dependency treatment program was developed and the most advanced cancer and organ transplant research is being conducted.

Minnesota also has been out in front nationally in dealing with the problem of drinking drivers.

Within the past few years, the Legislature has acted to create one of the most complete and respected set of drunken driving laws in the country.

Partially as a result of those new, tougher laws, there has been an impressive decline in recent years in the number of alcohol-related traffic deaths.

Growing public awareness and concern about drunken driving, and increased enforcement of laws also must be credited for a 45 per cent decrease in the number of alcohol-related traffic deaths within the past decade.

Concurrent with the decline in fatalities has been a dramatic increase in arrests for drunken driving and in license revocations.

For example, from 1979 through 1983 the number of arrests for drunken driving increased 78 per cent, from 18,000 to 32,155.

Now about one-fourth of all Minnesota arrests are for drunken driving.

Alcohol-related license revocations have more than doubled in the past decade, from 13,047 in 1973 to 34,903 in 1983.

A state survey is exploring all of the reasons for the decline in alcohol-related fatalities.

Preliminary findings indicate that the threat of license revocation may be a great deterrent to driving while drunk.

In a poll conducted in the fall of 1982, 90 per cent of those surveyed considered license revocation to be a strong deterrent. A smaller group, 88 per cent, called jail sentences an important deterrent.

Thirty per cent of those polled said they had changed their behavior in regard to drinking and driving since stricter laws passed by the 1982 Legislature went into effect. Prominent among those changes was one that speeds up license revocation upon refusal to take a test for intoxication, or upon failig the test with a .10 or more alcohol concentration reading.

In 1983 the Legislature went firther, stiffening penalties for drunk drivers involved in accidents causing injury or death.

As a result of 1984 legislation, Minnesota becomes one of the first states in the nation to make it mandatory for drivers to take a chemical test for blood alcohol content. This legislation ensures that test evidence will be available in more DWI cases.

The 1984 legislation, which goes into effect Labor Day weekend, also doubles the penalty for failing to take an alcohol test. Instead of facing a six-month license revocation, individuals who refuse to take the test will lose their license for one year.

Minors arrested for drunken driving also face stiffer penalties under the new laws. Those who refuse to take an intoxication test may lose their license for one year or until they turn 18, whichever is longer. Even those who take the test could lose their license for six months or until they turn 18.

We believe that the publicity given all these measures has heightened public awareness of the dangers of drinking and driving.

This awareness, along with the deterrent effect of the laws and increased enforcement, should mean continued reductions in alcohol-related traffic deaths in our state.

Of course, these numbers will be cold comfort to the families of those who become victims of drinking drivers this year.

We must keep up the pressure against drinking and driving.

Education about the dangers must be increased. We also must support those groups working to make the public aware of the tragedies that result from imprudent use of alcohol.

Sen. Dave Durenberger

The increasingly dangerous situation in the Persian Gulf is a stark reminder that the development and use of alternative energy sources is crucial to American's security. While we've made progress toward reducing our dependence on oil imports, every drop of fuel we can produce from domestic sources is a drop of fuel that doesn't have to depend on world events outside our control.

That's one reason I'm pleased that, nestled among the provisions of the deficit "downpayment" package recently approved by the U.S. Senate, is an increase in the federal gas tax exemption for fuel ethanol — what used to be called "gasohol." Under the change, a gallon of fuel ethanol would be exempt from 5.75 cents of the federal gas tax, up from the current 5 cents.

The House of Representatives has not included this measure in its downpayment package. When the House and Senate versions finally are reconciled by a conference committee, we all should hope that the fuel ethanol incentive is part of the final product.

While not as big an incentive as my earlier proposal to increase the tax exemption to 9 cents per gallon, the change should sharply increase demand for corn and other commodities used to produce ethanol. That's good news for farmers in Minnesota and elsewhere who, despite the impact of PIK and last year's drought, are still piling up surpluses of underpriced corn and other commodities. Minnesota ranks second in the nation in the amount of corn in storage, with 13.7 million bushels currently in bins and elevators.

Last year the federal government spent $19 billion on the PIK program, idling 2.3 million acres of farmland in Minnesota alone. But a dollar spent in stimulating production of fuel ethanol is far more productive than a dollar spent to idle a large portion of our farm sector. Both the farmer and the taxpayer benefit from a program that increases farm income through higher demand for farm products.

Our growing ethanol industry already consumes more than 150 million bushels of corn per year, pushing up the price of corn by an average of five cents a bushel. Increasing the federal gas tax exemption for fuel ethanol will step up demand for corn even more and should further improve prices.

The increased demand for fuel ethanol will also help Minnesota's growing ethanol industry, particularly two fuel ethanol plants here: the Minnesota Alcohol Project in Mankato, which will have a yearly production capacity of 20 million gallons, and the proposed Ashland project in Willmar, with a capacity of 80 million gallons. Production on this scale could create a market for another 35 million bushels of Minnesota corn each year, and raise corn prices by another five to ten cents per bushel.

Another factor increasing interest in fuel ethanol is my recent proposal to ban most uses of leaded gasoline by 1988. (Under that bill leaded gas would still be available for farm equipment, lawnmowers, antique cars and other vehicles that must use it.) Fuel ethanol can be the environmentally-sound replacement for lead in gas.

Many members of Congress share my concern about the health hazard posed by leaded gasoline, especially for young children in urban areas. The airborne lead emissions from leaded gas can get into a child's bloodstream and cause irreparable damage to the nervous system. According to recent studies, airborne lead from gas fumes has actually reduced the IQs of children in cities.

Lead is added to gas to increase its octane rating and improve engine performance. Fuel ethanol can do the same thing. When leaded gas is banned — and it seems inevitable that it will be banned — fuel ethanol can fill the "octane gap" without the hazards of airborne lead. Lead emissions already have affected the blood of at least 1.5 million children. The need to act is imperative.

In short, tax incentives for producing fuel ethanol provide a "triple-whammy" — benefits for our farm economy, for our energy independence and national security, and for our environment and health. That's an unbeatable return on the taxpayer's dollar.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

June's rotten fish award goes to the T.R.F. Jaycees and their shoddy completion of the sandbox fill. I placed my order the first day the notice was in the media.

After my kids tried waiting patiently for two week, I finally called again to have the Jaycee say, "I hauled sand for six nights and I'm sick of it," — basically saying it was my tough luck that we weren't getting any sand.

If there were orders that were lost or misplaced, there should have been publicity to that effect and we should have had the opportunity to contact them again. I have always had the greatest respect and admiration for their organization, but now they'll have to earn it back. Come on, guys, if you're going to do it — do it right, or don't bother!

IN SPITE OF steady rain that made the job just a little uncomfortable, members of the Happy Acres 4-H club completed the initial step of their Community Pride project on Monday, by planting six flower beds at Oakland Park nursing home and the Pennington county fairgrounds. They intend to keep the project current by weeding and maintaining the beds through the summer. Among those working on the project were: (from left) Tony Mapes, Tammy Alberg, Kerry Torkelson, Lisa Rahn, Loralee Iverson, Erica Alberg, Lorie Mostrom, Scott Mostrom, adult leader Kathy Alberg, and junior assistant Desirae Alberg. Plants were donated by the Horseshoe Gardens nursery in Thief River Falls.

The Station Northwestern Minnesota Depends On.

Considering Their Short Distance Rates, No Wonder They Call Themselves Long Distance Phone Companies.

Cost of a 6-minute call at Day Rates excluding tax.

| Distance of call | NWB | MCI | Sprint | Sharecom |
| 20 miles | .65 | 1.26 | 1.37 | 2.19 |
| 30 miles | 1.02 | 1.62 | 1.74 | 2.19 |
| 40 miles | 1.40 | 1.62 | 1.74 | 2.19 |

MCI rates are based on FCC Tariff #1. Sprint rates are based on FCC Tariff #11. Sharecom rates in effect as of 4-84. NWB rates are based on the intrastate tariff in Minnesota. Bell Zone calls that cross state lines are billed at a higher interstate rate.

If you're thinking about using one of those new long distance phone companies to place short long distance calls, there's a good chance that you'll pay more than you should.

You need to know about something called a Bell™ Zone. It's sometimes referred to as a Local Access and Transport Area (LATA) and it's where Northwestern Bell can provide your long distance service.

In the process, we can often save you money. As you can see from the chart, our rates are competitive. More importantly, you'll get what you pay for—clean, clear connections on every call. Or your money back.*

And, of course, our long distance service offers calling ease that is second to none. Simply dial "1" plus the number. Include the Area Code only if it's different from your own.

So the next time you think about using one of those other long distance phone companies, consider where you're calling. If it's in your Bell Zone, we could save you money.

1+ Northwestern Bell

*If you reach a wrong number, have a poor connection or any other problem, hang up and dial "0" right away. The Operator will arrange for the proper credit on your bill.

Thief River Falls girls established eight outdoor and nine indoor school records during the recently-completed 1984 high school track season, it was reported by Tom Schafer, the Prowlers' head coach.

Miscellaneous

+ A fund-raising effort for Erick Wigand netted him $2,826 from the community to help finance the Crookston shooter who left Sunday to compete in the United States Olympic trapshooting team trials in California. He earned the honor of vying for a spot on the Olympic team at a qualifying shoot in Anoka April 26-27, but was short of the needed funds to make the trip to California. The Crookston community responded with assistance as they did last winter in helping send the University of Minnesota-Crookston hockey team to Lake Placid, N.Y. for the NJCAA national tournament. A radiothon on KROX helped reach the $2,350 goal during a 5½-hour broadcast Wednesday, and the Crookston Eagles Aerie 873 added a $300 contribution that lifted the total to $2,826.

+ Middle River basketball coach Eldon Sparby faces the prospects of losing one of the top high school players in the area — 6-2 center Tom Neumann — with the announcement that his father, Curt Neumann, president of First National Bank in Middle River, has announced his intention to leave the community because of a committment to the operation of the Citizen's State Bank in Barrett, just south of Fergus Falls. Jon Neumann was a 1,000-point scorer for the Skippers before playing two years of community college basketball first at Lake Region of Devils Lake, N.D., and last year at Northland in Thief River Falls. He will attend Mayville State this fall. Tom was a sophomore this past year as he played football, basketball and baseball for the Skippers.

+ Billy Christian of Warroad, a star on the 1960 Gold Medal-winning United States Olympic hockey team and a familiar figure in hockey circles from the youth level through the professional ranks, has been named to the United States Hockey Hall of Fame. Christian, whose son David was a member of the 1980 Gold Medal-winning U.S. Olympic hockey team, along with the Chicago Black Hawks president William Wirtz, will be inducted into the Hall of Fame in Eveleth during ceremonies in October. Christian joins already-inducted Cal Marvin as the second Warroad representative to be enshrined at the Hall of Fame.

+ Region 8A golfers certainly did themselves proud at the 1984 Minnesota state high school Class A golf meet last week in St. Cloud. Jeannie Gibson of Cass Lake was the winner in the girls' portion of the tournament with a 169 and a one-stroke victory over Michelle Woolack of Hermantown, while Chris Daniels of Fosston was the runner-up in the boys' portion of the meet with a 150, one shot behind winner Dave Bratland of St. Anthony. In addition, Jodi Krafka of Alexandria gave Region 8AA an individual winner in the Class AA girls meet.

Roseau, Apollo Win 8A, 8AA Playoffs

Roseau won the Region 8A title and St. Cloud Apollo took the Region 8AA crown in weather-interrupted high school baseball tournaments played last week.

Region 8A title game, originally scheduled for Wednesday at Red Lake Falls, was reset to Thursday because of rain as Roseau edged Blackduck 7-6.

Semifinals were played last Tuesday as Roseau beat Laporte 6-4 and Blackduck shut out Lake of the Woods 5-0.

Meanwhile, the Region 8AA finals at Mattson Field in Moorhead met rain Wednesday, Thursday and Friday before the game was finally played Saturday afternoon as Apollo rallied from a 6-2 deficit to beat host Moorhead 10-8.

Those finalists were named the week before when Moorhead out-scored Thief River Falls 14-7 in the North Sub-Region 8AA title game and Apollo knocked off St. Cloud rival Tech 5-2 in the South Sub-Region 8AA championship game.

State tournaments will be played at two sites this week. The Class AA games will be played Tuesday and Wednesday at Municipal Stadium in St. Paul, while the Class A games will be played Thursday and Friday at Municipal Stadium in St. Cloud.

Tuesday's Class AA quarterfinals will find 4AA Anoka (15-6) vs. 7AA Grand Rapids (18-1) at 10 a.m.; 3AA St. Paul Cretin (17-4) vs. 8AA St. Cloud Apollo (14-6) at 12:30 p.m.; 1AA Rochester Mayo (16-6) vs. 2AA New Ulm (17-3) at 4:30 p.m.; and 5AA Holy Angles Academy of Richfield (18-4) vs. 6AA Hopkins (13-9) at 7 p.m.

TRF Legion Baseball Opener Is Delayed

Thief River Falls was 0-for-3 in the first week of the 1984 American Legion baseball season.

No, Post 117 didn't actually lose three times, but games against Roseau and Detroit Lakes were postponed, setting the start of the schedule back a week.

A single Northwest League game at Roseau Thursday was postponed because the Rams have extended their high school season into this week's Class A state tournament in St. Cloud.

Wet grounds then forced postponement of a scheduled Ninth District doubleheader against Detroit Lakes Saturday on the fairgrounds diamond here.

Thief River Falls will try to kick off its season Tuesday with a 7 p.m. Northwest League game against Warroad on the fairgrounds diamond. That Detroit Lakes doubleheader has been restructured into a single 7 p.m. meeting here Thursday.

Meanwhile, the Thief River Falls Bombers, Post 117's B team, also had their 1984 season delayed by the wet weather that wiped out a scheduled doubleheader at Hallock Thursday. They will host Warroad Tuesday in the second half of a split doubleheader against the visitors, with game time set for appxoimately 8:30 p.m. on the fairgrounds diamond.

It'll be a busy week for the Bombers, who will host the East Grand Forks VFW Wednesday in at 6 p.m. doubleheader and they play host to an invitational tournament Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Wildlife Group Participates In Fishing Week

Fish and Wildlife Service officially participated in National Fishing Week, June 3-10, Fish and Wildlife Service Director Robert A. Jantzen announced. National Fishing Week, organized in 1979 by the American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association, is designed to promote public recognition of the value of our nation's fishery resources.

"We in the Fish and Wildlife Service are delighted to participate in this worthwhile effort," Jantzen said. "National Fishing Week provides an excellent opportunity to remind everyone of the important economic, cultural and recreational contributions our sport and commercial fisheries have made to our nation. At the same time, the week should serve to remind us that the future health and productivity of our fisheries depends on effective conservation and management. Fish not only provide sources of food and opportunities for recreation, but also serve as valuable indicators of the overall quality of the environment."

Fish and Wildlife Service has a national role in research and restoration efforts on behalf of such species as Atlantic and Pacific salmons, striped bass and lake trout. Additionally, the FWS has the lead responsibility for the conservation and recovery of federally listed endangered fishes.

National Fishing Week observances were held at many Fish and Wildlife Service facilities across the country — including national fish hatcheries, national wildlife refuges and fishery research laboratories.

National Fishing Week is sponsored by the American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association, with the cooperation of the American Fisheries Society, Sport Fishing Institute, the National Marine Fisheries Service and other conservation organizations.

List Roster In NBA-Olympics Game At Dome

Twelve players have been named to the NBA All-Star basketball team that will take on the 1984 United States Olympic team at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome on Sunday, July 1 at 11:30 a.m.

Jim Dutcher, University of Minnesota basketball coach who will head the NBA All-Star delegation, indicated this week that a full roster had been named, and that it would include seven former Golden Gophers.

That nucleus will include Kevin McHale of the Boston Celtics, Randy Breuer of the Milwaukee Bucks, Mark Olberding of the Kansas City Kings, Ray Williams and Trent Tucker of the New York Knicks, Mychal Thompson of the Portland Trailblazers and Jim Brewer who previously played with Cleveland, Detroit and Los Angeles and competed in Italy this past season.

Rounding out the squad will be Darryl Walker of the New York Knicks, Alex English of the Denver Nuggest, Dan Roundfield of the Atlanta Hawks, Jack Sikma of the Seattle Supersonics and Maurice Cheeks of the Philadelphia 76'ers.

"The only question remaining on the NBA All-Star roster," Dutcher said, "is the physical condition of Mychal Thompson. If his elbow has not recovered from surgery, we would hope to fill his spot with Chris Engler who played at Minnesota and Wyoming and now is with the Golden State Warriors."

Golden Gopher contributions to the All-Star team appear outstanding. The group will include the top four scorers in University of Minnesota history in Thompson, Breuer, McHale and Tucker.

In addition the U of M will contribute the top three rebounders in Golden Gopher history in Thompson, McHale and Brewer, and the University of Minnesota's top career assist man in Williams.

Tickets for the game, one of eight pre-Olympic games being played by Coach Bobby Knight's U.S. squad, currently are on sale for $20, $10, $7 and $5 through the U of M Athletic Ticket office in the Bierman Building, through Donald's Ticket Office, by mail or by phone at (612) 333-5577.

Mail orders will be filled according to date received through Midwest Ticket Corporation, PO 2205, Loop Station, Minneapolis, MN 55402. Telephone orders will be charged and filled in the order received.

Wildlife Group Has Endangered Listing

Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has published a notice of review that identifies over 1,000 species of invertebrate animals as candidates for possible addition to the U.S. list of endangered and threatened species. The notice, published in the May 22, 1984, Federal Register, is the first such candidate list drawn up for invertebrates. Publication of the candidate notice does not constitute formal proposal of the species for addition to the endangered species list, however.

Invertebrates are animals without backbones and include species such as mollusks, insects, sponges, spiders and shellfish. Fifty-one invertebrate species are currently listed as endangered or threatned. The number of the invertebrate species worldwide is estimated to number several million. In contrast, nearly 20,000 vertebrate and 200,000 plant species are throught to exist.

Endangered Species Act directs the Fish and Wildlife Service to review the status of species when scientific evidence indicates they may be endangered. To obtain that data, the FWS has periodically compiled candidate lists as a tool to identify species for which formal listing may be justified. Candidate lists have been compiled for plants and vertebrates in the past.

Notice mentions all known invertebrate species native to the United States that may warrant protection under the Endangered Species Act, based upon the best available data, as well as those species for which listing could be considered once more conclusive data becomes available.

Service has assigned different levels of status to the species on the candidate list, based on nearly three years of data collection and review. Of the 1,000 invertebrates, the FWS considers 35 species as meriting formal listing based on existing biological information.

Of the remainder, the FWS feels that 841 species could be proposed for listing only if additional information about their status and biological vulnerability becomes available. A separate category of 141 invertebrates has been compiled to include those species whose extinction is suspected, or that do not meet criteria for listing under the Act. Service, however, is soliciting any additional data from the scientific community that might support a change in status for these latter species.

Candidate list of invertebrates is dominated by 335 species whose habitat is limited to the unique ecosystems of the Hawaiian Islands. These, and many other invertebrates on the list, represent animals that have evolved in very specialized areas — caves, windswept sand dunes and isolated springs, for example. These restricted habitats, in many cases, make the species that much more vulnerable to natural or man-made disruptions.

Candidate species receive no protection under the Endangered Species Act. They must first be proposed for addition to the endangered and threatened species list and undergo an extensive public comment and review process before formal protections are extended to them. Identification of candidates encourages other federal, state, local and private agencies to consider such species in their land management activities, however.

Fish and Wildlife Service has invited the submission of public comments and additional scientific data on its May 22, 1984, Federal Register notice. That information can be sent to the Director (OES), U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240. Available biological information on individual candidate species can be obtained from endangered species coordinators in FWS regional offices, located in the section of the country where the species are found (Portland, Oregon; Albuquerque, New Mexico; Denver, Colorado; Twin Cities, Minnesota; Atlanta, Georgia; Newton Corner, Massachusetts; and Anchorage, Alaska.).

Violations Of FWS Guidelines Have Penalties

Dale R. Kannegiesser, 46, of rural Hancock, Minnesota pleaded guilty in federal court in St. Paul to charges stemming from a violation of a wetland protection easement with the U.S. Department of Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS).

United States Magistrate Brian P. Short ordered Kannegiesser to pay a $500 fine and placed him on two years supervised probation. Short suspended imposition of further sentencing pending successful completion of probation. The violation carries a maximum six-month jail term and the $500 fine.

Kannegiesser had illegally placed over 1,500 cubic yards of fill into a wetland to facilitate the operation of a center-pivot irrigation system on his Pope county property. Short ordered Kannegiesser to remove this fill material by November 1, 1984, as a condition of his probation.

FWS had earlier given Kannegiesser numerous opportunities to voluntarily restore the damaged wetlands, but he repeatedly refused, which resulted in the filing of the federal charges.

Since the early 1960's, the FWS has been acquring wetlands in western Minnesota through an outright purchase of these areas or through an easement agreement with landowners. At that time it was recognized by Congress that wetlands are rapidly disappearing due to encroachment of expanding society. Wetlands serve all citizens as well as wildlife. They recharge ground water supplies and reduce downstream flooding as well as provide essential wildlife habitat.

Wetland easement offers landowners a one-time cash payment so they will not drain, fill, or burn the wetlands on their acreage. The easement agreements are perpetual regardless of any ownership change, and public access to these areas is at the landowner's discretion.

Kevin O'Brien, supervisory special agent for FWS law enforcement activities in Minnesota states, "Waterfowl populations cannot sustain the acute loss of wetlands in the prairie pothole regions of Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is serious about preserving wetlands, and we're serious about our cooperative efforts with the U.S. Department of Justice to enforce wetland easement violations throughout this region. Such violations have ranged from simple rock dumping into wetlands and using plow furrow ditches to drain areas, to extensive tiling systems and scraper ditches."

Norrel Wallace, supervisor for the FWS's Division of Wetland Management in Fergus Falls, notes that, "our wetland easement program continues to be very popular. A day doesn't pass that folks don't call or stop by our office offering to sell wetland easements to FWS. Available funding is the only limit to the number of wetlands we are able to preserve through this program. There are many more willing sellers than we can accommodate."

FWS wetland program covers 28 counties in Minnesota and entails 1,428 easements which protect 43,600 acres of wetlands. The majority of these easements are in Big Stone, Douglas, Pope and Otter Tail counties.

New Fishing Regulations Are In Effect

Anglers have been reminded by the Department of Natural Resources of new regulations when fishing the waters forming the Minnesota-Canadian boundary.

Anglers may take, possess, and transport no more than one legal limit of fish from the Minnesota-Canadian boundary waters, regardless of licenses.

Fred Hammer, Director of Enforcement, said anglers failing to comply with the fish transportation requirements risk arrest.

"Recent DNR roadchecks have resulted in numerous citations for failure to comply with the transportation requirements," he said.

Regulations are found on page 16 of the "1984 Minnesota Fishing Regulations."

Additional cost would be $2,000.00. No action was taken at this time on the full service contract.

Handbell Choir Concert Is Set For Wednesday

United Methodist church high school bell choir will be giving a free, public handbell concert at 7 p.m. Wednesday at United Methodist church in Thief River Falls. In addition to bell music, there will be dramatic readings and a special arrangement for handbells, trumpet and organ.

Bell choir is under direction of Anthony Ricci and has 12 members with a combined total of 79 years of musical training. Eight of the 12 have been in the choir for four years. Choir consists of seniors Sheila Duke, Lori Dusek and Shelly Minar; junior Lori Jorgenson; sophomores Bill Carlson, Jim Van Schaick, Lori Stocks, Sue Pfeifer, Laura Dunning, Jennifer Westlin and Kerri Jenson; and freshman Vikki Weigand. Ten of the ringers are members of United Methodist church while two come from other churches.

They practice once a week throughout the year and perform bi-monthly in the church service. However, in order to prepare for a special concert like this one, the ringers have put in many extra hours of practice. Other performances outside the church include a Lincoln high school Christmas concert, two World Day of Prayer services, and for several civic organizations.

As a highlight this year, the handbell choir will be participating in the Area VII festival of the American guild of English handbell ringers, which will be held at the University of Wisconsin, River Falls campus. This will be a three-day seminar culminating with a mass choir concert with over 50 bell choirs expected to participate. While returning from Wisconsin the choir will perform at worship services of Faith United Methodist church, Sleepy Eye, and New Life Fellowship, Austin.

Music to be performed for the concert will be selected from that prepared for the Area VII festival, which includes: "Simple Gifts", "Pick a Winner" (played with mallets), "Introduction and Allegro", "Les Cloches d'Or", "Festival Carillon and Fanfare", "Toccata in A minor", "Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken" (for handbells, organ and trumpet), and "O God, Beneath Your Guiding Hand."

Interwoven with the bell music will be dramatic readings by Gerry Stocks and Steve Anderson of conversations with God, as experienced and written down by Ginny Anderson of Thief River Falls. Entitled "The Prison", "Begging Your Pardon", and "Why Do I?", these dialogues show God as someone real and reachable, with answers to such questions as "How can I feel joyful and loved instead of sad and miserable?", and "Why is it so hard to pray?"

More Highway Funding Will Help Counties

Through actions of the 1984 legislature, more money is available for highway and road repairs locally, according to State. Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls.

The fiscal increases in highway aid for each county in the state are substantial. In 1984 Marshall county will receive $2,083,956 in highway funds, but because of the excise tax transfer, it will receive an addition, $161,302 in 1985; Pennington county will receive $961,654 in 1984 and an additional $74,428 in 1985; and Red Lake county will receive $843,186 in 1984 and $65,364 in 1985.

Sparby explained that the transfer of state motor vehicle excise revenue from the general fund to a special highway fund will begin July 1 of this year. The provision was part of the major appropriations bill.

"This transfer is a measure many of us in rural communities have promoted for a long time," Sparby said. "But once we had other lawmakers agreeing with us, the state fell short on general fund money because of the recession, so the transfer was stalled.

"Now that the state's budget is back in balance and revenue projections are so positive, we can begin the transfer and loosen up needed money for our roads."

The new law authorizes the transfer of 25 per cent of the motor vehicle excise taxes into the highway user distribution fund and a transit development fund. The 25 per cent level will continue through 1985 and in 1986 it will increase to 50 per cent.

The total dollars generated by the 25 per cent transfer is around $50 million, according to Sparby. The highway distribution fund will receive about $37.5 million of the money.

A formula in the constitution dictates the distribution of this money to 62 per cent for state highway systems, 29 per cent to county systems, and nine per cent for local roads," Sparby said.

The proposed Summer Youth Employment Opportunity Wage applies to youth under the age of 22, from May 1 to September 30, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

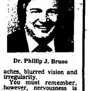
Nerves, Nerves, Nerves . . . Maybe That's Your Problem

BY DR. PHILLIP J. BRUNO

Doctor of Chiropractic



Dr. Phillip J. Bruno

"Your trouble is nerves, just nerves, that's all." many have been told.

But your nerves are too important to your body to be dismissed so easily.

Every function taking place in your body is under control of the nerve system.

A healthy nervous system gives you strength and energy for the day's work. It brushes aside sickness. It shrugs off ordinary aches and pains. It fights off the usual deterioration of "middle age." All in all, it gives you that "isn't-it-great-to-be-alive" feeling day after glorious day.

And an unhealthy nervous system? That's a different story, one that can be titled NERVOUSNESS.

While patients may complain that they are easily upset, often they cannot put into words what they mean by feeling nervous.

To the patient, feeling nervous can be an unpleasant, sometimes frightening experience making it difficult to work or concentrate and causing anxiety and apprehension. Often they will be restless, fidgety, and easily startled. They may display mannerisms such as nailbiting, and be irritable, show worry or act bewildered.

Additionally, there can be palpitations of the heart, gastric distress, headaches, blurred vision and irregularity.

You must remember, however, nervousness is not a disease in itself. It is symptomatic or a series of symptoms of some physical problem in the body.

Left uncorrected, nervousness can cause a multitude of serious chronic conditions. And virtually all major psychotic disorders begin with the symptoms of nervousness.

I sincerely hope that those people who find a relationship between the problems I've described and their own condition will look to the Doctor of Chiropractic for help.

Garbage Issue Is Passed To County

Four-hour meeting of the Thief River Falls city council on Monday evening was long on discussion, but most of the more controversial topics were delayed or referred to other bodies for action or recommendations.

Rick Nordhagen of Future Fuels Inc. requested contracts obligating the city to furnish its garbage to a recycling plant planned by the company. He explained that the contracts are required as part of application for grant and low-interest loan money from the Minnesota waste management board. Although council members expressed support for the effort and intent to contract with the company, City Attorney Bob Wurst suggested that wording of the papers should be clarified. The matter was referred to him for further study.

Council was also advised that the waste management board was requiring that the grant application be made in the name of a local government body, requiring that a full faith and credit be pledged for repayment of loan of $482,000 and a grant of $300,000 if the company failed.

Again, the council reacted favorably, with Alderman Ken Murphy commenting that the only way the company could fail is if the city stopped generating garbage. He noted that alternative methods of disposal were so costly that the company could give away fuel briquets which it will manufacture from waste paper and still break even. Intent of a proposed contract would be for the Nordhagens to manage the plant, paying off the loan from profits and eventually purchasing sole rights to the business.

However, it was advised by Attorney Wurst that general obligation bonds would have to be issued, requiring a referendum vote. He recommended that matters would be greatly simplified if Pennington county were to "carry the ball," since they have responsibility for management of waste disposal. This would eliminate double taxation for city residents, who will be assessed by the county anyway. No obligations will be incurred until the loans are actually approved by the WMB, which will not be done until they are satisfied that sufficient raw materials and markets for the final products are committed to make the business financially sound.

(In action late Tuesday, the county board approved a resolution authorizing submission of a grant and loan application for the solid waste demonstration project, requiring a commitment of $1,100,000.)

Council also heard a report from Police Chief Ken Froschheiser, regarding an investigation into reported leaks and accidents involving anhydrous ammonia at the Farmers Coop Grain and Seed plant on Dewey Avenue. He noted that concern over the incidents varied among residents in the neighborhood, but recommended some procedural changes to lessen the chances of accidents and vandalism.

Although the mayor asked several times if the council was ready to reissue a permit to allow Farmers Coop to construct an additional 30,000 gallon storage tank on the site, Alderman Ken Murphy noted that he was still concerned about the safety factor, and asked that the matter be referred to the safety council, which is to meet with all of the anhydrous ammonia dealers in the city, in an attempt to set up safety guidelines which would apply to all of them.

Ask Pictures For New Folden Centennial

Pictures of interest for the New Folden township centennial celebration are being sought by the committee planning the July 4 celebration. Wedding, school and confirmation pictures or others of public interest are requested.

The pictures will be displayed July 3 and 4 beginning at 3:30 p.m. each day and attendants will be on duty to safeguard the photos. More information is available by calling 874-1865, 874-4171 or 874-3900 at Newfolden.

THRIFTY SCOUT Shawn Heinze, who set up a lawn mowing service to earn money to go camping at Philmont Scout ranch in Cimarron, NM, left today to begin the 17-day experience with other scouts from northern Minnesota and North Dakota. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Art Heinze, Shawn mows 15 lawns on a regular basis and also earned money by having a paper route, raking lawns and doing other yard work.

Shawn Heinze Earns Way To Philmont Ranch

Shawn Heinze, son of Mr. and Mrs. Art Heinze and a First Class scout in Troop 199, sponsored by St. John Lutheran church in Thief River Falls, left today for Philmont Scout ranch in Cimarron, NM. Jim Fisher is scoutmaster for Troop 199.

Shawn is joining other scouts from throughout northern Minnesota and North Dakota as part of a councilwide troop.

Philmont Scout ranch was given to the Boy Scouts of America in 1938 by Waite Phillips, who owned Phillips 66 Oil company. Phillips believed in sharing his wealth with others and donated his 35,000-acre ranch to the Boy Scouts of America as a high adventure national wilderness camping area to help promote physical fitness and character building. Shawn will be one of 6,000 boys and leaders who annually participate in Philmont's exciting and challenging outdoor experience.

The ninth point of the "scout law" is "A Scout Is Thrifty". Shawn earned his own way to and from Philmont totally on his own by having a paper route, mowing and raking lawns and doing various yardwork for different people in his neighborhood. After making the decision to go to Philmont last fall, Shawn purchased his own lawn mower and has his own lawn mowing service. He currently mows 15 lawns on a regular basis.

The 17-day trip will include camping, touring the Black Hills, staying at two different air force bases, and 10 days of high adventure back-packing in the New Mexico mountains. Shawn will have the opportunity to participate in numerous scout skills such as hiking, cooking, backpacking, rifle shooting, fly tying, fishing, burro packing and racing and panning for gold.

Gordon Przybylski, a former scout executive from Thief River Falls, will be the leader for the councilwide crew. Several scouts from Thief River Falls are now making plans to attend Philmont next year.

Greg Donarski Arrested After House Search

Gregory Lynn Donarski, 30, made his first appearance in Pennington county court Tuesday and was bound over to district court on charges of possession of more than 1.5 ounces of marijuana and possession with intent to sell.

Donarski was arrested following a search of his residence at 619 Markley av. S. Monday evening by the Pennington county sheriff's department, Thief River Falls police department and state bureau of criminal apprehension. Approximately one and one-half pounds of marijuana was confiscated in the search.

Bond was set Tuesday at $1,000 and Donarski was being held in the Pennington county law enforcement center as of press time Wednesday. His first appearance in district court was set for July 2.

WAITING AND WINNING provides two different expressions for LaRae Carlson of Salol, crowned Northwest Dairy princess Tuesday in Thief River Falls. Awaiting the decision of the judges she appeared pensive, but wearing the crown brought on added excitement and happiness.

School Board To Offer Bond Issue Sept. 18

In a unanimous decision at its regular meeting this morning at 7 a.m. the Thief River Falls board of education approved a school bond election to be conducted September 18 for an addition and improvements to Lincoln senior high school.

The issue will be presented to the voters as a series of alternatives, each providing for more extensive work and therefore costing more money.

First alternative will be for an addition and remodeling of Lincoln high school to provide approximately 75,000 more square feet of space and removal of the 1910 and 1917 portions of the school which are presently closed under fire marshal's order. Cost of this proposal, which would still leave industrial arts classes at the vocational center, is projected at $5,975,000.

The second alternative would raise the cost to an estimated $6,363,800 and would provide for a third floor shell on the new addition which could be completed inside at a later date.

Final alternative would be a total package of $8,497,800 which would complete the third story and bring all of the high school programs back within the single complex. All of the construction in any of the alternatives would be done on the present Lincoln high school site.

Mylo Carlson Herd Tops In County DHIA

Jerry Hampe and Sonia Iverson, supervisors of the Pennington county dairy herd improvement association, report that Mylo Carlson had the top herd in the association for both March and April.

In March, Carlson's herd produced an average of 62.9 pounds of milk and 2.42 pounds of butterfat; followed by Don Fulton, 58.8 and 2.14; Duane Krohn, 56.3 and 2.18; Walter Bros., 51.9 and 1.96; Duane Vatsaas, 51.3 and 1.82; Lyle Swanson, 50.7 and 1.95; Gene Nelson, 50.6 and 1.89; Steve Gast, 48.3 and 1.83; Arden Lundeen, 47.0 and 1.80; and Dale Rupprecht, 46.6 and 2.01.

In April, Carlson's herd produced an average of 57.3 pounds of milk and 2.19 pounds of butterfat; followed by Walter Bros., 53.6 and 2.21; Don Fulton, 53.2 and 2.07; Darrow Lundeen and Sons, 51.2 and 1.99; Duane Vatsaas, 49.6 and 1.86; Steve Gast, 49.7 and 1.84; Lyle Swanson, 49.4 and 1.93; Gene Nelson, 48.0 and 1.86; Merle and Perry Lundeen, 48.0 and 1.80; and Orlan and Joel Stolaas, 47.5 and 1.90.

Herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. Amount of milk or butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows. This gives the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for the month. If too many dry cows are included in the herd, the average for the month may be low, even though the cows which are milking are high producers.

Trinity Church Calls Interim Pastor Tuesday

Trinity Lutheran church council voted at its regular meeting Tuesday evening to accept the resignation of Rev. Berton Hushagen effective July 15 and to issue an interim letter of call to Rev. Truman Daniels of Puposky.

Rev. Daniels has most recently been serving Vukku and Foxhome Lutheran churches at Foxhome and will conduct his first services as interim pastor at Trinity on Sunday, June 24. Conducting services and delivering the sermon this Sunday will be Dr. James Bailey, chairman of the religion department at Concordia college in Moorhead.

Trinity will begin its summer series of drive-in services at the Satellite Drive-in Theatre this Sunday at 8:30 a.m. Services at 10:30 a.m. will be conducted at the church.

The council Tuesday evening also accepted resignations from several staff and council members. In attendance at the meeting were Bishop Gilbert Lee and Rev. Milan Davig of the Northern Minnesota district office in Moorhead.

LaRae Carlson Captures Double Dairy Day Titles

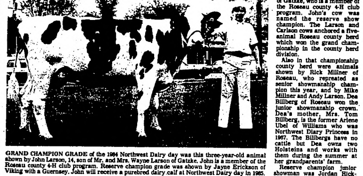
GRAND CHAMPION dairy animal at Northwest Dairy day Tuesday was this nine-year-old purebred Ayrshire owned by LaRae Carlson of Salol and shown by her brother Shannon. The cow won Ayrshire breed championship, overall purebred championship of the show and the top individual award. While LaRae's brother was showing her cow, she was impressing judges at the Northwest Dairy princess contest and was crowned the Region One dairy princess at ceremonies later in the afternoon. LaRae and Shannon are children of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Carlson of Salol.



GRAND CHAMPION GRADE of the 1984 Northwest Dairy day was this three-year-old animal shown by John Larson, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Larson of Gatzke. John is a member of the Roseau county 4-H club program. Reserve champion grade was shown by Jayne Erickson of Viking with a Guernsey. John will receive a purebred dairy calf at Northwest Dairy day in 1985.

JUNIOR SHOWMANSHIP title at Northwest Dairy day Tuesday was won by 13-year-old Dea Billberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Billberg of Roseau, showing this Holstein yearling. Dea's mother, the former Arlene Ubel of Williams, was Northwest Dairy princess in 1967.

Thirty-fifth annual Northwest Dairy day became LaRae Carlson day in Thief River Falls Tuesday when the 18-year-old dairyman's daughter from Salol in Roseau county scored an unprecedented dairy day achievement.

Her participation in the Region One dairy princess competition resulted in her being crowned Northwest Dairy Princess to succeed Lori Olson of Fertile. And while she was involved in princess activities, her younger brother Shannon and other members of the family showed her nine-year-old purebred Ayrshire cow to the grand championship in one of the largest dairy shows here in recent years.

It was the first time that the two top awards of Northwest Dairy day have gone to the same winner in the same year. And to add a little more frosting to the cake, LaRae was selected from among the princess candidates as winner of the Miss Congeniality award.

Runner-up to LaRae, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Carlson, was Tina Scheff, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Scheff of Mahnomen. Second runner-up was Paula Olson, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Olson of East Grand Forks. Honorable mention was given by the judges to Kathleen Merkins, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Merkins of Ada.

Diminutive LaRae is five feet one inch tall, has brown hair and brown eyes, and is a 1984 graduate of Roseau high school. This was her fifth year at Northwest Dairy day where she has won many top ribbons in Ayrshire breed classes. This fall she will be enrolled at the University of Minnesota at Crookston where she will begin her studies in animal science.

Enroute to becoming the overall show champion, LaRae's nine-year-old cow won the Ayrshire aged cow class and Ayrshire breed championship and was named the grand champion purebred of the show. As winner of the champion purebred award, LaRae will win an expense-paid trip to the world dairy exposition at Madison, WI.

Named by judges Johnathon Ydstie and Max Miller of North Dakota as the grand champion grade of the show was a three-year-old Holstein shown by John Larson, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Larson of Gatzke, who is a member of the Roseau county 4-H club program. John's cow was named the reserve show champion. The Larson and Carlson cows anchored a five-animal Roseau county herd which won the grand championship in the county herd division.

Also in that championship county herd were animals shown by Rick Millner of Roseau, who repreated as senior showmanship champion this year, and by Mike Millner and Andy Larson. Dea Billberg of Roseau won the junior showmanship crown. Dea's mother, Mrs. Tom Billberg, is the former Arlene Ubel of Williams who was Northwest Diary Princess in 1967. The Billbergs have no cattle but Dea owns two Holsteins and works with them during the summer at her grandparents' farm.

Reserve champion junior showman was Jordan Hickman of Winger and reserve champion senior showman was Kyle Olson of East Grand Forks. Reserve champion purebred was shown by Loretta Visser of Gary with a Holstein and reserve champion grade by Jayne Erickson of Viking with a Guernsey. Loretta Visser also had the champion individual herd of the show, consisting of three animals, including the Holstein breed champion.

Jayne Erickson was named winner of the Stuart McLeod award by accumulating the greatest number of points during the day's judging. The 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Erickson has exhibited 10 years at Northwest Dairy day and was in her last year of competition this year.

Junior champion exhibitor, a new award this year, was Carl Craigmile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Craigmile of Hallock. The award is given to the showman of the top junior yearling calf among all

Sheila Kay Gustafson Weds Wayne G. Johnson

Miss Sheila Kay Gustafson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Gustafson of St. Hilaire, became the bride of Wayne Gordon Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnson, also of St. Hilaire, at a 7:30 p.m., ceremony on April 21, at the Evangelical Covenant church in Thief River Falls.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony were Rev. Don Peres, pastor of the church, and Rev. Les Galland, pastor at Our Saviour's Lutheran church. The traditional wedding march was played by Helen Dahlstrom, organist, and Polly Reed, pianist. During the ceremony, LaRae Franklund, a friend of the bride, sang "Wedding Song," "Evergreen," and "The Lord's Prayer." As a tribute to the bride, the groom sang "Your Love Shines Through."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white taffeta gown styled with a sheer yoke and mandarin collar featuring Schiffli embroiderly, pearls and iridescents. Venice lace appliques enhanced the molded bodice. Her elbow-length Diana sleeves were trimmed with Chantilly lace and satin bows. Adding interest to the bouffant skirt, which flowed into a cathedral length train, were multi-layers of Chantilly lace ruffles forming a peekaboo effect in front and back. Her Chantilly lace headpiece was trimmed with pearls, iridescents and a satin bow. It held a mantilla styled veil of imported bridal illusion, edged with a wide Chantilly lace ruffle. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses, pink Pixie carnations, alstroemeria, sprengeri, leatherleaf, and babies' breath, accented with white lilies.

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Treva Bohm of Loveland, Colo. She wore a dusty rose floor-length gown styled with sweetheart neckline and Diana sleeves trimmed with a bow. She carried a bouquet of white lilies, variegated Pixie carnations, dusty pink alstroemeria and babies' breath tied with pink edged white satin ribbon. Her pearl necklace was a gift from the bride.

Similar attire was worn by the bridesmaids, Charlene Tvedt and Vickie Hesse of Plummer, friends of the bride, and the flower girl, Tiffany Gustafson, St. Hilaire, a niece of the bride.

The rings were carried by Joshua Bohm, Loveland, Colo., a nephew of the bride. Like the groomsmen, he wore a black cutaway jacket, black and gray striped trousers, white shirt, gray vest and ascot tie.

The groom was in all-white attire. His best man was Ron Johnson, a brother. Groomsmen were Troy Gustafson, Loveland, Colo., brother of the bride, and Scott Peterson, St. Hilaire, a friend. Ushers were Blair Gustafson, St. Hilaire, a brother of the bride, and Daryl Fladhammer. Their boutonniers were white carnations and red Sweetheart roses.

Corsages of dusty pink alstroemeria, accented with white satin ribbon, edged in pink, complemented the attire worn by the mothers.

Honor guests were Thea Conklin and Agnes Gustafson, grandmothers of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, grandparents of the groom. Bonnie Fisher and LaRae Franklund were the bride's personal attendants.

Hosts and hostesses at the reception which followed were Warren and Sally Hatteberg, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Alvin and Gladys Fladhammer, uncle and aunt of the groom. Todd and Nancy Gustafson, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, served the punch.

The four-tiered wedding cake with a two-tiered cake on each side, featured a flowing water fountain and two stairways with miniature replicas of the wedding party on the steps. Topping the center cake were a miniature bride and groom.

The cake was cut and served by Ruth Garlock, aunt of the bride, and Marvie Johnson, aunt of the groom. Frances Gustafson and Arlene Schipper, also aunts of the bride and groom, poured coffee.

Waitresses were Robin Delage, Renae Tervo, Tami Delage and Rhonda Delage, friends of the bride. At the gift table were Jodi Gustafson and Julie Garlock, cousins of the bride.

Out-of-state guests were from Newark, IL; Fairbanks, AK; Bismarck, Kenmare and Ayr, ND; Loveland, CO, and Evanston, WY.

For traveling on the wedding trip to Denver, Colo., the bride wore a white polyester skirt with fitted jacket and a red ruffled blouse.

The couple is now at home in St. Hilaire. The bride is a graduate of Pershing high school, Plummer; and the groom is a graduate of Lincoln high school, Thief River Falls. He is employed by the city of St. Hilaire. Photo, Alice Hofstad Photography, Plummer.

Memorial Day Services Held At Satersdal Church

Seminarian Randy Moe was the speaker at the annual Memorial day service held Sunday afternoon, May 27, at the Satersdal church. Moe's meditation, stressing "Our inheritance of faith," was based on I Peter 1:3-5.

In keeping with the theme, the former members of the church and friends, sang the traditional "Faith of Our Fathers," and "Praise to the Lord," with Randy Moe as organist. Arthur Joppru led in Scripture reading and prayer.

It was noted by Loiell Dyrud that the Satersdal congregation is the oldest in Excel township. At the centennial celebration of the township this summer, a service at the church is planned.

The service began with a piano prelude by Lorna Volkerding. Ronald Moe welcomed the group and led the service. The program also included a piano duet by Lars and Maren Dyrud, an organ solo by Lars Dyrud, a reading by Eric Moe, a cello solo by Beth Dalager accompanied by her mother Mrs. Bruce Dalager, an original poem read by Mrs. Steven Anderson, and a duet "Have Thine Own Way," by Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Dalager. The program concluded with prayer and benediction by Rev. Dalager.

In honor of those who died in the service of their country, trumpeter Carla Anderson played "Taps."

A social hour with refreshments followed. During that time, it was noted that extensive work had been done on the cemetery.

For the service, the church had been decorated with United States flags and spring flowers by Mrs. Eddie Anderson and Mrs. Loiell Dyrud.

Those from out of the area attending the service were from Grand Forks, N.D., Minneapolis, Ada and Dalton.

SIXTEEN CANDIDATES from northwestern Minnesota counties participated Tuesday in the Region One dairy princess contest. Activities were conducted at the Best Western inn with Jane Mackenroth and Ruth Weckwerth in charge. # Sparby Notes Complimentary Time Article

An article in the June 11 issue of Time magazine is the latest recognition that Minnesota is rapidly improving its business climate and recovering from the current recession, said State Representative Wally Sparby.

According to the article, "the state's secret has been a unique coalition of public and private interests that have come together to create jobs."

This, says Time, has helped "Minnesota make a vigorous rebound from the recent recession despite continuing problems in the state's farm sector."

"The article is very good news," said Sparby. "I think it shows that the legislature's efforts over the past two years to stimulate business growth have been successful."

Some of the legislature's efforts include tax cuts for businesses and individuals, the establishment of the Minnesota trade office to promote foreign trade, and assistance to new and small businesses.

One plan to assist small business mentioned in the Time article is the provision allowing tax breaks to big companies which sell, license or lease technology to small businesses.

"I think we have really turned the corner in the development of high-tech industry," said Sparby. "As the article mentions, we are one of the fastest growing high-tech areas outside of the Silicon Valley in California.

"I am glad that we have finally gotten some recognition for what we have accomplished, especially after some negative comments about the business climate in recent months. I expect our efforts to stimulate business growth will continue into next legislative session," he added.

GUEST SPEAKER at the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at the city auditorium meeting room in Thief River Falls will be Barry E. Schoder. Special music will be provided by John Peterson of Detroit Lakes.

EGF Man Pled Guilty To Tax Evasion

Ronald D. Weekley, 49, East Grand Forks, has pled guilty to one count of federal income tax evasion before Senior U.S. District Court Judge Edward J. Devitt in St. Paul.

In his court appearance, Weekley said that for 1977 he reported about $5,000 of taxable income when he should have reported at least $20,000 more, giving him a total of about $25,000 for the year. Weekley said he is in the auto salvage business, buys old cars, sells some of them for parts and repairs others.

As part of the plea agreement, Weekley could receive a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Weekley was charged with federal income tax evasion for 1977 and 1978 on April 4. He pled not guilty to both counts on April 23.

U.S. Attorney James M. Rosenbaum said according to the indictment that Weekley reported joint tax table income of $17,217 and paid taxes of $147.00 for the two years, when he knew the income and taxes he and his wife had were substantially in excess of those figures.

As part of the plea agreement, the remaining count of income tax evasion will be dismissed at the time of sentencing. Judge Devitt has ordered a pre-sentence investigation.

WIN Program Finds Jobs And Cuts Costs

Work Incentive (WIN) program helped find jobs for 2,816 Minnesota welfare recipients during the six-month period ending March 31, Barbara Beerhalter, commissioner of the Minnesota department of economic security, announced.

This represents an increase of 1,200 jobs over the same period of a year ago, Beerhalter said.

Total of 10,900 individuals were registered for the state WIN program between October 1, 1983 and March 31, 1984. As of March 31, there were 23,500 WIN registrants.

WIN is a federal program which helps persons receiving aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) to become gainfully employed, reducing or eliminating their dependence on public welfare. The program also provides vocational training and other job-related services.

WIN registrants had an average starting wage of $5.18 per hour. According to department records, approximately 80 per cent of the registrants who entered employment were employed 30 days later.

Grant reductions to WIN participants also lowered public expenditures for Medicaid and food stamps, Bruce Netland, state WIN manager, said. In addition, state and federal governments gained revenue through income taxes paid by employed WIN registrants, Netland added.

In Minnesota, the WIN program is jointly operated by the Minnesota department of economic security, through its Job service offices, and the Minnesota department of human services through county welfare agencies. More than 85 per cent of the state's AFDC recipients live in the 27 counties served by the Minnesota WIN program.

Health Agency Award Granted Hospice Group

Northland Community Hospice, Thief River Falls, has been awarded a $529 grant by Agassiz Health Systems Agency to assist in establishing a resource center for volunteers, families, physicians, nurses, clergy and social workers.

Award will allow purchase of materials such as books, cassette tapes and a tape recorder for use in the hospice program. Northland Community Hospice provides support for terminally ill people and their family members in Pennington, Red Lake, Marshall, Kittson and Roseau counties.

Agassiz Health Systems Agency is responsible for health planning in 22 counties of Northwest Minnesota and Northeast North Dakota, and has provided funds for local community groups to undertake health-related projects for two years now.

Grant applications were requested to address four specific health areas: adolescent-young adult problems; community resources for the elderly-disabled; promoting health and independence; accident prevention-citizen involvement in emergency medical services; and coordination-sharing of community health related services.

More than 40 groups presented projects for Agassiz Health Systems Agency consideration. In each case, the applying group relied on volunteer participation and-or its own resources for part of its project, requesting Agassiz funds for educational materials, supplies, travel and program development.

Agassiz board volunteers from this area include: Dr. Ernest Thorsgard, MD., Steven Keogh, D.C., and Charles Richards, all of Thief River Falls; Joann Thibert, Red Lake Falls; Jerry Peak and Hal Lund, DDS., Karlstad; Gordon Sommers and Karen Lubarski, Warren; and David Hagen, Roseau.

Peter Honl Is Named "Artist Of The Month"

(Thief River Falls community arts council features and area artist each month, whose work is placed on public display for that month. Individuals who would like to suggest an artist to be featured in this program should contact the arts council by calling 681-2845.)

June's "Artist of the Month" is Peter Honl of Roseau, an avid photographer who has won many awards in amateur photography contests. In fact, he won the grand championship in the 1984 Northland nature photography contest, which was just recently completed in Thief River Falls.

An exhibit in the display case at Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls will feature Peter's prize winning photograph and two other examples of his work through the month of June.

Peter is a partner in the Honl Bakery in Roseau, where he works full time, but says he got interested in photography about five years ago when he bought a camera. "I haven't been able to put it down since," he adds, noting that once he realized how interested he had become in his hobby, he also decided to do his own darkroom work.

Honl encourages others to try photography, noting that entering contests is a good way to learn from the experiences of other photographers. His advice to people interested in getting started in photography is to buy a 35 mm camera, making sure that it has manual controls. "You learn so much when you work your own controls, much more than you do with an automatic."

Services Held For Mrs. Mary Gonsorowski

Mrs. Mary Gonsorowski, 82, of Argyle, mother of Hubert and Conrad Gonsorowski of this city, died June 5 at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls.

Funeral services for Mary Gonsorowski were held Thursday, June 7, at 10:00 a.m., at the St. Rose of Lima Catholic church in Argyle. Rev. Robert Bester officiated with Rev. Frank Reid and Rev. James Bernauer as concelebrants. At the prayer service, the evening before, the Polish National Alliance choir provided the special music. Interment was in the St. Rose cemetery at Argyle.

Honorary pallbearers were Leona Hammerback, Helen Bordenkircher, Clara Engen, Martha Przybylski, Rose Stoltman, Dorothy Riopelle, Kathy Riopelle and Irene Yutrzenka.

Serving as active pallbearers were Allen, Glen, Louis, Roger, Dexter and Kelly Gonsorowski.

Mrs. Gonsorowski, the former Mary Paschke, was born Nov. 27, 1901 in Walsh county, N.D., to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Paschke. She married Louis Gonsorowski at Warsaw, N.D., and they lived at Oslo and later at Argyle.

Surviving are two daughters: Mrs. Gaylord (Mary) Loughrey, St. Paul; and Mrs. Harry (Rose) Kurowski, East Grand Forks; six sons: Hubert and Conrad, Thief River Falls; Leonard, Newfolden; Florian and Daniel, East Grand Forks; and Edward, Tacoma, Wash.; 31 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Also surviving are a brother, Paul Paschke, Barnesville; four sisters: Susie Michalski, Argyle; Palagia Zola, Oslo; Barbara Saari, Mt. Iron, Mich.; and Stella Gerszewski, Crookston; two half-sisters: Helen Bushaw, Thief River Falls; and Rose Riski, Seattle, Wash.; and a half-brother, John Paschke, St. Paul.

She was preceded in death by her husband, who died in September of 1973, a son, Joseph; a grandchild, Gary; and several brothers, sisters, and half-brothers and half-sisters.

TURBULENCE WAS HIGH below the power dam in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, as heavy rains forced opening of all three gates to reduce water levels above the dam. Power plant crews worked 12 hour shifts on Saturday, operating the turbines at full capacity just to allow more water to pass through the structure, but were forced to clear the intake grids at least every hour. Heavy runoff and high water levels produced even more debris than usual, including a boat and motor which became trapped in the number three flood control gate on Saturday morning, with the rushing water and other debris eventually pounding it to pieces and washing it through the gate. No evidence that it had ever been there remained visible, except a few items of fishing tackle and a gas can which the dam operators snagged with hooks while attempting to save the boat, which was registered to the late Skip Newland of Thief River Falls.

GUERNSEY BREED champion exhibitor and winner of the Stuart McLeod award for the most total points accumulated in dairy day showing this year was Jayne Erickson, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Erickson of Viking. Jayne's junior yearling was the reserve champion grade in the overall dairy show. Jordan Hickman of Winger showed the reserve champion Guernsey in breed competition.

Stumpf Notes Highway Work Slated In Area

State Senator LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer reports that State Senate District 1 will share in almost $16 million in construction in funds to be used in northwestern Minnesota for highway and road improvements this summer.

"I have been informed that our area will receive $5.2 million in highway improvement funding," Stumpf said. "Nine projects in our area have been approved for this funding to be completed this summer. These projects are important in terms of rehabilitating our transportation network and providing jobs for our residents."

The roadwork in the district is part of a $15.9 million funding plan on over 150 miles of state highways in northwestern Minnesota, Stumpf said. It will include resurfacing, sealcoating, concrete joint repair and extensive grading. Other projects will involve culvert replacements, bridge replacements and repair jobs in addition to smaller projects around the region.

The announcement of the funding approval this summer, made by the Minnesota department of transportation, was closely followed last week by the announcement from Washington, D.C. that the House appropriations committee had also approved sending $300 million in total transportation funding to the state, including $234 million for similar highway construction projects statewide beginning October 1, Stumpf added.

"All of this transportation funding news is good for our state, our businesses, our farmers and everyone who uses this extensive transportation network," Stumpf added. "I am hopeful that other projects not approved this year will be considered for completion during subsequent construction seasons as well."

Following is a list of local projects approved for funding in Senate District 1:

—T.H. 11 — Replace Baudette bay bridge ($2,667,000);

—T.H. 11 — Resurface from Frontier to Indus for 18.9 miles ($1,001,009);

—T.H. 72 — Resurface North Beltrami county line to Rapid River ($867,000);

T.H. 11 — Resurface three miles west of Baudette to Pitt ($153,000);

—T.H. 32 — Overlay the bridge over Clearwater river in Red Lake Falls ($384,000);

—T.H. 89 — Replace the bridge over the Roseau river at Ross ($501,000);

—T.H. 32 — Spot overlay from T.H. 92 for five miles ($92,000);

—T.h. 89 — Spot overlay for 8.3 miles south to 4.8 miles north of the Marshall-Roseau county line ($110,000); and

—T.H. 175 — Concrete joint repair for 10 miles from Hallock to the state line ($42,000).

City Passes Garbage Issue On To County

Recommendation of the utilities committee to hire Kevin Peterson for a new position as electrical technician drew a protest from one of the other applicants, a Mr. Hagman, who asked for preference as a veteran and local resident. Committee Chairman Ken Murphy explained that the final four applicants had been extremely close, necessitating a difficult decision, but said that Peterson had been chosen on the basis of academic standing. He was reported to have an A average, compared to a B average for Hagman.

After considerable discussion involving qualifications for the job, the merits of hiring local people and whether veterans preference applied in this particular case, the matter was referred to attorney Wurst for an opinion on the veterans preference issue. Murphy noted that a delayed decision might result in loss of one or more applicants for the job, including the top applicant. Both Peterson and Hagman graduated this year from the electronics program at the AVTI. Pay for the job starts at $7.25 per hour.

City Planner Jack Quinlivan noted that a public hearing had been set for 8 p.m. Monday, June 18, to consider an application from Gerald Mundt to rezone the old Carnegie Library building from public to C-3 commercial. Mundt holds an option to buy the property from the city for $30,000, and has expressed interest in renovating and remodeling it into office space and a restaurant. Council members expressed some concern that Mundt had decreased the size of an addition to the library which he had originally proposed.

Les Sabo, 1010 North Arnold Avenue, appeared before the council to request that something be done to improve drainage on his property. He claimed that the alley had been built up after the property was developed, preventing water from running off. After considerable discussion regarding the best solution to the problem, council agreed to direct the street department to try cutting down the alley to the north.

Auditor Robert Poissant gave his report on the annual audit, noting that the city was in excellent financial condition. He recommended that the city consider pursuing a new bond rating at this time, since they might become eligible for a better interest rate on their bonds. "This speaks well of the people in charge of investing your money" he commented.

In other business, the council:

—Set a hearing for 7 p.m. Tuesday, June 26, for the purpose of reviewing assessments for $3,200 worth of a $14,000 downtown sidewalk improvement project.

—Approved a 3.2 off-sale beer license for Erl's Food Market, with a stipulation that it not become effective until the new store is completed;

—Approved purchase and installation of $10,706 worth of fencing around the lime ponds near the water plant, although all of the easements have not been obtained. Attorney Wurst advised that installation could proceed, since the property involved would be of "minimal value";

—Approved a permit for Stewart Holmes to operate a flight instruction school at the airport, on stipulation that he pay a $500 non-refundable fee, a $660 hangar fee and carry $1 million in liability insurance. Council noted that although the permit could be damaging to the fixed base operator at the airport, who also offers flight training, the law would not allow them to discriminate;

—Approved application to the Minnesota division of aeronautics for an $80,000 interest-free loan to be used to construct a new 60 by 120 foot hangar at the airport. Also tentatively approved were lease agreements with three of four private plane owners who would lease space in the hangar, making the payments on the 10-year loan. City's share of the $100,000 cost of the hangar was recovered through sale of the old 100 by 100 foot hangar to the school district.

—Noted that the utilities department would be rerouting water and electrical lines at the old Arctic Enterprises facility, since many of the buildings were being sold on an individual basis. All utilities were previously metered at one location in the main plant. Property is to be platted with streets and lots. Assessments will be approached in a similar manner to a new complex, as was done several years ago when the Northland Plaza area was layed out.

JERSEY BREED CHAMPION at Northwest Dairy day Tuesday in Thief River Falls was shown by Barry Visser, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Visser of Ada. He showed the registered senior yearling pictured above in his third year at the regional dairy show. Reserve championship went to Steve Waller of Twin Valley.

SPEAKING out for the dairy industry during the princess coronation ceremonies Tuesday at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls were Lori Olson of Fertile (left), 1983 Northwest Dairy princess, and Lisa Marie Schaffer of Cannon Falls, Princess Kay of the Milky Way. Lori completed her reign with the crowning of the 1984 regional princess and Lisa will reign until her successor is crowned at the Minnesota state fair this fall.

LaRae Carlson Double Winner At Dairy Day

breeds.

Top animals selected among the six dairy breeds shown were as follows:

Ayrshire — LaRae Carlson, Salol, champion; Scott Muzzy, Thief River Falls, reserve;

Brown Swiss — Joan Johnson, Erskine, champion and reserve;

Guernsey — Jayne Erickson, Viking, champion; Jordan Hickman, Winger, reserve;

Holstein — Loretta Visser, Gary, champion and reserve;

Jersey — Barry Visser, Ada, champion and Steve Waller, Twin Valley, reserve;

Milking Shorthorn — Laurie Kramer, Bejou, champion and Mike Kramer, Bejou, reserve.

Receiving trophies for having been dairy day competitors for nine years or more were the following: Robin Beyer, Red Lake Falls, nine years; Rodney Cloose, Pinewood, 10 years; Kyle Olson, East Grand Forks, nine years; Gene Krause, Baudette, nine years; Rick Millner, Roseau, 10 years; Scott Muzzy, Thief River Falls, 11 years; Corena Christianson, Greenbush, 12 years; and Jayne Erickson, Viking, 10 years.

The dairy show and princess coronation were held in the parking lot at Floyd B. Olson park where dairy day officials defied the odds and decided to chance an outdoor show. Only an occasional mist marred the day with overcast skies contributing to comfort of cattle, exhibitors and a good crowd of spectators. By princess coronation time in the afternoon, dairy day had worked its magic and sunshine prevailed. By 6 p.m., after the cattle were loaded and on their way home, the rains came again.

MCC Names 89 To Honor Roll In 4th Quarter

Eighty-nine out of 210 students (42.4 per cent) were listed on the fourth quarter honor roll at Marshall County Central school, a position earned by maintaining at least a 2.67 grade point average.

Grade point averages are computed on a scale in which an A equals 4.0, B equals 3.0, C equals 2.0, and D equals 1.0. Extra honor points for advanced math and science classes allow some students to achieve more than a 4.0 average.

Sixteen of 33 students (48.5 per cent) in grade 12 achieved the honor roll, including: Kim Stokke 4.25, Brenda Berggren 4.18, Stacey Gonshorowski 4.07, Pam Pederson 3.80, Paula Gustafson 3.72, Shanna Brodersen 3.70, Karin Bolstad 3.51, Shelly Anderson 3.50, Jody Hjelle 3.33, Brent Magner 3.19, Marie Weber 3.03, Sunny Riesen 2.92, Nancy Nelson 2.85, Ryan Shern 2.79, Nancy Gillund 2.76, and Tami Hanson 2.75.

L. Reopelle Earns Honors

Laurie Ann Reopelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reopelle of Kingsville, TX and formerly of Thief River Falls, graduated with scholastic honors from H. M. King high school this spring, placing in the top 10 per cent of her class of 348 students.

Accepted at Texas A&I for the fall term where she will major in business and finance, Laurie has also received her Texas license in cosmetology.

PLEASANT CHIT-CHAT is exchanged by most visitors to Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls as farmers and others connected with the annual event discuss topics of the day. But leave it to the youngsters to get right down to the basics of communication. Too young to be participants in the dairy show, seven-year-old Christine Curfman (left) and her six-year-old friend Dale Vettleson, both of the Gully area, found a napping Brown Swiss heifer to be a cooperative and comfortable aid to conversation.

FIRST WINNER of the junior champion exhibitor award at Northwest Dairy day was Cari Craigmile, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Craigmile of Hallock. The award was presented to the showman of the best entry in the calf, junior yearling and yearling classes at the show.

AVENGE Gives You The Most Tank-Mix Options For The Cleanest Fields.
AVENGE® wild oat herbicide gives you what you want: proven control and the options that let you choose the broadleaf control you need for the cleanest fields in one pass.
Different tank-mix options. Only AVENGE lets you tank mix with so many different broadleaf herbicides.
So you can pick the one that's exactly right for your broadleaf problem.
A one-pass advantage that saves you labor, fuel and time.
Control up to 95% of wild oats.
All wild oats do not emerge at the same time. When you see most of the wild oats in your fields at the 3- through 5-leaf stage, 95% will have emerged. Apply AVENGE then for the cleanest fields.
Spraying before the 3- through 5-leaf stage runs the risk of missing later emerging wild oats. The AVENGE application time gives you the best shot at your best yields.
For the cleanest fields in one pass, tank mix AVENGE.
Always read and follow label directions carefully.

NCC Football Coaching Staff

New Northland Community College football coach Rick Nelson has named three assistant coaches for the 1984 season, and is currently searching for a fourth addition to the staff.

Nelson, who coached the Grygla-Goodridge cooperative high school football program last fall after having served as football and basketball coach at Goodridge, will handle the offensive backs and make the play-calling decisions for the Northmen this fall. The Oklee native will be assisted by Ray Nowak. Jim Bronken and Dwight Ruud.

Nowak arrived at Northland last December to serve as coordinator in the school's law enforcement program. He's a Milwaukee native who attended Marquette University and the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. He served as a member of the Milwaukee Police Department for 25 years and worked for a short time with a security agency in northern Wisconsin before taking the Northland position. He will coach the defensive line this fall while also serving as an administrative assistant with duties in the recruiting end of things. He is a Navy veteran.

Bronken was a standout football, basketball and track performer at Oklee. He participated in all three sports at the University of Minnesota-Crookston before moving on to the University of North Dakota. He served in both the Navy and the Marines before returning to UND. He will serve as a student teacher at Mark Twain from August to December this year. On the field, his coaching duties will include the defensive backs and linebackers.

Ruud will serve as a student assistant with the Northmen while going to school here. He is a Grygla graduate who played community college football at Itasca. He will coach the offensive line.

Nelson invites anyone interested in working with the program as an assistant coach to apply for the position by contacting him at the school, telephone, 681-2181.

Northland will open practice when players report Saturday, August 25. The 1984 season opener for the Northmen will be a nonconference Friday, September 7, game on the road against the Moorhead State University junior varsity. That'll be a 7 p.m. kickoff. Rest of the schedule will be Saturday afternoon Minnesota Community College Athletic Association (MCCAA) games, including the September 15 home opener vs. Vermilion.

Miscellaneous

+ Opening game of the 1984 Minnesota Class AA state high school baseball tournament Tuesday morning at St. Paul's Municipal Stadium featured Region 7AA champion Grand Rapids, making its eighth straight state meet appearance, vs. Region 4AA winner Anoka, making its first state tournament trip in 12 years. Grand Rapids took an 18-1 record into the tournament, the Indians' only loss a 10-6 setback to Moorhead in the Spuds' mid-season four-team invitational tournament. Moorhead beat Thief River Falls 4-0 in the first round of that event by breaking open a scoreless game with a four-run sixth inning. For the second consecutive year, Grand Rapids' Mark Sonaglia collected three wins in the Region 7AA tournament, striking out 11 batters each outing as he raised his record to 11-0.

+ Roseau has been selected as the site for the 1985 Region 8A boys and girls track and field meet. The 1984 event was held in Walker.

+ An observer wondered how much sense it made in the recent North Sub-Region 8A high school baseball tournament to have Roseau and Lake of the Woods-Baudette travel all the way to Red Lake Falls to play a championship game when Warroad, with an excellent new facility right between the two communities, would have made for an ideal neutral site for the game. A Roseau vs. Lake of the Woods game at Warroad would have saved travel expense and would have likely drawn more fans, who would have been apt to drive that short distance instead of the long trip to Red Lake Falls. Ironically, the game meant little except for providing the Region 8A tournament draw the following week at the same Red Lake Falls site since both the Rams and Bears had qualified for the four-team Region 8A field with North Sub-Region 8AA semifinal wins the day before. A little flexibility is this type of tournament scheduling would seem to be in order.

+Plans are underway by hockey enthusiasts to add additional ice sheets to communities in Warroad and Fergus Falls.

Johnston Pitches 7-0 No-Hitter In Legion Opener

Brian (Scott) Johnston pitched a near-perfect game Tuesday as the Thief River Falls righthander tossed a 7-0 no-hitter at Warroad in the 1984 American Legion baseball season opener for both teams at the fairgrounds diamond here.

Johnston, who was 2-3 during his recently-completed senior year of high school baseball, collected the first no-hitter of his career. As memorable as it was, there was just a taste of disappointment in the achievement as he came within one pitch of notching an even-more monumental perfect game.

He pitched six innings of perfect baseball and retired the first two batters he faced in the seventh on a strike-out and an infield ground-out to move within one batter of the first perfect game for a Thief River Falls pitcher in anybody's memory.

But that honor eluded him when Roger Lien, the No. 3 batter in the Warroad line-up, drew a full-count walk. Lien stole second, but Johnston shook off the obvious disappointment of losing his perfect-game bid to strike out clean-up batter Ward Ortmann on three pitches to preserve the no-hitter. It was his tenth strike-out of the night.

"An outstanding pitching performance," described Thief River Falls coach Nick Drees as he assessed Johnston's efforts. He was in complete control, going to a three-ball count just three times, including that walk issued to Lien. "That was too bad," said Drees of the walk. "I don't recall any perfect games around here."

Post 117 scored all the runs Johnston needed in the second inning when one Thief River Falls hit was complemented by three Warroad errors, three walks, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly for four runs.

Tim Nyland walked to start it and advanced around the bases on three Warroad errors, including two on errant pick-off throws from the mound by Ortmann. Lee Genereux, who reached base on an infield error, and Tom Knoff, who walked, scored on a sharp single to right by Rick Spong and a sacrifice fly to right by Tim Bottem, respectively. Spong stole second, went to third on Bottem's fly ball and scored on a wild pitch.

Genereux walked and scored on a two-out bases loaded walk issued to Spong in the third inning.

Ryan Bakke and Nyland drew back-to-back two-out walks in the fourth, and Bakke scored on a single up the middle by Genereux for a 6-0 cushion.

Final run crossed the plate in the fifth as Spong walked and moved all the way around the diamond on three wild pitches by Lien.

Thief River Falls hosts Detroit Lakes Thursday in a 7 p.m. game at the fairgrounds diamond.

HIGH-STEPPING Thief River Falls righthander Brian Johnston opened the 1984 American Legion baseball season in impressive fashion Tuesday by pitching a 7-0 no-hitter against Warroad on the fairgrounds diamond. Johnston, who struck out 10, had a perfect game going until he walked Roger Lien on a 3-2 pitch with two out in the seventh inning. Closest Warroad came to getting a base hit was in the sixth inning when lead-off batter Chris Hangsleben sent a sinking line drive into shallow center field. But Thief River Falls centerfielder Rick Spong came in and made a nice catch while sliding on his knees. Johnston struck out the side in the second and fifth innings and fanned two in the seventh.

Troy Armstrong Of TRF Wins Honors On Racquetball Court

Troy Armstrong of Thief River Falls, who won a state championship title in Idaho earlier this spring, was a consolation championship winner over the weekend in the Region 11 racquetball tournament played at St. Cloud.

Armstrong, who just recently turned 16, lost his first match in the 16-under bracket at St. Cloud, reportedly featuring one of the strongest regional tournaments in the Upper Midwest by a 15-12, 15-13 margin to the reigning Nebraska men's open state champion.

Troy then won his next six matches for the consolation championship. He also took the gold medal championship in the 18-under category.

On a family vacation trip earlier this spring, Armstrong defeated two-time defending champion to win the Idaho state junior racquetball state title in the 18-under category, then added a third place finish in the men's open portion of the Twin Falls, Idaho Invitational.

Troy's accomplishments are especially noteworthy since he doesn't have a home town court to train on with the closing of the Thief River Falls Racquetball Club. He has made weekly trips to Grand Forks to sharpen his skills.

TRF, Roseau Split Babe Ruth Twinbill

Season-opener for the Thief River Falls 14-15-year-old Babe Ruth baseball team produced a doubleheader split against Roseau on the fairgrounds diamond Tuesday afternoon.

Thief River Falls, coached by Wayne Huseth, won the opener 5-3 but dropped the second game 8-2.

Winning pitcher Mike Anderson scattered three hits in the first game, while Tom Knoff was 2-for-3 in the winner's five-hit attack. The base hit edge was off-set somewhat as Thief River Falls collected four of the game's five errors.

Thief River Falls scored three times in a third inning that featured a two-run single by Quincy Lofberg, then added two more in the fifth after Roseau had tied the game 3-3 in the top of the inning.

Roseau came up with 12 base hits in the second game triumph off two Thief River Falls pitchers — starter and loser Rick Rosetta and Chris Nelson, who came on in relief with one out in the third.

Brad Olson was 2-for-2 as Thief River Falls collected eight hits. The errors were even at two apiece.

Thief River Falls 14-15-year-olds will host East Grand Forks in a Thursday doubleheader beginning at 11 a.m. and will be at the Red Lake Falls Friday for another 11 a.m. twinbill.

Pairings haven't been finalized, but the tournament field is expected to include Thief River Falls, Grafton, Karlstad, Bagley, Fertile, Warroad and Red Lake Falls.

Tournament opener will be Thief River Falls vs. Karlstad Friday at 7:30 p.m. That'll be the only game on Friday's schedule, but some 12 hours of baseball will be offered Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

Sunday's finals will include the consolation game at 12-noon, the third place game at 2:30 p.m. and the championship game at 5.

Thief River Falls' tournament entry will include mostly members of Post 117's B team, the Bombers, although Thief River Falls head coach Nick Drees left the door open for a number of the A team performers to play this weekend.

First half of the doubleheader matching United Satellite Systems vs. Glass Hamms-Coors was postponed until Thursday night at 9 p.m.

Popplers took a 1-0 lead in the top of the fourth against Schmidts-Coke when Jeff Walton drew a two-out walk and scored on Jeff Hendrickson's triple to the right field corner.

Schmidts-Coke, after being held to a couple of singles over the first five innings, went to the bunt to score four times in the last of the sixth. Dave Kays led off the inning by reaching base on an error. Howard Dalager and Al Ness followed with bunt singles to load the bases.

Kevin Sanders beat out an infield hit to score Kays; Tom Drury bunted for another run; and Mark Lundin's sacrifice fly made it 3-0. Final run of the winning came on a wild pitch.

AN ACCURATE throw might have had Thief River Falls base runner Tim Nyland, but this second inning pick-off throw from pitcher Ward Ortmann eluded Warroad first baseman Scott Foster, moving Nyland to second base during the 1984 American Legion baseball season opener for both teams on the fairgrounds diamond. Yet another errant pick-off throw by Ortmann, trying to get Nyland at third, scored the game's first run. Thief River Falls went on to claim a 7-0 victory on the strength of a near-perfect no-hitter by pitcher Brian Johnston. Thief River Falls will host Detroit Lakes Thursday in a 7 p.m. game.

DNR NEWS

Spring Walleye Spawning

A good spawning run this year produced 543.7 million walleye eggs for DNR fisheries crews, it was announced recently.

Richard Hassinger, Fisheries Chief, said the number of walleye spawn taken nearly equaled the exceptional year of 1983, when over 648 million eggs were produced.

Pike River hatchery, located on Lake Vermillion near Ely, produced over 92 million eggs, Pine River station just north of Brainerd was a "close second" with a take of over 85 million eggs.

Hassinger said the DNR operated 20 spawn stripping stations this spring for walleyes. He estimated that more than 346 million walleye fry will be produced from the eggs and will be stocked into state lakes and ponds.

Hassinger noted that it will take these fish three to five years to become a catchable size of a pound and a half.

"This was also a banner year for the taking of muskie eggs," he said. "More than 3.1 million eggs were taken, with the seven county Metro Region accounting for 1.6 million 'pure' muskie eggs and over 120 thousand hybrid muskie-northern pike (tiger muskies) eggs taken.

"This is the second year of stocking these hybrids in the Metro area and they should provide some exciting angling within the next three years."

Spring Forest Fires

More than 900 wild fires destroyed a total of nearly 52,000 acres in Minnesota this spring, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

No homes or lives were lost, but structures such as barns and other out-buildings were burned.

Largest single fire this spring was a 10,240 acre blaze in the Greenbush Forestry District in northwestern Minnesota. Some harvestable timber was lost in addition to large areas of grass and brush.

June Is Trout Month

Governor Rudy Perpich has proclaimed June "Trout Month" in honor of the Minnesota Chapter of Trout Unlimited, a private citizens group organized 25 years ago.

In his proclamation, the Governor said Trout Unlimited "is a totally committee and dedicated body of trout fishers . . . with the noble goal to preserve, protect and enhance our nation's valuable and revered trout and salmon resources."

He said Trout Unlimited members have invested countless hours and moneys to conduct and promote trout habitat improvement projects, water quality monitoring, increased public awareness, sound management practices and enhanced angler-landowner relations on Minnesota trout waters."

Minnesota Commissioner of Natural Resources Joseph Alexander said the organization has played a leading role in Minnesota in promoting the protection of trout streams and the popularity of trout fishing.

Trout Stamp Contest

An art contest to select a design for Minnesota's 1985 Troup Stamp has been announced by the Department of Natural Resources.

Entries for the contest will be accepted starting Oct. 1, 1984, and all entries must be at the DNR's Bureau of Information and Education no later than 4 p.m. Oct. 29.

Judging will be held on Thursday, Nov. 1.

Officials said no artist should prepare an entry for the contest before reading a copy of the rules. These can be obtained by contacting the DNR Bureau of Information and Education, Box 46 Centennial Building, 658 Cedar St., St. Paul, MN 55155; phone (612) 296-3336.

Fish species eligible for the 1985 contest are Brook, Brown, Rainbow and Lake Trout, Splake and Pink, Chinook, Coho and Atlantic Salmon.

Contest is open only to Minnesota residents who have maintained a legal residence in the state for a period of 60 days immediately preceding the entry deadline date for the contest.

No photographic process of any kind may be used in the artwork.

Artists receive no pay or other remuneration from the DNR and all entries are returned to the artists.

Warroad Tops Legion Bombers

Warroad scored two unearned runs on a pair of errors in the top of the fifth inning Tuesday for a 4-3 come-from-behind American Legion baseball victory over the Thief River Falls B Bombers.

Shut out 7-0 by the Thief River Falls A team on a Brian Johnston no-hitter in the first half of the split doubleheader, Warroad mustered just three hits off Tim Nyland in the second game, but capitalized on three errors.

Thief River Falls, meanwhile, got just two hits off Warroad pitcher Chris Hangsleben and was unable to make more use of three Warroad errors. Only Thief River Falls hits were supplied by Kevin Nelson and Lee Hamre, who put the Bombers ahead 3-2 in the fourth inning.

Coached by Mark Harder, the Bombers were scheduled to host the East Grand Forks VFW team tonight (Wednesday) in a 6 p.m. doubleheader.

— Women's Slow Pitch —

Monday's results left the Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league without an unbeaten-untied team after just three rounds of 1984 regular season scheduling.

Ridgerunners whipped previously unbeaten Roseau Transport 22-5 with a big 13-run inning. Paula Rantanen homered for the winners, who saw their own unbeaten status come to an end in the second half of a split doubleheader, an 11-2 loss to the Musarettes as Sue Olson hit two three-run home runs.

Winner of three straight games to open the season, Hardees lost a 13-7 decision to the Health Hustlers, then played to a 6-6 tie with Hutchinson-Sheldons, who got a home run from Val Peterson.

Roseau Transport edged Century 21 by a 9-7 score and the Health Hustlers competed a doubleheader sweep by beating Northland-Thomas 33-2 as Jodi Graff went 5-for-6 at the plate and Dawn Carr hit a two-run home run.

Pizza Hut defeated Musharettes 14-11.

Make-up games from June 6 rain-forced postponements were played Tuesday.

Pollie Rupprecht was 4-for-4 with a home run and Ellen Prigge homered as Hutchinson-Sheldons handled Northland-Thomas 20-3.

A grand slam home run by Dawn Carr highlighted the Health Hustlers' 20-2 rout of Kmart-Glass.

Home runs by Coco Stokke, Kari Budke and Kristi Lee carried Pizza Hut past Century 21 by a 17-4 margin.

Rosemary Naeseth and Linda Tabor were both 3-for-4 as the Schmidt Stealers defeated Kmart-Glass 14-3, while American Legion split a pair of games — losing a 4-3 contest to Hardees, but beating Hutchinson-Sheldons 10-3.

Wildlife Group Has Interesting Facts, Figures

Facts and figures from the publishers of Nationl Wildlife, International Wildlife and Ranger Rick magazines, publications made available to members of the National Wildlife Federation.

+ Ears of the great horned owl may have the most acute sense of hearing in the animal world, says National Wildlife magazine. They can pick up the faint sound of a beetle rustling through the grass, more than 100 yards away.

+ There's new hope for saving the world's biggest bug from extinction, reports National Wildlife magazine. New Zealand scientists have moved the remaining endangered bugs — big as a man's fist and weighing up to three ounces — to a remote island free of predators.

+ We should be glad it's so cold in Antarctica. If all the ice there melted, the world's sea level would rise more than 200 feet, and more than one half of the world's population would have to move to escape the flooding, reports Ranger Rick magazine.

+ Wildlife experts believe Mount Allen, the site picked for the 1988 Winter Olympics downhill ski events in Calgary, Alberta, is a bad choice, says the National Wildlife Federation. Biologists say that construction of the ski runs in the environmentally fragile area would drive off nearly 300 bighorn sheep, 200 elk and many other wildlife animals, leading to their starvation.

+ In a baby robin's first ten days of life, its weight will increase nearly 1,000 percent on a steady diet of insects and earthworms, according to National Wildlife magazine.

+ Starting in the 1600s, it was the beaver pelt that lured Europeans to most of North America's wild reaches, says National Wildlife magazine.

+ Since morphine was isolated from the opium poppy in 1806, some 5,000 other organic compounds, called alkaloids, have been identified, greatly enhancing our ability to fight disease, reports International Wildlife magazine.

+ African elephant's second most serious problem, after being poached for their ivory tusks, is its appetite, says International Wildlife magazine. An elephant may eat 500 pounds of forage a day, requiring about one square mile of average savanna per animal over the course of a year. That's a lot of land for some African countries, like Kenya, which has only 225,000 square miles and some 60,000 elephants to feed.

+ Air inside American homes may be up to ten times more polluted than the outdoors, according to National Wildlife magazine. A study by the Consumer Product Safety Commission says the major sources of indoor pollution are home insulation, aerosols, cleaners, plastics, paints, varnishes, heaters and furnishings.

+ As war and violence continue in the Middle East, the National Wildlife Federation has some good news to report. Thanks to cooperative efforts between Israel, Egypt and a multinational peacekeeping force, Tiran Island, which lies just off the Sinai Desert in the Red Sea, has become a safe haven for many different species of rare birds. The island's significance as a sanctuary for spectacular birds was first discovered during the 1967 war between Israel and Egypt.

WARROAD second baseman David Marvin couldn't pull down a high throw from catcher Mike Flick as Thief River Falls runner Ryan Drees came up with a stolen base in the first inning of Tuesday's American Legion baseball game played here. Post 117 opened its rain-delayed 1984 schedule with a 7-0 victory over the visitors.

Trailing 6-1, previously winless Nichols Beauty Nook-Paint & Glass rallied for a 7-6 come-from-behind victory over The Source-Wennberg's Welding Monday in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball league.

On Tuesday, American Legion-Miller Beer, the league's only unbeaten team, was an easy doubleheader winner with a 21-0 shutout over Norwest Insurance and a 16-1 victory over Nichols Beauty Nook-Paint & Glass.

Fishermen Can Now Use Airways Aid

Fishing enthusiasts flying to the boundary waters can use a new navigational aid in time for the tourist season, said Dick Keinz, state director of aeronautics, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Known as a non-directional radio beacon, this navigational aid located at Crane Lake is the first installed in Minnesota for seaplane pilots use, he said. Crane Lake is located about 45 miles east of International Falls on the Minnesota-Canadian border.

Keinz said the installation will help the state's economic development by providing safer and easier access to the boundary waters area. The new aid will assist pilots during daytime overcast weather in locating the seaplane base and the border station on Crane Lake.

Non-directional beacons are low-powered, low-frequency radio transmitters with a maximum range of about 100 miles used for aircraft navigation, he explained.

In Memoriam

In memory of our parents and grandparents - Adolph and Libbie Srnsky, who passed away 2 year ago.

He is just away, yet always near.
His presence fills each day.
His smile, his voice are everywhere,
Just a memory away.
And though he is no longer
here,
Or seen by family or friends,
He lives because he was dearly loved,
And this love will never end.

Sadly missed by the children and grandchildren.

1t48c

In Memoriam

In memory of our dear son and brother David Nordhagen who passed away June 11, 1960.

Sad and sudden was the call
Of one so dearly loved by all.
A bitter grief, a shock so severe
To part with one we loved so
dear.
He bade no one a last farewell
He said goodbye to none.
We remember him, the twinkle in his eye.
His merry heart and never idle hands.
That meant so much to us.
We mourn for him in silence
No eyes can see us weep
But many a silent tear is shed,
While other are asleep.

Sadly missed by his dad, mom, brothers, Les, Bruce, Rick and Steve and sister Shirley.

New Hazardous Waste Programs Are Initiated

Minnesota waste management board has begun implementing new state hazardous waste programs, first recommended by the board and authorized by the 1984 legislature, designed to help establish commercial hazardous waste processing facilities, promote hazardous waste reduction by industry "and develop a successful state hazardous waste management system that emphasizes alternatives to land-disposal," according to board chairman Robert Dunn.

Dunn spoke at a news conference in Minneapolis, where he was joined by board member Milton Knoll of White Bear Lake, and assistant to the board chairman Tom Johnson, who said the board this week acted on the first of several new programs by issuing "requests for proposals" for new hazardous waste facilities and services.

"The first of these requests is for proposals for commercial hazardous waste processing and storage facilities," Johnson explained. "This request will identify potential developers of these new facilities and any additional measures that would be needed to expedite their development.

"The second request is for a statewide system of collecting and transporting hazardous waste shipments, which would be specially geared to the many smaller businesses and small generators of hazardous wastes scattered throughout Minnesota," Johnson added. "The firm selected to develop such a service would also be eligible for a maximum $350,000 grant authorized by the legislature this year."

Dunn added that, in addition to authorizing the new "requests for proposals" and the $350,000 grant for a statewide hazardous waste transportation and collection service, the 1984 legislature also approved:

+ $10 million in revenue bonds for loans to help finance new hazardous waste processing and storage facilities,

+ $350,000 in grants for feasibility studies of commercial hazardous waste processing facilities,

+ $150,000 in grants to industry for studies on the application of methods and techniques to industrial processes to reduce hazardous waste generation,

+ $150,000 for a program of technical and research assistance to industries to help firms reduce their hazardous waste generation and approve the overall management of their hazardous wastes, and

+ Tax credits for the purchase of hazardous waste reduction and processing equipment.

Dunn commented that Minnesota, in its programs to promote hazardous waste reduction and hazardous waste processing facilities, is "leading the way in a comprehensive, sensible and practical approach" to managing hazardous wastes. He said many other states lag behind Minnesota in their continued dependence on hazardous waste landfills, as does the federal government, "which has not yet adopted policies similar to Minnesota's that emphasize disposal as a last resort and require treatment of hazardous wastes prior to disposal."

Knoll added that the board originally recommended new programs to the legislature earlier this year, and that lawmakers approved all of the board's recommended programs.

"These programs are based on sound, well-developed policy, and were not imposed upon the board by lawmakers or anyone else," Knoll said. "They are the results of several months of work on an overall state hazardous waste management plan, and are based in the board's long and careful appraisal of the state's hazardous waste problem."

Knoll added that the new programs "not only address an environmental issue facing Minnesota, but will assist Minnesota business and industry in dealing with their hazardous wastes.

"It is important to Minnesota businesses that new hazardous waste facilities be established, and that individual firms learn how to cut back and properly take care of their wastes," Knoll commented. "These new programs will eventually aid industries in this state, and help support Minnesota's overall business climate."

Dunn said that industry and government leaders from around the country have contacted the board and expressed their admiration for the programs available in Minnesota.

"In state after state the experts on hazardous wastes, and on how to deal with them, say that Minnesota is taking the right approach, particularly through the new programs recommended by the board and approved by the 1984 legislature," Dunn said.

Shift From Dry To Wet Poses New Problems

"The shift from too dry to too wet the last couple weeks is a good reminder of how changeable our Marshall County weather can be. It was less than a month ago that clouds of sand and dirt were discoloring the sky and burying some young crops. Now we have three inches in the rain gauge with no end in sight," writes Tom Steger of the Marshall county soil and water conservation district at Warren.

"There's no arguing that we did need some rain, but we could be getting too much of a good thing," he continues. "As the soils reach the saturation point, any more rain must run off the fields. It is at this time when we count on our field drainage ditches to function properly.

"But what of those ditches in the sandy central portion of the county or those in wide open areas throughout the county? These were the areas most plagued by the severe soil erosion last month. It is these areas that could have problems with poor drainage due to blocked drainage ditches," he adds.

"We have already had a number of requests for drainage assistance through the SWCD office, and these will be serviced as promptly as possible. Whenever we do help with drainage we also discuss with the landuser the cropping system that he is using. It is frustrating for us and expensive for the landowner to repeat work on the same ditches. This is why we encourage the landuser to adopt a conservation plan for his fields.

"The conservation plan for a field may contain many different components. Some of these include crop rotations, rotations with hayland, crop residue use, conservation tillage (stubble mulching), field windbreaks and critical area seedings. Whichever practices the farmer uses, the goal should be to hold the soil in place and keep the ditches from silting in so rapidly," Steger notes.

"Even those fields in Marshall county without a drainage problem (few as they are) can benefit from soil conservation measures. Farmers who are tired of watching soil blow and cleaning out ditches every year should consider conservation farming," Steger said. "The soil conservation service and SWCD personnel in Marshall county would be happy to answer questions. The telephone numbers in Warren are 745-4351 and 745-5010."

To begin August 6, work is to be completed within 25 working days.

Will Permits Distribution Of Property

A lot of people think about making out their wills, but never really do anything about it. That's too bad, because the cost of such procrastination is invariably borne by surviving friends and relatives, notes the Minnesota attorney general's office.

There are many reasons people forego a will. Some believe that they simply don't have enough property to justify one. Others consider the expense to be too great. But even a small estate has value and the cost may not be very high.

Too often people assume that since they have repeatedly told their relatives how they wish their property to be divided, their plans will be carried out. Unfortunately, oral wills are not valid in Minnesota, and one's relatives are under no legal obligation to satisfy one's oral wishes.

Many have tried to avoid probate proceedings by owning all of their property jointly. Under normal circumstances, when one of the owners or tenants of jointly held property dies, his or her share of that property automatically passes to the remaining tenant or tenants. Since successor ownership is already built into joint tenancy, it is not necessary to probate such property, nor to include it in a will.

However, certain procedures are required to legally transfer the decedent's share to the survivor. If all of the property is owned jointly, the time and expense involved in transferring ownership could be as expensive as probating the property. In addition, joint tenancy transfers are taxable, and the transfer may result in an unfavorable tax consequence.

But perhaps the greatest benefit of a will is the freedom to dispose of your property as you wish. With the exception of only a few statutory restrictions on wills, Minnesota law allows you complete freedom in deciding how your property will be disbursed. On the other hand, if you die "intestate" (without a will), distribution of your property will proceed according to the strict tenents of Minnesota's intestate succession laws. You'll have no choices or options.

For example, under current Minnesota law, if you have no will and if your house is in only your name, your spouse may continue to live in it after your death, but ownership will pass to your children. As for the rest of your property, if you leave only a spouse, your spouse will inherit everything. If you leave a spouse and one child, your spouse and child will share one-half each. If you are survived by a spouse and two or more children, your spouse will inherit one-third and your children will share the rest equally.

While many people may be happy with this type of distribution, others, including those with young children, might prefer that their property pass completely to their spouse who will watch out for the children's interest. But the intestate laws do not work that way.

If you are survived only by parents or other relatives, there are additional provisions in the intestate law covering distribution. And, if you have no heirs, your estate reverts to the state of Minnesota for its use. As you may notice, the law does not provide for allocations to friends, favorite charities, or religious institutions; nor does it take into consideration property of sentimental value. If you wish for special items to go to special people, you will need a will to effectively carry out those wishes.

Other advantages to leaving will include the control you exercise in what and how much of your property will be taxed, and who will act as guardians for your children and who will represent your estate.

For further information about wills and the probate process contact the Minnesota Attorney General's Office, 340 Bremer Tower, 7th Place and Minnesota Street, St. Paul, MN 55101, (612) 296-8955.

HOW THE WEST WAS WON...

Folks who talk about "a family resemblance" are just scratching the surface. Qualities deeper than "looks" are passed from generation to generation.

This is my father. Dad came from strong, hardy stock. Believing people who lived their beliefs—while they carved frontiers. . . They spent their evenings building churches on the prairie.

It is my lot to be a father in today's world. That means I must put my heritage to work intelligently! I must be firm about what's important—flexible about the rest. And I've got to know the difference!

Obviously I need—and seek—God's help. Like my folks in the old days, I find it in the worship and teaching activities of my church.

Complaints: There Is An Answer

Complaints. Many people wonder whether they will do any good. If your pharmacy has changed its hours, or the service at your favorite restaurant has become slow or a blouse comes back from the drycleaners with a spot still on it, will it do any good to complain about it?

According to the International Fabricare Institute, most businesses really do want to hear your comments. Owners know that a customer whose complaint is dealt with is likely to remain a customer. A dissatisfied customer who never complains is likely to be lost forever.

The International Fabricare Institute, the worldwide association for textile care professionals, explains that most businesses have a routine for handling complaints, but you must file a complaint to make that routine function. Companies with good complaint management records often publicize this fact.

Here are some steps to follow if you're dissatisfied with a product or service:

- Contact the company as soon as possible.
- Let it be known what action you think should be taken.
- If requesting a refund, present receipts or other records of the transaction.
- Find out what the complaint handling routine is and try to follow it.
- Listen carefully. Speak calmly.
- If you're not satisfied, ask to speak to a supervisor or manager.
- If the matter becomes complicated, take notes on whom you have spoken with and what was said.
- If the matter cannot be resolved, contact the Better Business Bureau or local consumer agency and follow its advice.

Most businesses try to solve customer complaints quickly and fairly. You can help the process by being aware of the complaint management routine and maintaining a cool head.

There are common sense steps to filing complaints.

A Low-Calorie Answer To Our Taste For Sweets

There's a new low-caloried answer to mankind's old yearning for sweets.

The experts tell us that man's well-developed sweet tooth has been with us as far back as the prehistoric cave dwellers. Those people drew pictures on their walls of such sweet treats as honey, figs and dates. Egyptian hieroglyphics dating back some 4,000 years tell of candies probably made with honey, flour, almonds, dates and figs.

Since the Middle Ages, man has developed thousands of confections, drinks and foods that owe their popularity to being sweet. Somewhere along the line, someone felt that coffee and tea were just too bitter without a touch of sweetening. Modern breakfast cereals took on a new dimension when sprinkled with sugar or honey.

However, the cave man's modern day descendant's concern with fitness—two out of every three Americans are on a diet—has driven him to great lengths to combine sweet taste and low calories in his daily diet.

Now there's a happy answer to this yearning for sweets—powdered soft drink mixes in a variety of refreshing flavors that quench the thirst and contain only four calories for an eight-ounce serving.

Powdered soft drink mixes are one of America's favorite beverages. (We spent more than $700 million on them last year, alone!) The new drinks are sweetened with aspartame, the first sweetener to win approval from the Food and Drug Administration in 25 years. Known as NutraSweet™, it's about 200 times sweeter than sugar, which means only a tiny amount is needed to sweeten beverages and food, thereby lowering their calorie content. That's great news for sweet cravers who have to watch the waistline.

Sugar-Free Kool-Aid, which is America's #3 soft drink, will be available nationwide, while new Sugar-Free Crystal Light, geared to adult tastes, is being introduced in 40 percent of the country now, but will soon be available nationwide also.

NutraSweet is a nutritive sweetener, made from two amino acids, which are protein components found in everyday foods such as milk, meat, eggs and fish. It is metabolized naturally by the body, unlike artificial sweeteners.

It's a low-calorie, good tasting answer for the cave man's descendants, whose sweet tooth still demands satisfaction.

Dairy Day Pride

Dairy Day in Thief River Falls has been around for 35 years now, and some people seem to think it's more of the same old thing. Those who give out with such thoughts haven't studied the faces of the youngsters who take part and those of their parents on the sidelines. If they would, they would see pride mirrored as the strongest of all emotions.

Sure, there's some apprehension there. There's worry and maybe even a little fear among the first or second timers. There's anger with a cow or calf that misbehaves, anticipation of a judge's comments, disappointment for those who don't place in the top classes and sorrow for those who come close but don't quite win the top prizes. Emotions run the gamut at Dairy Day, but pride stands out among all the rest.

Although the competition has been going on for 35 years, each year brings a new crop of contestants, a new group of dairy animals, a new set of circumstances. The cow that had everything going for her one dairy day may be out of sorts or out of condition the next. Rarely has the same cow or the same showman had successive annual championships, although it has happened, and that possibility should also be available. Unless the entrants compete against the best available they don't know how good they really are.

Just as the entrants are proud of their animals and their participation and their parents are proud of their efforts and accomplishments, so is the dairy day sponsoring organization proud of them all. And it's a healthy pride all the way around, the kind that fills your chest and straightens your back and lifts your chin and puts sparkle in your eye.

And it's contagious. It is virtually impossible to spend any time at Northwest Dairy Day and not catch a liberal dose of the feeling yourself. If you missed it this year, don't miss the exposure next year. Mix and mingle with the great people who are the area's dairy farmers and see if you don't walk just a little taller for the experience.

Treatise On Ticks

Outdoorsman Bob Cary over Ely way wrote the following in his "Birdshot and Backlashes" column for the Ely Echo:

The wood tick is a remarkable critter.

There is hardly an insect you can find better adapted to the job at hand. He is flat, hard, got a mess of legs and a first class set of chewing equipment for acquiring the necessary body fluids from victims he requires for completing his life cycle, mainly blood from his victims. The victims being deer, bear, the neighbor's dog, the neighbor and even, heaven forbid, you and me.

While on a recent expedition into the fishing hinterlands of the BWCA, my wife Lil and I had the opportunity to study these interesting species first hand, up close. Aiding and abetting the ticks was our fearless sporting dog, Nuts of Neverhunt, who, apparently has an unusual attraction to these little woodland denizens. Nuts would romp through the shrubbery around the campsite, acquire a number of ticks and then come up to display his catch. He was most successful at bed time, bringing in a most colorful assortment of ticks, which promptly began to migrate around the tent. About the time I would be dozing off I would get the feeling that something was marching across my forehead or up my leg. Reaching down (or up) I would grasp the creature between my thumb and forefinger, bring it out in front and inspect it with the flashlight. Invariably, it was round, flat, reddish-brown and wiggling its legs like it wanted to get away. Of course, if it was set free it would simply go right back looking for a place to bite.

Killing ticks is not easy. One way is to get them between the fingernails on the thumb and forefinger of one hand, and with the fingernails of the thumb and forefinger of the other hand, twist the little varmint in half. Some tick experts use the thumb and the second finger, claiming to get a better grip. Probably more fastidious, social types, use the thumb and the little finger.

In those instances where the tick has fastened on the epidermis somewhere and has started feasting, a different set of circumstances are presented. Often it will be somewhat bloated, swelled up with your own plasma, which is not only discomforting but untidy. It is not moving its leg around much, just hanging on and swilling away.

The first inclination of the victim is to grab the thing and fling it. Unfortunately, the tick has a very weak neck. That is, if you grab the body and pull while the head is buried in your hide, the head will often stay there. On the one hand, this kills the tick, since it cannot function without its head any more than any other living thing, members of Congress included. The buried head is likely to cause a festering and itching and even an infection, which is not good.

Some insect experts say that you should just let the tick go on eating until he is full and then he will drop off. However, I do now know anyone who is willing to wear a tick half full of blood for any length of time.

There are several recommended methods of removing ticks with the head intact, some of which even work part of the time. One of these is to burn the tick with a match. This will work if you can just get the tick and not part of your skin. Smokers sometimes touch the tick with the end of their cigarette. Again, care must be taken so the person is not branded with the business end of a Tarreyton or Kent.

Alcohol is advocated by some tick experts. The tick and the skin around it are daubed with alcohol on a piece of cotton. This is supposed to make the tick sick so it will let go. Some people take their antidote internally, believing that as the alcohol passes through the bloodstream, the tick will get loaded and fall to his death. This is a doubtful theory. On the other hand, the victim can develop a certain attitude of indifference, if enough of the antidote is imbibed, so the tick is no longer a problem.

One thing ticks all have in common is that they are ugly. If you look at one under a powerful glass, they are really ugly. If people looked as ugly as ticks, nobody would ever get married. You have to wonder how ticks ever reproduce, as ugly as they are. Maybe they have terrible eyesight. In any event, it is nice that ticks are so ugly because there is considerable satisfaction in killing a tick. You would hate to kill something that was pretty.

A Touch of Terrorism

Apprehension of a young man for the placing of random pipe bombs in a several state area has given hope that a dangerous situation has been brought to a close. Such indiscriminate attempts to cause injury or death are the most cowardly acts that can be committed against the public.

The incidents serve notice that even Minnesota is not removed from the threat of terrorism which is such an insidious menace throughout much of the world. The St. Cloud Times commented on the bomb placings as follows:

St. Cloud residents were harshly reminded during the Memorial Day weekend of their vulnerability. Within the space of a few hours, local and state law enforcement authorities discovered and defused six pipe bombs in the city, any one of which could have seriously injured or even killed an innocent victim.

The horrifying possibility of inquisitive children or innocent passers-by touching and accidentally detonating one of the bombs was never realized, to the credit of local police officers, fire department members, sheriff's deputies and representatives of the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension. But whoever placed those treacherous bombs must have faced that possibility with an unconcerned shrug. Our collective defenselessness against that kind of disregard for life makes us all feel our vulnerability to terrorism even more acutely.

The vague note that accompanied several of the bombs, and their similarity to other notes and bombs found in Stillwater and La Crosse, Wis., is another disturbing aspect of the incident. With minor differences, the notes attributed the bombs' placement to a "North Central Gay Strike Force Against Public and Police Oppression," a group that apparently is unknown to the state's gay community and law enforcement authorities.

Random terrorism — and that is precisely what the bomb plantings were — is an attack on the most closely held beliefs of our society and our deepest sense of security, and that is why terroristic acts are so frightening.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Little Kim came out of the bathroom with a bandage on her chest. "I have heartburn," she explained to her mother.

Isn't it strange? Little boys play with soldiers and little girls play with dolls, then they grow up and the girls like soldiers and the boys like dolls.

From the first time an infant struggles to get his toes in his mouth, life is a continual struggle to make both ends meet."

THE BIG CHILL
may be a great movie, but it's not a great way to live
Now that winter's behind us, the idea of replacing your old furnace may not be too exciting. But it's a good time to think about taking "the big chill" out of next winter by investing in a new high efficiency gas furnace.
If your furnace is more than 10 years old, it's probably operating at 50% to 60% efficiency. With new state-of-the-art gas furnaces, you can increase the annual fuel utilization efficiency (AFUE) rating to between the 92% to 97% range. The higher the rating, the more energy—and money—you save. What happens, you see, is more heat is generated from the same amount of gas. It's simple: more heat; less waste.
Wouldn't you like to save 45¢ out of every dollar? With the money you save, you can pay for your new furnace in a matter of two to three years, and have enough money left over to take in a movie besides.
Start saving today. Check the yellow pages for the name of the High Efficiency heating dealer nearest you.

SUMMER SUN SAVVY

Plan A Tan

Summer's got to be almost everyone's favorite season. You're outdoors more, playing in the warm sunshine, and enjoying the glowy looks of a toasty tan.

But before you head off to the beach, or the tennis court, or the boat this summer, you should know the perils of overexposure to the sun's rays, and how you can help save your skin. With basic sun-savvy, and Noxzema Skin Cream for summer skin conditioning, you'll weather the season beautifully.

Sun Alert

Dermatologists have long recognized the fact that the sun's ultra-violet rays are responsible not just for sun tanning, but for other problems, too: dry, leathery skin, premature wrinkles, even skin cancer. And although these effects won't be visible immediately, they can show up later—and there'll be no way to undo the damage.

Get Tough With The Sun

A few sun-wise precautions can help you protect skin from harm: *Be a sane sun-worshipper by using the right sunscreens for your skin type. Stock up on at least two different types: one for the more sensitive areas and another for the rest of your body. Use them whenever you're in the sun, not just on the beach. Reapply about once every two hours and before and after each dip. *Be careful of sneaky suntraps like cloudy days, pools, and beach umbrellas. The sun's rays can go through fog and clouds, water (up to three feet down from the surface), and even "bounce off" sand, so always be prepared by slathering on a generous layer of your sunscreen.

Don't head for the hottest place in the sun and attempt to get a fast tan—take suntanning slowly. Your first few times out should be no more than 20 minutes (less if you have fair skin or burn easily). Then add about ten minutes each day. Plan your tanning time before 11:00 a.m. and after 3:00 p.m. The high point of the sun's day is from noon to 2:00 p.m.—that's when the direct rays have the most burning power. So during that time, cover-up with a long, cotton beach dress, plan a picnic out of the sun, or take a cozy, midday siesta!

When Coolness Counts

If you overdo your tanning and end up with red, sunburned skin, you need to cool it fast and help guard against dryness. Treat it to Medicated Noxzema Skin Cream. Tingly, white and greaseless, Noxzema takes the sting out of a sizzling burn—actually reduces skin temperature on contact. Smooth it on sunburned hot spots like shoulders, ears, chest and knees and feel it go to work to soothe and refresh, instantly. And non-drying Noxzema makes the perfect summer complexion beautifier, too. Use it morning and night to cleanse your skin of summer dirt, oil, and perspiration, while it leaves skin feeling tingly clean and wonderfully soft.

Minnesota Leads Waste Disposal Handling Effort

"Based on some recent meetings with federal lawmakers and officials, federal agencies not only lag behind our state in developing a sound approach to hazardous waste planning and management, they and others in the U.S. are looking to Minnesota as a pace-setter in dealing with hazardous wastes," states chairman Robert Dunn of the Minnesota waste management board.

"The contrast between the Minnesota and federal approaches — and the farsightedness of our state's programs — was evident to me in early-May when I had an opportunity to meet with people in Washington, D.C., in connection with the reauthorization of the primary federal law dealing with hazardous waste management, the resource conservation and recovery act or RCRA," he added.

RCRA was first passed in 1976, and established a national framework for regulating the disposal of solid and hazardous wastes. The House and Senate versions of the RCRA-reauthorization seek to plus loopholes in the old law and spur the enforcement of new regulations at the state level.

One proposed major revision in federal regulations would, for the first time, regulate companies that generate smaller quantities of hazardous wastes. Currently, companies generating 1,000 kilograms (about one ton) or more of hazardous waste per month would be regulated. New proposals would lower that threshold to 100 kilograms per month.

Minnesota, in contrast, has always regulated all generators of hazardous waste regardless of the amount generated.

Proposed federal legislation would also ban some varieties and forms of hazardous wastes from disposal in landfills, and would ban the disposal or storage of hazardous wastes in mined facilities until federal performance and permitting standards have been developed.

"In Minnesota, the waste management board has already set state policies — in its draft hazardous waste management plan and draft certificate of need for hazardous waste disposal — that would severely limit the disposal of various types of hazardous wastes, prohibiting, for example, the land-disposal of liquid hazardous wastes," Dunn said. "The board also examined the feasibility of waste disposal in mined crystalline bedrock facilities, and while it determined that fully evaluating the concept was too costly for our state's resources, and had too many unanswerable questions associated with it at this time, it recommended that the U.S. environmental protection agency (EPA) research the technology."

Other changes and amendments to RCRA proposed in the House and Senate bills include a limit on the length of time hazardous materials could be stored in non-permitted facilities, and restrictions against the burning of fuel oil contaminated with hazardous waste.

"The federal government does seem to be slowly moving toward a policy of the land-disposal of hazardous wastes as a last resort," Dunn noted. "Although a few key Congressmen have recognized that policy as the way to go, a firm enforcement of that view is not yet fully defined in federal law.

"Fortunately in Minnesota, such a policy is a basic tenet of our overall policies on hazardous waste management, and has been since 1980," he added.

"Another improvement at the federal level is a growing awareness of something we've devoted a great deal of attention to in Minnesota, the importance of groundwater protection. Future legislation is likely to require siting standards for hazardous waste disposal facilities that would require the protection of drinkable and potable water sources and give more consideration to hydrogeological factors in disposal facility siting.

"Even though Minnesota is leading the way in hazardous waste planning, we must remain informed on potential changes in federal laws. Such changes could affect Minnesota's own programs, especially measures affecting liability and insurance for hazardous waste handling and disposal, new standards for hazardous waste facilities, and possible assistance to states for new waste management programs," Dunn said.

"Exchanges of information between Minnesota and federal officials as the regulatory picture becomes clearer will be important in the development of hazardous waste processing and treatment facilities in the state," he continued.

"It is important, for example, for the federal government to learn from the experience of Minnesota and other states in setting new policies. Changes that will be needed in the national level, for example, include steps by the federal government to more properly allocate the costs of land-disposal of hazardous wastes, and provide a more favorable economic climate for other, preferred waste management technologies. The EPA should also provide basic research in hazardous waste management technologies, and serve as a clearinghouse for information on hazardous waste management for the 50 states.

"Minnesota is making progress in dealing with the hazardous waste problem practically and sensibly, through new programs designed to foster hazardous waste reduction by industry and the establishment of new processing and treatment facilities. A sound approach on the national level, is also essential if we are to effectively deal with the hazardous waste problem," he concluded.

For further information on trends in federal regulation or any other aspect of waste management, write the board at 7323 58th Avenue North, Crystal, Minnesota 55428; or call 1-800-652-9747.

Rosemaling Workshop At Art In Park

Diane Edwards of Grand Forks, ND, who will teach a workshop on rosemaling at Art in the Park in Thief River Falls Thursday, has studied with more than 30 artists from Norway and the United States. The workshop will begin at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the Lincoln high school cafeteria and a charge of $3 per person will be made.

Edwards has a degree in art and has been painting for 20 years. At her studio — Rosemaling and Crafts — she paints on furniture and teaches rosemaling. She has decorated a number of homes, restaurants and other interiors with rosemaling and other folk art.

The Norwegian folk art of rosemaling literally translates as rose painting — the art of decorating wooden surfaces with traditional painted designs. The art originated in Norway in the 17th century and was used mainly to make Norwegian homes and churches more festive and colorful.

Each district of Norway developed a style of painting peculiar to its area through talented artists who lived in the separate areas. The Telemark style is considered the most free and spontaneous.

It is very creative and fine with exquisite detail and a design that is asymmetrical," Edwards said, "based on the C and S forms of the baroque and rococo classical styles with additions of lines and teardrops in the individual artist's style. All designs follow through from a central root area. There can be more than one root area so long as there is central balance, like a growing plant."

Art in the Park is sponsored by the Thief River Falls Community Arts council and will also feature other workshops, 28 art, craft or food booths, kiddies parade and chalk drawing contest, entertainment beginning at 10:15 a.m. and continuing each hour on the hour through 4 p.m.

City Council Meets Today At Auditorium

Thief River Falls city council will hold a special meeting at 5:15 p.m. today, Monday, in council chambers at city auditorium, to reach a decision on who to hire for a newly-created position in the utilities department.

Recommendation of the utilities committee was made last Tuesday, to hire Kevin Peterson, a North Dakota resident graduating from Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute as an electrical technician. Protest was raised by one of the other applicants, who asked for preference as a veteran and Thief River Falls resident. Decision was deferred pending a decision by city attorney Bob Wurst on whether veterans preference was applicable.

Sen. Peterson Here Tuesday

State Senator Collin Peterson will be visiting Thief River Falls from 12:05 to 1 p.m. Tuesday, June 19, with stops at the Rex Cafe, Florence's Cafe, The Club and Carol's Cafe, as part of a campaign tour as a DFL candidate for congress.

Flood Insurance Meetings Set With Officials

Personnel from the Minnesota department of natural resources (DNR) division of waters, and the federal emergency management agency (FEMA) will be meeting with city officials at 9 a.m. Thursday, at city auditorium, to discuss special conversion into the national flood insurance program (NFIP).

They will also be meeting with Pennington county officials at 10 a.m. Thursday, in the courthouse meeting room, and another meeting will be held for insurance lenders by FEMA personnel in conjunction with the flood insurance administration (FIA), at 3 p.m. Wednesday, June 20, at city hall in Alvarado.

Both the city and county presently participate in the "emergency phase" of the NFIP, which allows owners of homes and other structures in river floodplain areas to purchase first layer insurance coverage on their homes, structures and contents. Conversion into the regular phase of the NFIP would allow these owners to purchase additional insurance coverage and would require that the city and county adopt an approved flood plain management ordinance. This ordinance will regulate the building of

Miss TRF Is Finalist In Miss Minnesota Pageant

by Barbara Geer

"Go For It All" The theme of the 1984 Miss Minnesota scholarship pageant summed up the attitude of 33 lovely young women who competed for the title of Miss Minnesota at the 50th annual pageant held in Austin June 13-17.

Reigning Miss Thief River Falls Beverly Rustad was among the contestants who arrived in Austin Sunday, June 10, to begin preparation for the preliminaries which started Wednesday evening. They were greeted by their host families at a dinner at the Riverside arena where the pageant was held.

The Miss Minnesota pageant is divided into three preliminary pageants. Each contestant is judged in one competition per evening, and in two personal interviews with the judges. Points are awarded to the top five places in each category — evening gown, talent, swimsuit and personal interview, with 50 per cent of the total coming from the talent division. Following the selection of the ten finalists for Saturday's performance, all previous points are discarded and the competition starts once again.

A panel of five distinguished judges were observing the girls for the entire week, as well as conducting interviews and judging all of the on-stage performances. BeBe Shopp, Minnesota's first Miss America (1948), was among the panel. Other members were Alan Hanson, Pratt, KA; Charles Ranier, Vicksburg, MS; Judy Zeisner, Aledo, IL; and Frederick Wolfe, of Massilon, OH. Each of these judges is extensively involved in the pageant in his or her respective state.

When the lights came up on Wednesday's preliminary competition, excitement was in the air. The overture was performed by an orchestra assembled of musicians from various parts of the United States. "Go For It All" featured Miss America 1977 (Miss Minnesota 1976) Dorothy Benham, the reigning Miss Minnesota Vicki Plaster and the 33 contestants. The Parade of Cities, announced by John O'Rourke, 19-year veteran pageant emcee, gave the audience a chance to cheer for their favorite contestants.

Competition began with the evening gown division. The gowns radiated with glitter and sparkle. Bright lights enhanced the shimmer of gowns for each young woman as she walked the ramp before judges and audience.

Miss Thief River Falls was among the talent competitors. Attired in clown suit and make-up, Beverly Rustad brilliantly performed Briccialdi's "Carnival of Venice."

The swimsuit division topped off the evening's program. In this competition, the judges are best able to determine poise, posture and beauty of face and figure.

Entertainment throughout the program was provided by Miss Minnesota Vicki Plaster, former Miss America Dorothy Benham, and the Pageant Singers and Dancers. "An Old Fashion Strut," a production number by the contestants, concluded the program.

Thursday's and Friday's performances followed the same program, with the only change being the competition in which each contestant was involved. On Thursday evening, Miss Thief River Falls was in the swimsuit competition, and Friday she competed in evening gown and on-stage personality.

Winners of the swimsuit and talent competitions were announced at the end of each preliminary. The talent award Wednesday evening was captured by Miss Rochester, Sue Lewis, who sang "Romany Life" from the "Fortune Teller" by Victor Herbert. Miss Austin, Anne Doyle, was given the swimsuit award. Thursday's talent award went to Miss Twin Cities, Lauren Green. She performed a Chopin Etude on the piano. Miss Lakeville, Lisa Daudt, won the swimsuit award. Casey Kovacic, Miss Bloomington, took Friday's talent award with her presentation of a flute and piccolo solo. Miss Twin Cities received her second preliminary award when she earned first place in the swimsuit competition.

Although Miss Thief River Falls did not win any individual preliminary awards, she was among the ten finalists selected for Saturday's competition. Viewers in the area were able to tune in to KTHI-TV-11 to watch Beverly Rustad represent Thief River Falls in the pageant. This is the first year the pageant has been televised.

Pageant history was made as Miss Twin Cities, Lauren Green, was crowned Miss Minnesota. She is the first black woman to wear the state crown. Lauren is 25 years old and a 1980 graduate of the University of Minnesota, with a degree in piano performance. She plans to study Classical Theater at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London.

Runners-up in the pageant included Miss Southwest

TOP TEN finalist at the Miss Minnesota pageant in Austin Saturday night was Beverly Rustad, Miss Thief River Falls of 1983. Beverly competed in preliminary pageants during the week to qualify for the state finals which were telecast for the first time.

Randall and his wife Jeanie noted that they will work with groups planning charter trips in any number up to the 39-passenger capacity of the bus.

AMONG THE AWARDS handed out at a recent meeting of the District 5M-11 Lions cabinet meeting in St. Paul recently was this second place award won by the Thief River Falls Lioness club in District Governor Harry Puffe's point contest. Points were awarded to the 12 clubs in the district on the basis of their involvement in local public service projects, attendance at Lions and Lioness functions and involvement in Lions and Lioness projects. Twin Valley Lioness club finished in first place. Holding the second place plaque are past president Beverly Solheim (left) and president Octavia Jorgenson.

Child Passenger Safety Day Is Observed Mon.

Minnesota joins other states in the nation today, June 18, in observing the first national Child Passenger Safety Awareness Day.

According to Paul Tschida, commissioner of the Minnesota department of public safety, the event is a good time to remind citizens of the child restraint law in Minnesota which requires that children under the age of four be secured in child restraints while they are being transported in passenger vehicles.

Original law was passed in 1981. Effective August 1, 1983, law officers could ticket Minnesota motorists traveling with children under the age of four if the tots were not buckled into an approved passenger restraint. Previously, just a warning was required.

John Shaffer, head of Project Childsafe in Minnesota, reminds residents that the 101 days between Memorial Day and Labor Day are the most dangerous in terms of motor vehicle accidents. Children are very vulnerable in these accidents. Many parents who are extremely conscious of safety factors in the home do not exercise the same kind of caution in an automobile and therefore, the child's safety is at stake. Shaffer said motor vehicle accidents are the number one killer and crippler of children.

There are more than 100 programs in Minnesota that will loan or rent child passenger restraints to motorists affected by the law. Information on these programs is available by telephoning 612-291-9150.

Miss TRF Is Finalist In State Pageant

Metro, Alyssa Solberg, fourth; Miss Rochester, Sue Lewis, third; Miss Austin, Anne Doyle, second; and Miss Bloomington, Casey Kovacic, first. Other finalists were Miss Lakeville, Lisa Daudt; Miss Iver Grove Heights, Lisa Pfoser; Miss North St. Paul, Ann Licater; and Miss Mankato, Linda Klein. Winning the Miss Congeniality award was Miss Coon Rapids, Julie Egan, who also won the non-finalist talent award.

$8,000 in scholarships are awarded annually at the Miss Minnesota pageant, provided through the support of state sponsors. It is a part of the largest educational scholarship program in the world for young women, the Miss America program, which awards more than $2,000,000 annually.

Miss Minnesota received a $3,000 scholarship award, a $1,000 fashion award, and a trip to Atlantic City to compete for the title of Miss America. Miss Thief River Falls received a $200 scholarship award and trophy for being a top ten finalist.

These awards and others were presented at the coronation ball held Saturday evening. It was the culmination of a week of hard work and intense emotion. Once again each contestant walked the ramp before family and friends, this time for the final time. Accomplishments were hailed and the pride of each city was evident in the cheers.

Then came the time to say goodbye to new-found friends. All around the arena-transformed-to-ballroom, contestants hugged, cried, laughed, signed autographs and gave out addresses. Echoes of "Congratulations," "You did a great job," and "Come to visit me" could be heard in every corner. And so could "Hi Mom and Dad. I'm ready to come home."

Congratulations Beverly Rustad, Miss Thief River Falls, and. . . welcome home.

Dr. Levinson Will Consult At Glenmore

Glenmore foundation at Crookston recently completed negotiations with the day-night unit of Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls to purchase additional organizational consultation services from Dr. Steve Levinson, the day-night unit director.

Several months ago, Dr. Levinson served as a consultant to Glenmore and made recommendations about new clinical management structures which might better utilize the diverse talents of Glenmore's clinical staff.

"Glenmore is blessed with an abundance of committed, highly capable employees. Our task is to build organizational mechanisms which will enable each and every patient that Glenmore serves to receive the full benefit of all that Glenmore has to offer," Dr. Levinson said.

In addition to the organizational consultation which will be provided by Dr. Levinson, Dr. Scott Temple, a clinical psychologist at the day-night unit, and Marlene Beedy, head nurse of the hospital's psychiatric unit, will also provide services to Glenmore as part of this agreement. Temple will serve as one of the two new team leaders called for in a plan proposed by Levinson. Beedy will provide psychiatric training to nursing staff.

Robert C. Wittenstrom, executive director of Glenmore, said, "Glenmore has developed a strong working relationship with the day-night unit over the years and recognizes the unit's excellent qualifications in the health care field. I'm delighted with the suggestions proposed by Dr. Levinson."

Glenmore currently provides chemical dependency treatment services in both northwestern Minnesota and northeastern North Dakota. It has recently opened outpatient satellite offices at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls and in Roseau and Warroad.

Paying For Miracles That Never Happen

According to the U.S. food and drug administration, the term "quackery" is used to describe both people and products. The "health practitioner" with the miracle cure is a quack; the drug or food supplement promoted with false health claims is a quack; the machine that has impressive knobs and dials but does nothing except take money out of the pockets of the unsuspecting or desperate is a quack device.

Broadly speaking, quackery is misinformation about health. Most cruel, dangerous and tragic are the unproven treatments for cancer which rob the patient of the one element that can save life — valuable time during which effective treatment could still be administered.

The Food and drug administration points out the following information about quackery and lists some ways in which it can be identified:

Quackery in drugs includes cures for baldness among men, which is incurable; chemical "face peels" that promise new youth but may bring permanent disfigurement; and "prompt relief" from colitis through laxatives which can seriously worsen this condition. Drugs cannot "melt away" fat. Parts of the body cannot be enlarged or reduced by rubbing on creams or lotions.

Contrary to what some self-appointed "nutrition experts" say, the American food supply is not produced on "depleted" soil; chemical fertilizers and modern food processing have not deprived our food supply of its high nutritive quality. Widespread diseases caused by dietary deficiencies are no longer encountered. The need for vitamins, minerals, or other food supplements for people who have deficiencies only can be established after careful and complete medical examination.

There is no machine which can diagnose or treat different diseases by simply turning a knob or flashing lights. Excess body weight cannot be eliminated with special clothing or by vibration. No glove or bracelet can cure or prevent arthritis. Sometimes quackery even involves legitimate devices that are improperly promoted; for example, it is practically impossible to get properly fitted eye-glasses or dentures by mail order, and to permanently remove hair.

Quackery has some well-defined characteristics. If your answer is "yes" to any of the following questions, it is very likely that quackery, not sound health care, is involved:

—Is the product or service being offered a "secret remedy" or a "recent discovery" not available from other sources?

—Does the sponsor claim to be battling the medical profession which does not accept this wonderful discovery?

—Is the remedy being sold from door to door, by a self-styled "health adviser," or promoted in lectures to the public, from town to town?

—Is this "miracle" product being promoted in a popular magazine, by a faith healer's group, or a crusading organization?

—Does the promoter tell you about the wonderful miracles this product or service has performed for others?

—Is the product or service good for many different illnesses, real or fancied?

—Do the promised benefits seem too good to be true?

—Is this product or its promoter supported by testimonials from people who have been "cured?"

If you suspect that a product you are interested in is fraudulant, there are a number of things you can do:

—Ask for evidence of all claims and a written guarantee.

—See your physician or inform your county medical society. Seek professional advice.

—Get in touch with the Food and Drug Administration & either at its office in your area (listed in the phone book) or at headquarters, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Maryland 20857.

—Ask the Better Business Bureau or reputable comsumer interest group about the reputation of the promoter.

—If the product was promoted through the mail, inform your local Post Office, or write: Chief Postal Inspector, Washington, D.C. 20260.

—Don't buy immediately. Ask for time to think it over. Investigate what you've been told.

The Vise Tightens

Following editorial is from the Mankato Free Press:

The financial vise continues to tighten on many Minnesota farmers.

A survey of rural bankers taken by the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis shows that, while farm incomes have remained stable, about a third of all full-time family farmers have incurred so much debt that they cannot make a profit at current farm prices and interest rates.

More than half of the bankers said their farm customers were repaying debts more slowly than normal. Not surprisingly, bankers said more farmers were having trouble qualifying for new credit. Early in the year, a peak time for farmers trying to line up crop operating loans for the new growing season, bankers said they were referring more farm customers to non-bank lending institutions.

These trends add up to what bankers call more "financial stress" on farmers.

As of April 1, the value of the U.S. farm real estate, including buildings as well as land, averaged $739 an acre, compared with $743 in 1983, $789 in 1982, and the record high of $795 in 1981. As recently as 1976, the average value was less than $400 an acre.

According to the Federal Reserve report, most bankers expect that interest rates will continue to rise, providing little respite in financial stress for the second quarter of 1984.

But bankers expect farm incomes to continue stable, bringing farmers incomes comparable to 1983. And many farmers in Southern Minnesota reported quite good incomes in 1983.

Dick Todd, an agricultural economist at the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, noting that importance of the farmer to Minnesota's economy, doesn't expect the tightening financial vise to bring a mass exodus of family farmers and a resulting land-price crash.

Blowing Smoke Won't Help

Following editorial is from the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

"Can we have an open debate about smoking?" pleads the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

"The issues that surround smoking are so complex, and so emotional, it's hard to debate them objectively. In fact, many of you probably believe there is nothing to debate. Over the years, you've heard so many negative reports about smoking and health — and so little to challenge these reports — that you may assume the case against smoking is closed. But this is far from the truth. Studies which conclude that smoking causes disease have ficant evidence to the contrary."

Honest, that's what that big old tobacco company is declaring in advertisements across the country. It's puffing up an enormous smoke screen in a desperate attempt to refute evidence which has steadily grown more clear and more impressive.

"We know some of you may be suspicious of what we say, simply because we're a cigarette company," the ad suggests. "We know some of you may question our motives."

Surely not. What would a tobacco firm have to gain by arguing that its product isn't harmful to the health of its users? Obviously R.J. Reynolds is interested only in the truth, not in sales.

Another ad in the debate series points out that both sides have rights. It fails to recognize, however, that there is no way a non-smoker, quietly minding his own business, can offend a smoker. Nor does it recognize that the smoke can not be directed only in the direction of other smokers. It pervades entire areas. But this is the least significant argument against smoking.

It will be interesting to see how this impartial cigarette manufacturer manages to discredit years of shocking evidence and statistics compiled by the U.S. Surgeon General and countless reputable health organizations. The most truthful statement in the ad campaign so far is that "many of you probably believe there is nothing to debate." There isn't.

Cigarette smoking has helped shorten thousands of lives.

Associate professor C.E. Cotton, M.D., head of the department of Clinical Sciences at the UMD School of Medicine, says flatly that "few things are so scientifically well-established as the adverse consequences of tobacco usage. Tobacco users can look forward to, on the average, shortening of their lives by eight years. More importantly, they can anticipate about 20 years of impaired health."

"It has been estimated that the total health care budget could be reduced by 27 per cent if tobacco usage were to case," Dr. Cotton adds.

Cagarette manufacturers have for years sought to make smoking appear manly and glamorous, relaxing and enjoyable. They have accumulated wealth over the years. It is not surprising that they are using every possible means to combat the common-sense knowledge that smoking is harmful. Blowing smoke to cloud the real issue just won't help.

Prairie Public TV Airs Vietnam Show

When it premiered on PBS in the fall of 1983, Vietnam: A Television History made history itself.

A record weekly average of 8.4 million viewers watched the 13-week series, making it PBS's biggest series of the season and most-watched documentary series ever.

Television critics gave Vietman: A Television History their highest praise, and the series is continuing to win awards. To date, it has garnered nine, including the prestigious George Polk and George Foster Peabody Awards.

Beginning Tuesday, July 3, at 8 p.m. on Prairie Public Television, and continuing for the next 12 weeks, Vietman: A Television History will again chronicle three decades of struggle in Vietnam.

From the first episode, "Roots of a War," through "America Takes Charge (1965-1967)," "Peace is at Hand (1968-1973)" and the final chapter, "Legacies," Vietman is a rich and moving analysis of the conflict in Vietman from many perspectives.

In the making of the series, members of Vietman's four production units (two American, one British and one French) consulted some 60 experts, gathered hundreds of interviews, researched 70 film archives worldwide, filmed in six countries and traveled the length of Vietman.

Series features interviews with ordinary soldiers and civilians and with key decision-makers, including Vietnam's General Vo Nguyen Giap and current Premier Pham Van Dong; former Emperor Bao Dai and Air Vice-Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky; General William Westmoreland, U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and dozens more participants.

Some 100 hours of archival footage — more than 200,000 feet of film — were compiled from sources in the U.S., the United Kingdom, Canada, Vietnam, East Germany, Japan, France, West Germany, Holland, Poland, Belgium and the United Nations for the extensive series.

International press response to Vietman: A Television History was phenomenal. In England, Richard West of The London Daily Telegram wrote, "Most of us known by now that if we have any special knowledge about a subject or place we are not impressed by its TV coverage. The Vietnam series was just the opposite. People like myself who spent a long time in Vietnam were the most impressed by it."

In this country, the series was acclaimed in virtually every major daily newspaper and nearly every national general-interest publication. CBS Sunday Morning's Ron Powers called it "a hard, clear, seamless diamond of TV journalism." People magazine noted, "If you don't watch anything else on television this year, watch this series." The New Yorker described the series as "magesterial."

Tom Shales of The Washington Post called Vietnam ". . . rigorous and gripping, insightful and scrupulously thorough. . . a landmark journey through 30 years of darkness." Eric Mink of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch praised Vietnam's "broad and accurate impressions of that most wretched of entaglements."

John Corry of The New York Times wrote in his year-end television review that "Whatever the purposes of journalism, surely one is to throw a cold, clear light on the past so that we may act more intelligently in the present. Vietnam, especially, did this to a remarkable degree.

Nielsen ratings estimated that more than six million households watched Vietnam each week during the series' 1983 premiere season. Individual one-hour episodes captured four spots on the list of the 10 most-watched PBS public affairs programs of 1983. The Vietnam telecourse offered in conjunction with the series attracted the highest enrollment in the history of the PBS Adult Learning Service, with more than 5,000 students in 160 colleges enrolled during the fall of 1983.

Series' companion book, Vietnam: A History, written by series chief correspondent Stanley Karnow, has become one of the biggest nonfiction sellers in the history of Viking Press, with sales of more than 300,000 copies.

This summer, a paperback edition will be published (Penguin, $10.95) to coincide with the re-release of the television series.

This program can be seen on any of Prairie Public Television's six stations — KFME (13) Fargo, KGFE (2) Grand Forks, KBME (3) Bismarck, KSRE (6) Minot, KDSE (9) Dickinson or KWSE (4) Williston.

Generic Listing

Vietnam: A Television History — a carefully crafted 13-hour documentary series, examines America's longest war in the context of France's earlier colonial experience in Southeast Asia and Vietnam's 2000-year history of resistance to foreign invaders. The programs provide a rich tapestry of archival footage combined with provocative interviews with participants on all sides of the political conflict.

"Roots of a War." Despite cordial relations between American intelligence officers and communist leader Ho Chi Minh in the turbulent closing months of World War II, French and British hostility to the Vietnamese revolution laid the groundwork for a new war.

"The First Vietnam War (1946-1954)." Frefch generals expected to defeat Ho's rag-tag Vietminh guerillas easily, but after eight years of fighting and $2.5 billion in U.S. aid, the French lost a crucial battle at Dien Bien Phu — and with it, their Asian empire.

"America's Mandarin (1954-1963)." Top stop the spread of communism in Southeast Asia, America replaced France in South Vietnam — supporting autocratic President Ngo Dinh Diem until his own generals turned against him in a coup that brought political chaos to Saigon.

"LBJ Goes to War (1964-1965)." With Ho Chi Minh determined to reunite Vietnam, Lyndon Baines Johnson determined to prevent it, and South Vietnam on the verge of collapse, the stage was set for massive escalation of the undeclared Vietnam War.

"America Takes Charge (1965-1967)." In two years, the Johnson Administration's troop build-up dispatched 1.5 million Americans to Vietnam to fight a war they found baffling, tedious, exciting, deadly and unforgettable.

"America's Enemy (1954-1967)." Vietnam War as seen from different perspectives; by Vietcong guerillas and sympathizers; by North Vietnamese leaders rank and file, and by Americans held prisoner in Hanoi.

"Tet, 1968." Massive enemy offensive at the lunar new year decimated the Vietcong and failed to topple the Saigon government but led to the beginning of America's military withdrawal from Vietnam.

"Vietnamizing the War (1968-1973)." Richard Nixon's program of troop pullouts, stepped-up bombing and hug arms shipments to Saigon changed the war and left GI's wondering which of them would be the last to die in Vietnam.

"Cambodia and Laos." Despite technical neutrality, both of Vietnam's smaller neighbors were drawn into the war, suffered massive bombing, and, in the case of Cambodia, endured a post-war holocaust of nightmare proportions.

"Peace is at Hand (1963-1973)." While American and Vietnamese soldiers continued to clash in battle, diplomats in Paris argued about making peace. After more than four years reached an accord that proved to be a preface to further bloodshed.

"Homefront USA." Through troubled years of controversy and violence, US casualities mounted, victory remained elusive and American opinion moved from general approval to general dissatisfaction with the Vietnam War.

"The End of The Tunnel (1973-1975)." South Vietnamese leaders believed that America would never let them go down to defeat — a belief that died as North Vietnamese tanks smashed into Saigon on April 30, 1975, and the long war ended with South Vietnam's surrender.

"Legacies." Vietnam is in the Soviet orbit, poorer than ever, at war on two fronts; America's legacy includes more than 500,000 million Asian refugees, 2.5 million Vietnam veterans and some questions that won't go away.

PROJECT RECORDS of two Pennington county 4-H members qualified for entry in state 4-H record judging at the University of Minnesota 4-H office in St. Paul. Scott Muzzy of Steiner 4-H club (top photo) is competing with his dairy project record. Tom Mickelson of Kratka 4-H club (bottom) has entered his horticulture project record. Both were finalists in the district 4-H record judging event last fall in Mahnomen.

Recurring Shoulder Pain Calls For Action Now

BY DR. PHILLIP J. BRUNO

Dr. Phillip J. Bruno

Shoulder pain, as a symptom, is easily recognized but seldom understood.

Earlier, less acute symptoms provide the tip-off. What often results in the aching, throbbing shoulder is a condition that began as stiff and tender "shawl" muscles across the top of the shoulders.

Left untreated that stiffness and tenderness can progress over a period of weeks to ultimately reach an intensity that is almost unbearable. Burning ache of shoulder can and often does extend into the neck and head.

Obviously, neck and shoulder movement then becomes increasingly difficult and painful. The first serious interest in correction frequently follows the frustration a person has who attempts to shave or comb the hair or shampoo it, as that action can cause an increase in sharpness of pain down the arm and tingling in the fingers.

Ultimately weakness and fatigue, tremor of the arm accompanies the pain and the muscles across the chest may become tender. The symptoms then are all the more recognizable and made more severe by coughing or sneezing.

Ultimately, nature responds to the incessant pain with varying degrees of immobility.

Shoulder and arm pain constitutes the most frequently recognized symptom of structural defects in the lower neck and upper spine.

Abnormally small or distorted nerve openings in the upper spine serve to irritate the nerves which pass through them to supply the shoulder, neck, arm, upper back and chest muscles. It follows that muscles supplied by irritated nerves themselves become tense, painful, and lose their normal elasticity and ability to relax.

The shoulder pain, tingling, and pain across the chest can be only the first of many problems. Upper back aches, headaches, pain and tenderness of the forearm, all are pieces of the composite pie.

Experience has shown that shoulder and arm pain respond to the specialized care offered by the Doctor of Chiropractic.

But the early warning symptoms of pain and tenderness are calls to action.

Shoulder and arm pain will probably never permanently correct themselves.

NOTE: Dr. Bruno maintains chiropractic offices at 1904 E. Greenwood St., Thief River Falls.

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team hosts Crookston Tuesday in a 7 p.m. game on the fairgrounds diamond that will be doubly important for Post 117.

It'll be a game that counts in both the Northwest League and the Ninth District Class AA standings.

Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Roseau, Warroad, Karlstad and Hallock form the seven-team Northwest League standings. Post 117 faces each of those teams twice on a home-and-home basis each summer to determine the league champion.

Traditionally, Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston are the league pace-setters, with Roseau a challenger, too. And with a Region 8A high school baseball title under its belt this spring, Roseau will likely be in the thick of the 1984 Northwest League pennant race.

East Grand Forks coach Dave Aker said in a preseason piece that he expected big things from his squad this year. He made it plain that he expected to be able to challenge at the Ninth District level. But East Grand Forks got off to a bad start with a 4-3 Northwest League loss to Karlstad and a doubleheader defeat at the hands of the defending Ninth District champion Moorhead Blues Thursday.

This year's Ninth District tournament format will once again be run in a two-class system, with the Moorhead Blues, Thief River Falls, Detroit Lakes, East Grand Forks, Fergus Falls and Crookston playing at the Class AA level while the smaller communities compete in the Class A level. The two tournament winners — Class AA and Class A — will meet in a two-out-of-three game series to determine the Ninth District representative at the state tournament.

A new twist was added to the Class AA set-up this summer though, when officials divided the six teams into two divisions for their regular season games that will determine the post-season tournament draws.

Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston will be the Class AA North teams, while the Moorhead Blues, Detroit Lakes and Fergus Falls will be the Class AA South teams. Tournament pairings will be determined upon the results of the games within just your own division. In other words, Thief River Falls' 6-4 Thursday night victory over Detroit Lakes, a Ninth District Class AA team, will not be used in determining tournament seeding positions, but Tuesday's Thief River Falls game against Crookston will.

An interesting game awaits Thief River Falls tonight when Post 117 visits Bemidji, a high school baseball rival but a member of the Sixth District, which includes the Brainerd and St. Cloud areas, in the American Legion program. Thief River Falls lost a pair of regular season one-run high school games against Bemidji this spring, but came back to beat the Lumberjacks in the recent North Sub-Region 8AA tournament semifinals.

Thief River Falls will also play at Red Lake Falls Wednesday before getting another strong test Friday in a doubleheader at Grand Forks.

American Legion baseball in Thief River Falls is a fine show at the fairgrounds diamond, where a good facility is complemented by the scoreboard-loud speaker system that adds a great deal of enjoyment to the spectators' viewing. And the number of people watching the games, while still is not large, is almost constantly growing. It's free entertainment that is starting to catch on with the community.

Miscellaneous

+ Detroit Lakes' Chad Meyhoff, a catcher who hit two towering home runs in Thursday's American Legion baseball game against Thief River Falls on the fairgrounds diamond here, has been named to the 25-member Minnesota All-State team for the tenth annual Lions all-star baseball tournament. The three-game series featuring graduating high school seniors from out-state Minnesota vs. the Metro All-Stars from the Twin Cities metropolitan area, will be played Friday and Saturday, June 22-23, at St. Paul's Municipal Stadium. A single 7:30 p.m. game will be played Friday and a 1 p.m. doubleheader will be played Saturday. The game is co-sponsored by the Minnesota Lions Clubs and the Minnesota High School Baseball Association. Meyhoff was captain of the 1984 Detroit Lakes high school team and a three-time selection to the Mid-State All-Conference team. Only other area player named to the all-star team was Park Rapids outfielder Tony Hicks.

TRF Babe Ruth Teams To Meet

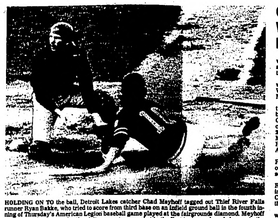
A meeting of all Babe Ruth 13-15-year-old baseball players and their parents will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Rex Cafe.



HOLDING ON TO the ball, Detroit Lakes catcher Chad Meyhoff tagged out Thief River Falls runner Ryan Bakke, who tried to score from third base on an infield ground ball in the fourth inning of Thursday's American Legion baseball game played at the fairgrounds diamond. Meyhoff hit a pair of home runs for the visitors — a two-run shot in the first inning and a solo homer in the fifth — but it wasn't enough as Post 117 registered a 6-4 victory.

TRF Wins Legion Game From Detroit Lakes 6-4

In back-to-back season-opening wins over Warroad and Detroit Lakes, the 1984 Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team hasn't had any overabundance of base hits. But that didn't seem to create any real problems as Post 117 blanked Northwest League foe Warroad 7-0 Tuesday and defeated Ninth District Class AA opponent Detroit Lakes 6-4 Thursday. Both games were played on the fairgrounds diamond here.

Thief River Falls produced just five base hits in the win over Warroad, and the total improved only slightly to six base hits in the victory over Detroit Lakes.

Four of those six hits came in the bottom of the fifth inning as Post 117 broke a 3-3 tie with a three-run frame. And of those four, one was a bunt and another was a bad-hop single.

It started with Lee Genereux, the No. 9 batter in the line-up, leading off with an opposite-field single to left. Rick Spong was then called upon to lay down a sacrifice bunt, and he did. But pitcher John Campion went to second base with the throw, and when shortstop Brian Schmitz was late getting to the bag, both runners were safe.

Signal for another sacrifice bunt loaded the bases with nobody out when Ryan Drees put the ball perfectly between the pitcher's mount and first base for a hit.

Tim Bottem then drove in two runs with a hard-hit ball that took a high hop over the head of second baseman Kevin Flynn. Brian Johnston hit a ground ball single right up the middle to load the bases again with still nobody out, and Ryan Bakke drew a full-count walk to force in a run for a 6-3 game. What could have been an even bigger inning died when Tim Nyland hit an infield pop-up; Bottom was out at the plate on an attempted steal of home; and Tom Knoff hit a fly ball to right field.

But that was still enough runs to off-set a pair of towering home runs hit by Detroit Lakes' Chad Meyhoff, a familiar name to Thief River Falls sports fans for his outstanding play in goal for the Detroit Lakes hockey team. He's a catcher in baseball. . . and a home run hitter.

In the first inning, Schmitz, the lead-off batter, opened the game by lining a shot off the glove of third baseman Cory Joppru. Meyhoff then belted a one-out 0-2 pitch high over the left-center field fence for a quick 2-0 Detroit Lakes lead.

Thief River Falls tied it in the second inning when Bakke reached base on a throwing error, stole second despite a pitch-out on the play and scored when Nyland dropped a single into left field. Nyland moved up on an errant pick-off throw and a wild pitch before scoring on a long double to left-center by Joppru.

Three Detroit Lakes errors allowed Post 117 to take a 3-2 lead in the fourth. Third baseman John Robinson had two of them on one play on a ball hit by Knoff, putting him at second and Bakke, who walked to open the inning, at third. A ground ball by Joppru found Bakke being thrown out at the plate while Knoff moved to third. Joppru's attempted steal of second resulted in an error as the ball skipped into the outfield, allowing Knoff to score.

One more swing of the bat by Meyhoff, though, tied the game when he again cleared the left field fence on a one-out, 2-0 pitch in the fifth.

Detroit Lakes, after surrendering those three runs in the bottom of the fifth, threatened to make a game of it in the top of the seventh when John Campion doubled deep to right-center with one out, Tom Campion beat out an infield single to shortstop and Robinson caromed an infield single off the glove of Drees on the mound for a run. But with a 6-4 score, one out and runners at first and second, Tom Campion apparently lost count of the outs and sprinted around third and toward home plate when Sean Peterson drilled a hard-hit line drive to right field. Genereux made the catch and Campion was easily doubled up at second to end the threat.

Thief River Falls has five games scheduled this week. Post 117 is scheduled to be at Bemidji tonight (Monday) for a 6:30 p.m. game; will host Crookston Tuesday at 7 p.m.; visit Red Lake Falls Wednesday at 7 p.m.; and play a doubleheader in Grand Forks Friday starting at 5 p.m.

TRF Babe Ruth Team Wins Four

Thief River Falls 14-15-year-old Babe Ruth baseball team swept doubleheaders from East Grand Forks Thursday and Red Lake Falls Friday for a 5-1 season record.

Coached by Wayne Huseth, Thief River Falls beat East Grand Forks 2-1 and 23-13, then shipped Red Lake Falls 23-0 and 25-5.

Thief River Falls will host Crookston Tuesday in an 11 a.m. doubleheader and will entertain Red Lake Falls Friday in a 10 a.m. twinbill.

TRF — EGF

Chris Nelson pitched a three-hitter as Thief River Falls edged East Grand Forks 2-1 in the first half of Thursday's doubleheader.

There were just four base hits for the winners, but two of them produced RBI's by Cory Joppru in the first inning and Tom Knoff in the Third.

Second game featured a lot more offense as Thief River Falls won a high-scoring 23-13 five-inning affair.

Mike Anderson was 5-for-5 in the winner's 19-hit attack, with Chris Bjorgaard going 4-for-5 and Brian Maki 3-for-4.

Winning pitcher was Jon Matson, who came on in relief of Bjorgaard in the third inning. East Grand Forks collected 10 hits off the two Thief River Falls pitchers.

TRF — RLF

Two one-sided games Friday required just five innings to complete.

Marty Levin pitched a no-hitter in the 23-0 opener that was called after two innings.

Mike Anderson was 3-for-3 while Tom Knoff and Chris Nelson were 2-for-4 in the 11-hit attack. Red Lake Falls had four of the game's five errors.

It was more of the same in the second game, 25-5, at Kurt Dupree pitched a two-hitter in a three-inning affair.

Thief River Falls collected 10 hits, with Rick Rosetta and Steve McGann both 3-for-4.

DETROIT LAKES base runner Brian Schmitz scampered back to first as Thief River Falls' Brian Johnston awaited the pick-off throw from pitcher Ryan Drees during the first inning of Thursday's American Legion baseball game played here. Schmitz was safe on the play. Thief River Falls won the game 6-4.

Grand Rapids, Windom Claim Baseball Titles

Grand Rapids and Windom won Class AA and Class A high school baseball tournament titles last week.

Class AA state tournament was played Tuesday and Wednesday at St. Paul's Municipal Stadium.

In opening round quarterfinals, Grand Rapids blanked Anoka 4-0, St. Paul Cretin defeated Region 8AA champion St. Cloud Apollo 16-2, New Ulm got by Rochester Mayo 7-5 and Hopkins edged Richfield Holy Angels Academy 4-2.

Grand Rapids handled St. Paul Cretin 10-2 and Hopkins out-scored New Ulm 11-9 in the semifinals.

It was an easy 10-0 Grand Rapids victory over Hopkins in the title game, with St. Paul Cretin beating New Ulm 7-0 in the third place game.

Class A state tournament was played at St. Cloud's Municipal Stadium.

In Thursday's opening round quarterfinals, Springfield shut out Hermantown 4-0, Windom defeated Region 8A champion Roseau 7-4, Perham doubled Montgomery-Lonsdale 6-3 and Winona Cotter shaded Delano 3-1.

Rain then forced play back from Friday to Saturday. In the semifinals, Windom slipped by Springfield 6-5 and Winona Cotter stopped Perham 3-0.

Windom beat Winona Cotter 2-0 in the title game. The rescheduled format after Friday's rain forced cancellation of the Class A third place game.

No. Sub-Region 8A Selects Honor Squad

Dean Hjelle, the only senior on the Middle River - Marshall County Central squad, was one of 11 players named to the 1984 All-North Sub-Region 8A high school baseball honor squad.

Hjelle, a pitcher-outfielder, was named to the team as an outfielder.

Region 8A champion Roseau led the selections with three, while Lake of the Woods had two and Red Lake Falls, Greenbush, Tri-County, Warroad and Middle River - Marshall County Central were all represented by one pick.

Roseau players named were pitcher Rod Eastman, second baseman Perry Pastir and outfielder Neal Feldman.

Lake of the Woods selections were pitcher Wayne Chapman and first baseman Joe Krouss.

Rest of the choices were catcher Gary LaChance, Red Lake Falls; shortstop John Wilebski, Greenbush; third baseman Chris Olson, Tri-County; outfielder Dion Hebel, Warroad; and designated hitter Jeff Larson, Tri-County.

Thirteen players were given honorable mention status, including Danny Cwikla, Middle River Marshall County Central.

RUNNER-UP finisher Sunday in the annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club was Jay Moum of Thief River Falls with a 27-hole 111, one shot behind championship flight winner Jeff Evin of Warren. Moum is shown here chipping on to the No. 1 green to start the final nine-hole round Sunday afternoon.

Father's Day Tourney . . .

Warren Golfer Wins TRF Title

A different championship flight winner emerged for the eighth straight year Sunday during the annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club.

This time around it was Jeff Evin of Warren who went home a winner with a 27-hole 110 and a one-shot victory margin over runner-up Jay Moum of Thief River Falls. Marv Carlson of Thief River Falls finished third in the six-player championship flight finals yesterday afternoon.

Moum and Jeff Noel of Thief River Falls were co-leaders after 18 holes at 75, but Moum had trouble putting at the start of the final nine-hole round and Noel dropped back as Evin, who was tied with Carlson at 78 after 18, took over.

Jerry Johnson and Steve Waale of Thief River Falls rounded out the six-player finals, both starting the final nine at 82.

Not since Scott Harris of Roseau won back-to-back titles in 1976 and 1977 has a golfer repeated as Father's Day tournament champion here. Wade Hoppe of Thief River Falls won it in 1978, Tom Zieman of Thief River Falls in 1979, Jeff Jessen of Dickenson, N.D. in 1980, Moum in 1981, Alex Easton of Thief River Falls in 1982 and Lee Sorensen of Red Lake Falls in 1983.

Results in the other flights yesterday included:

First flight — 1. Dick Tyler; 2. Monte Markstrom; cons. Bob Evans.

Second flight — 1. Art Welter; 2. Karl Carlson, Karlstad; cons. Mark Neuman, Bemidji.

Third flight — 1. Larry Lee; 2. Bill Corliss; cons. Dean Anderson.

Fourth flight — 1. Mark Haugen; 2. Bud Evans; cons. Keith Hoverstad.

TIED FOR THE lead after 18 holes of the championship flight, Thief River Falls' Jeff Noel chipped on to the No. 1 green to start the final nine-hole round in the annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club. Noel failed to maintain the lead, however, as Jeff Evin of Warren won the 27-hole event with a 110 and Jay Moum of Thief River Falls finished second at 111.

Karlstad Wins Title In TRF Bombers Tourney

Karlstad defeated Grafton 6-4 Sunday afternoon in the finals of American Legion baseball tournament hosted by the Thief River Falls B team Bombers.

Tournament opened Friday night when Karlstad edged the Thief River Falls Bombers 5-4.

On Sunday, Warroad beat Fertile 11-6 and Grafton routed Red Lake Falls 16-0 to complete the first round, with Bagley receiving a bye in the seven-team field.

Karlstad then handled Warroad 12-4 and Grafton got by Bagley 5-4 in the semifinals, with Red Lake Falls taking the Thief River Falls Bombers 3-1 in the only game played in the loser's bracket after Fertile withdrew from the tournament after its first loss.

On Sunday, Warroad defeated Bagley 7-4 in the third place game before Karlstad claimed the championship trophy.

It was a frustrating opening week of the 1984 season for coach Mark Harder's Thief River Falls Bombers, who lost five close games. It started with a 4-3 Tuesday night setback at the hands of Warroad, and included a doubleheader loss at the hands of the East Grand Forks VFW Wednesday by 2-1 and 5-3 scores, plus the two tournament losses.

And the defeat at the hands of a strong Karlstad squad was made even more frustrating when the Bombers let a 4-0 third inning lead slip away.

Karlstad, out-hit 8-7, was held in check by Thief River Falls pitcher Tim Nyland until the final two innings when the winners pushed two runs across the plate in both frames.

Lee Hamre was 2-for-3 at the plate for the Bombers.

Hits were even at four apiece and errors were even at three apiece, but Thief River Falls lost a 3-1 Saturday game to Red Lake Falls when the Bombers surrendered two runs in the second inning and two more in the third.

Tom Knoff was the losing pitcher. Lone Thief River Falls run crossed the plate in the fourth on a single by Dan Iverson and an error.

Bombers will host Crookston Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. — following a Thief River Falls A game vs. Crookston at 7 — and will host Fosston Thursday in a single 8:30 p.m. game.

Fast Pitch Softball . . .

Rains End TRF Far North Meet

Rain showers that hit Thief River Falls late Sunday afternoon put an abrupt end to the nine-team Far North fast pitch softball tournament being played on the three fairgrounds diamonds.

Officials credited Moose Lodge of Bemidji, the defending District 7 champion, as the Far-North tournament winner in the two-division, round-robin format as they took a 4-3 six-inning lead over Schmidts-Coke of Thief River Falls off the diamond when the rains flooded the fields.

Moose Lodge opened with a 9-0 victory over Popplers of Thief River Falls and then edged Bergseth Bros. of Detroit Lakes 6-5 before meeting Schmidts-Coke.

Schmidts-Coke, meanwhile, posted a 3-0 first round victory over Bergseth Bros. and received a second-round bye.

Elsewhere, Rux Painting of Grand Forks shut out McArthur Foods of Detroit Lakes 6-0; Jim Beaton Sales of Detroit Lakes blanked Widman Candy of Grand Forks 5-0; McArthur Foods defeated United Satellite Systems of Thief River Falls 4-1; Popplers beat Rux Painting 6-2; United Satellite Systems ripped Jim Beaton Sales 15-3; Widman Candy got by McArthur Foods 4-2; and Rux Painting dropped Jim Beaton Sales 7-0 on a no-hitter by pitcher Greg LaDoucer.

It was the first Far North tournament, normally an annual affair, played here in three years. The tournament was cancelled the past two years because of a lack of entries, and this year's format was altered because of a small field.

HOWARD DALAGER pitched a 3-0 shutout for Thief River Falls entry Schmidts-Coke against Detroit Lakes' Bergseth Bros. in the opening round of play during Sunday's nine-team Thief River Falls fast pitch softball invitational tournament at the fairgrounds.

Mike Drury pitched a two-hit shutout Friday as Schmidts-Coke ended a season-opening three-game Hamms-Coors winning streak with a 3-0 decision.

Schmidts-Coke did most of its damage in the top of the first inning when Kevin Sanders drew a walk and advanced to second on Howard Dalager's sacrifice bunt. Mark Lundin doubled to center for a run and scored on a single by Drury.

An insurance run crossed the plate in the seventh on a Jim Hallamek single and two errors.

Drury worked on a no-hitter until Bruce Johnson's lead-off single in the fifth inning.

United Satellite Systems worked its way into the league lead with a 2-0 record by beating Melvies 7-1 in the second half of Friday's doubleheader action.

A five-run second inning for the winners included a walk, a single by Bob Huot, two Melvies errors and a three-run home run over the center field fence by Tim Bottem.

United Satellite Systems picked up another run in the fourth and one more in the sixth on Bottem's second homer of the game.

Melvies averted the shutout in the top of the sixth on a walk to Jeff Milender and a run-scoring single by Jeff Johnson.

Babe Ruth Prep Team Starts 4-0

Four wins in two doubleheader outings last week made it a successful season-opening debut for the Thief River Falls Prep Babe Ruth baseball team for 13-year-olds.

Coached by Jim Hallamek, Thief River Falls beat East Grand Forks 6-2 and 7-6 Monday on the road, then took Roseau 13-7 and 14-10 Wednesday at home.

Three doubleheaders await the team this week, with Thief River Falls hosting East Grand Forks today (Monday), visiting Roseau Wednesday and driving to Crookston Thursday. First games start at 11 a.m. each day.

TRF - EGF

Winning pitcher Rick Looker notched 17 strike-outs as Thief River Falls opened the 1984 season with a 6-2 first-game win over East Grand Forks Monday. He gave up just two hits.

A three-run third inning gave Thief River Falls a 4-0 lead and a two-run seventh padded the margin after East Grand Forks narrowed the gap to 4-2.

Hunter Boldt was 3-for-3 and Deanne Thompson 3-for-4 in the winner's 11-hit attack.

Thief River Falls had three of the game's five errors.

A six-run fourth inning made Thief River Falls a 7-6 second-game winner at East Grand Forks, although it required a run in the seventh inning to insure the decision.

Thompson was credited with the win on the mound, with Boldt getting a save. They combined on a three-hitter, but issued 10 walks, and Thief River Falls had three of the game's four errors.

TRF - Roseau

Robby Coltom was 3-for-4 as Thief River Falls out-scored Roseau 13-7 in the first half of Wednesday's doubleheader at the fairgrounds diamond.

Thief River Falls had an 8-6 base hit edge, but bunched all of its scoring in two innings with a seven-run third and a six-run sixth. The two team divided 21 walks, but Roseau had seven of the game's nine errors.

Sean Myhrer was the starting pitcher, but he gave way to Looker, and Boldt finished on the mound.

Three Thief River Falls pitchers were also required before the 14-10 nightcap victory was nailed down.

Dean DuChamp was credited with the win, while Coltom got a save and Boldt also made a mound appearance.

Myhrer was 3-for-4 at the plate, with Thief River Falls getting out-hit 8-7. The winners also issued 13 walks and collected six errors. Roseau gave up six walks and had just one error.

Teams Needed For Softball At Middle River

Middle River Jaycees are still looking for several more teams to complete the entry list for their eight-team, single elimination mixed slow pitch softball tournament to be conducted Saturday, June 23.

Teams are to consist of an equal number of men and women. Entry fee will be $40 plus a new ball and prizes will be given for first and second place and consolation winner. Registration or information is available by calling 223-3410 or 222-3528.

TG Sporting Goods, after watching Hamms-Pizza Hut rally to gain a 6-6 tie in the top of the seventh, answered that run on the strength of Duane Gonsorowski's game-winning RBI base hit in the bottom of the inning for a 7-6 Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball league Division I victory Thursday.

It was a doubleheader sweep for TG Sporting Goods, a 6-0 shutout winner over Nelson Implement in the opener.

Stone's Mobile Radio was also a doubleheader winner in Division II, beating Fleet Supply 5-2 and knocking off Mello-Yello 12-1.

Elsewhere, The Aggies out-scored The Blacksheep 15-10, Coors defeated Fleet Supply 12-8, Norwest Insurance decisioned Big Johns-Meadowbrook 17-5, American Legion-Miller Beer doubled the Grygla Merchants 10-5 and the St. Hilaire Bears dropped the Grygla Merchants 7-2.

It was a busy week for the Grygla Merchants, who also played twice on Wednesday, but with different results as they shut out The Source-Wennberg's Welding 11-0 and downed Falls Clinic 8-3.

Friday's results, minus scores, found Mello-Yello sweeping a make-up doubleheader from Jack Daniels and Hardees, while The Aggies split a twinbill, beating Fleet Supply but losing to Coors.

Those results moved Coors atop the Division II standings at 7-1, while 6-2 Hardees dropped from first to third behind 7-2 Stone's Mobile Radio.

Volume 73 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Wednesday, June 20, 1984 Number 50

SERIOUSNESS of the subject matter was evident on the faces of most people attending a conference on emerging groundwater issues in Northwest Minnesota, held here recently. Over 70 people registered for the conference, which dealt with legal, medical and social aspects of groundwater use and abuse. Conference was sponsored by the Agassiz Environmental Education Council; Pennington, Roseau, Kittson, Marshall, Polk and Norman counties; Minnesota Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts; Minnesota DNR division of waters; Minnesota Groundwater Association; and the Northwest Regional Development Commission.

Groundwater Issues Said Growing In Importance

Over 70 people registered for a conference on "Emerging Groundwater Issues" held at Northland community college in Thief River Falls on June 13, where they learned that problems involved with groundwater use are growing more complex all of the time.

Eight speakers, recognized as experts in their individual fields, addressed the conference, including: Larry Seymour, director, division of waters, department of natural resources, who spoke on "Why Care About Groundwater"; Daniel C. Gillies, U.S. Geological Survey, "Basics of Groundwater"; Sarah Tufford, division of waters, department of natural resources, "How Do the Basics Apply to the Red River Valley?"; Dr. Joseph Rossillon, executive director, Freshwater Foundation, "Emerging Groundwater Policy Issues"; Mike Hansel, Minnesota pollution control agency, "How Does Groundwater Get Contaminated?"; Ron Thompson, Minnesota department of health, "Abandoned Wells and Well Protection"; and Gunilla Montgomery, Minnesota department of health, "Effects of Groundwater Pollutants on Human Health".

According to Tufford, groundwater in the Red River Valley area suffers from poor drainage and poor quality. She identified the major aquifer (water bearing soil) as a band of fine sand in the center of the region, which was once the beach ridge for glacial Lake Agassiz. She noted that even though that groundwater does suffer some problems, contamination of Red Lake and the Red River by sewage disposal makes investigation of groundwater sources a viable alternative to those major sources.

She described two cases in the Crookston area relating to groundwater rights, in which pumping city wells interfered with a private flowing well and with groundwater use by an irrigator. Both cases were decided in favor of the city.

At Moorhead, however, a combined usage attempt would have produced a conflict between the city and irrigators, and was discussed with the department of

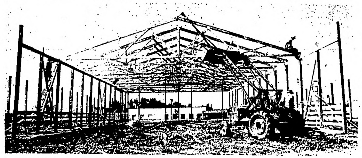
County Judging Team Took 1st At Sheep Days

Penington county 4-H general livestock judging team took first place of the 11 teams at the Greenbush Sheep days recently, the second year in a row that a team from Pennington county won first place in Greenbush.

There were four 4-H members who participated in the three-day event. Team members included Todd Carlson of Happy Acres 4-H club, (who also placed fourth individually) Cindi Solem of City View 4-H and Daryl Rupprecht of Silverton. Matthew Carlson, also of Happy Acres 4-H, judged individually. Judging team is coached by Pete Solem.



CONSTRUCTION is well underway on the pole building being constructed on the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls. The building is expected to be ready for the 1984 county fair in mid-July and will be a key element in reorganizing exhibit space for the annual exposition. The pole building will be used for livestock and possibly for horses as well. The curling club building which had previously housed livestock will be used for some exhibits previously housed in the sports arena. This will permit more attractive display of items in the arena and provide room for moving some grandstand entertainment programs indoors if necessitated by weather.

Inter-City Gets OK For Gas Rate Hike

Fred Little, vice president and general manager of Inter-City Gas corporation, reports that the Minnesota Public Utilities commission (MPUC) has approved Inter-City's request for an increase in base rates.

The increase goes into effect June 20 and concludes a year-long process of need justification through a series of public meetings. Public hearings were held in October and evidentiary hearings in November of 1983, the latter before a hearing examiner.

To the average residential gas customer, the increase means approximately $1.85 more per month.

Final base rates were developed based on MPUC's order on the case issued April 19, 1984, which authorized the company to collect a total annual revenue of $2.78 million, or a 5.5 per cent increase. Inter-City Gas had requested an overall increase of $3.25 million, or 6.4 per cent. Since MPUC authorized Inter-City to begin collecting interim rates in the amount of $2.7 million or 5.4 per cent on Aug. 9, 1983, customers have been paying a major portion of the approved increase since August.

Inter-City Gas corporation serves 20,000 customers in 44 communities in northern Minnesota. The regional office is located in Cloquet, with district offices in Cloquet, Chisholm, International Falls, Thief River Falls and Wadena.

New Solum Township Sets Centennial

Softball, horseshoe and other games will be played.

"A Century of History" is the title of the historical book which follows the growth, development and changes in the township over the years from the time the first settlers arrived in 1882. Pictures of people, buildings and landmarks are included for the township which has wooded sandy ridges, open flatlands and deep swamps.

Official history of the township begins Oct. 11, 1884, when a group of farmers met at the Rasmus Nelson home to discuss and fill out the necessary legal forms to submit to the Marshall county board of commissioners to establish a new township. New Solum was chosen as the name because of a district by the same name in Norway.

Thirty-nine men attended the first township meeting March 10, 1885, at the Ole Hanson home. Hans Hanson was chosen moderator. Carl Hanson, Reinert Nelson, Halvor Halvorson and Peder Evenson were chosen overseers with Charles Rasmusson and Rasmus Nelson named judges.

Ole Hanson was elected township clerk; Gunder Vigen, treasurer; Christian Hansen, assessor; Gunder Evenson, justice of the peace; S.E. Gordem and Louis Thompson, constables; Halvor Halvorson, Hans Mork and Rasmus Nelson, supervisors; and Charles Rasmussen and Gunder Evenson, poundmasters. The latter were responsible for stray animals that infringed on the property of others since few fences had been built at that time.

The historical book traces the development of the township up to the present time.

Setesdals Lag To Note 75th Anniversary

several generations.

Twenty-fifth anniversary meeting was held in Thief River Falls with music provided by Bjorn Tveitbakk. Taking part in the program were J.O. Melby, Ellen Kolstoe, Dreng Bjornaraa, Gunder Kolshus, Olav Ormbrekk, Anne Knutson, Thaoma Vollum and Dr. Aasgard.

In 1940 the meeting was held in Crookston with Dr. Richard Beck from Iceland among the main speakers. Others were Halvor Langslet, Arne Grundeson, Olav Birkeland, Gunder Herjuson, Berent Sorbo, Gunder Knutson, Olav Torbjornson, Gunder Nesland and Kjetil Rikje.

In 1942 the lag had its lowest point in history. Its leadership was struck by illness or retirement, World War II was underway and Setesdal itself was over-run by Nazi Germany. Olaf Neset took over the presidency and when he moved to Spokane, WA, in 1948 he was succeeded by Thore Skomedal, who is still living alone at the age of 95.

Persons later active in the organization as officers of musicians included Selma Bjornaraa Johnson, Halvor Omlid, John G. Johnson, Aanund Rystad, Eivind Aakhus, Bjorn Tveitbakk, Sam Sorenson, Halvor Langslet, Ole S. Birkeland, Halvor G. Homme, Dr. John G. Arneberg and Judge M.A. Brattlund.

Groundwater Issues Grow In Importance

natural resources. Possibility of supplementing natural groundwater recharge with artificial recharge was then determined to be feasible. After purchasing a portion of a section of land to obtain water rights and receiving a permit from the DNR to proceed, the plan was never carried out because there was no legal means to precisely define the city's rights to the water beneath the ground.

Dr. Rossillon noted that groundwater issues are becoming more important all of the time, describing seven major policy issues which will be affecting Minnesota in the next few years:

First was the need to clean up hazardous waste sites, especially abandoned underground gas tanks which are leaking toxic wastes into the groundwater.

Second issue was the exclusion of groundwater from the national clean water act. Rossillon noted that there is presently no national policy requiring that groundwater be kept clean and free from contamination.

Third, and of primary importance to this area, he said that the practice of burying wastes, including human, hazardous and solid wastes, contributes greatly to groundwater pollution, noting that both state and local governments will have to seek alternative means of disposal, such as recycling.

Fourth issue listed was the leaching of nitrates from agricultural practices, which has grown in significance with the discovery that nitrates can cause cancer in adults, as well as anemia in babies. Leaching of pesticides and herbicides into groundwater was listed as the fifth issue.

Sixth major problem listed by Rossillon was that of obsolete sewage treatment systems, especially those which fail to remove traces of heavy metals from the water.

Seventh issue was the increased draw-down of groundwater supplies due to such practices as irrigation. Rossillon stated that draw-down has increased 10 times in the last 10 years and will continue to increase. As an example, he noted that the Oglala aquifer in North Dakota is drawn down six feet per year, but is only replenished naturally at a rate of one inch per year.

Thompson noted that abandoned and broken wells can provide a major hazard to groundwater purity by providing an opening that allows surface runoff to gain access to deep underground sources. He showed slides of a number of improperly capped wells, some of which were in the vicinity of highly polluted disposal areas. He noted that abandoned wells should be permanently capped, by filling them with a material at least as impermeable as surrounding soils.

Montgomery noted that the range of medical effects of groundwater pollutants varied widely, ranging from no ill effects, to severe illness and death. She also noted that effects of some pollutants could be cumulative, or result in diseases such as cancer, which might not be noticable for an extended period of time. She also noted that some chemicals could be considered necessary for life in trace amounts, but become toxic in larger amounts.

Conference was concluded with a panel discussion by the resource personnel, who answered questions and summarized major points made during the day. With the wide variety of pollutants threatening the groundwater supply, and no quick and inexpensive test presently available to detect their presence, the need for preventive measures was emphasized. With 94 per cent of communities using groundwater for their water supply, the need to protect it is imperative.

GIRL SCOUT DAY CAMP is being conducted this week at Camp MOE, located southeast of the Thief River Falls regional airport. Rainfall Tuesday morning dampened campsites and outside activity areas and forced the approximately 65 participants indoors. This group of Brownie scouts was working on a craft project to make miniature old-fashioned wall telephones. They were located in the shelter at Camp MOE. Older girls and their leaders hiked the short distance to Valhall where they were given instruction on first aid procedures.

Elderhostel Program Is Slated At MSU

Prairie — its landscape, literature and history — will be the focus of Elderhostel at Moorhead state university this summer, a program offering people over 60 a chance to live and learn on campus for a week.

Moorhead state is one of 28 Minnesota campuses that will offer Elderhostel programs this year. The session here is scheduled July 15 to 21.

Inspired by the youth hostels and folk schools of Europe, Elderhostel offers people over 60 a chance to live in campus dormitories along with other summer students, enroll in one to three week-long classes and take part in a schedule of field trips, cultural events and other special activities.

People don't have to be college or ever high school graduates to enroll. Age is the only requirement. Spouses may register together and both are eligible even if only one is over 60. There are no exams, no grades.

Cost is $190 and includes room, board, tuition and extracurricular activities. The Otto Bremer foundation has donated Elderhostel scholarship money for people who live in surrounding Bremer Bank communities (Alexandria, Brainerd, Brandon, Breckenridge, Crookston, Detroit Lakes, Warren and Willmar).

Elderhostel classes scheduled at MSU the week of July 15 to 21:

—"An Archeologist's Primer of the Red River Valley," taught by Mike Michlovic, an archeologist with years of field experience in the Red River Valley. This class will look at bones, pottery and other pre-historic remnants discovered at local dig sites. Field trips, slide shows and a look at ongoing excavations will be included.

—"Exploring Islands in the Prairie Ocean," taught by Richard Pemble, a biologist at MSU and a specialist in the prairie environment. Pemble will talk about the unique biological landscape of the prairie and supplement it with field trips to several preserved virgin prairie sites, all within a few miles of the university.

—"Reading the Prairie," taught by Mark Vinz, MSU's poet-in-residence. This class will look at the words and visions the vast prairie experience gave to the people and families who settled the rich, but ornery soil.

Hostelers will arrive on campus on a Sunday, returning home the following Saturday morning. Classes last one or two hours each day and hostelers may take just one or all three offered that week.

Agassiz Health Agency Awards $990 To NWRDC

Northwest Regional Development Commission's adult foster care and respite care programs have been awarded $990 by Agassiz Health Systems Agency to provide for monthly workshops in Newfolden, Thief River Falls and Ada.

Workshops are intended to provide caregivers with training on specific coping skills and strategies and establish support groups for caregiver information sharing and emotional support.

County social service workers involved in adult foster care will act as facilitators and assure the continuity of support groups after the workshops are completed. This project coordinates adult foster care and respite care, thus combining resources and staff expertise and building a stronger professional network.

For the second year, Agassiz Heath Systems Agency, which is responsible for health planning in 22 counties of northwest Minnesota and northeast North Dakota, has provided funds for local community groups to undertake health-related projects. Agassiz requested grant applications to address four specific health areas: adolescent-young adult problems; community resources for the elderly-disabled, promoting health and independence; accident prevention-citizen involvement in emergency medical services; and coordination-sharing of community health related services.

More than 40 groups presented projects for Agassiz consideration. In each case, the applying group relied on volunteer participation and-or its own resources for part of its project, requesting funds for educational materials, supplies, travel and program development.

Seventeen projects received total or partial funding through this program.

DNR Officials Ask Mowing To Be Delayed

Wildlife officials of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) are urging farmers and other rural landowners to delay the mowing of roadsides until August 1.

For the next several months, Minnesota's state, county and township road rights-of-way will be playing an important role as a nesting area for wildlife. Early disturbance, especially mowing, can almost eliminate nest success for pheasants and more than 40 other species of wildlife including Hungarian partridge, mallard, pintail, teal, meadowlark and yellow-throated warbler.

Roger Holmes, DNR Wildlife Chief, said that there are more than a quarter million acres of roadside habitat in the pheasant range of southern and western Minnesota. "Unfortunately", he said, "nearly 40 per cent of the nests are destroyed each year by early mowing.

"Studies have shown that up to half of all pheasant hens nest in grassy roadsides, despite the fact that they make up only about two per cent of the total land area of the region.

"If left undistrubed, roadside nest densities may exceed one nest per acre of roadside cover for pheasants and up to 15 nests per acre for songbirds.

"The state's pheasant population was hit hard by severe weather again this past winter. With current clean-farming methods, the roadsides offer one of the few nesting places for pheasants and other upland game. Protection of the roadsides from mowing until after August 1st, when most of the hatch is over, is vital if we are to bring upland wildlife populations back to levels we had before last winter".

Wet Conditions Pose Hazard To State's Crops

Extreme wet conditions continued to threaten crops and delay field operations, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. An average of only 1.3 days were suitable for fieldwork during the week. Heavy rainfall amounts were again received over large areas of the state.

Mechanical cultivation, herbicide and nitrogen applications, and putting up dry hay were among the scheduled activities which became impossible for the time being. Topsoil moisture as of June 15 was rated 23 per cent adequate and 77 per cent surplus.

Some farmers hope to replant parts of their fields that have drowned or washed away, but a week or more of sunny, dry weather will be required before replainting can be done. Soybeans and potatoes are crops mentioned as possibilities for replanting.

In flooded fields, even where loss of the stand has not occurred, there are still problems related to water stress, including disease susceptibility. Conditions are ideal for grain leaf diseases to break out, so small grain farmers are planning to do aerial spraying of fungicides.

First cultivation of field corn is 22 per cent completed versus 28 per cent a year ago and 45 per cent for the five-year average. Average height of field corn at eight inches exceeds last year's six inches and equals the five-year average. Field corn condition is rated 41 per cent poor to fair and 59 per cent good to excellent.

Soybeans are 91 per cent emerged compared with 77 per cent last year and 84 per cent for the five-year average. An estimated seven per cent of soybean first cultivation has been completed versus 11 per cent last year and 23 per cent for the five-year average. Average soybean height of three inches compares with two inches in 1983 and is the same as the five-year average.

Spring wheat is 60 per cent jointing compared with 43 per cent a year ago and 50 per cent for the five-year average. Heading of spring wheat has reached three per cent versus four per cent last year and 13 per cent for the five-year average.

Oats are 59 per cent jointing versus 45 per cent last year and 54 per cent for the five-year average. Oats heading at four per cent compares with two per cent last year and 13 per cent for the five-year average.

Barley is 63 per cent jointing and four per cent heading compared with five-year averages of 50 per cent and 15 per cent, respectively.

Sunflower first cultivations are 20 per cent complete versus 16 per cent last year and 34 per cent for the five-year average. Average height of five inches compares with four inches for the five-year average. Flax planting is 96 per cent complete, the same as the five-year average. Sugarbeet condition is reported as 51 per cent poor to fair and 49 per cent good to excellent.

Hay crops were ready for harvest but hay making fell behind normal progress because of the frequent heavy rains. Silo filling with chopped hay proceeded slowly where fields were firm enough, but most producers of dry hay are waiting for a break in the weather before they will start cutting. Most of the hay cut has been lying for a week or more without any good opportunity for baling. The first crop of alfalfa hay is only 28 per cent cut versus 39 per cent last year and 44 per cent for the five-year average. Alfalfa weevil infestations have been reported from the central and east central districts.

Herbicide Use Requires Look At Priorities

Wet field conditions have interrupted chemical weed control plans for most farmers who planned to use ground sprayer for application of post emergent herbicide, and aerial sprayers are having difficulty keeping up with requests for timely application, according to county extension director, Terry Courneya.

This presents a difficult problem for farmers, especially those who have grassy weeds such as wild oats and foxtail (pigeon grass) in small grains and solid seeded soybeans. Courneya indicates the window of effectiveness for herbicides on these weeds is quite narrow so timing is very important.

While timing is important for broadleaf weed control as well, herbicide choices and window of effectiveness are considerably greater. With this in mind, farmers are encouraged to give priority to wild oat and foxtail control if they have to make a choice in the face of limited availability of aerial application.

Those with ground application equipment still have a week or two, depending on planting date, in which to apply relatively low cost, broad leaf herbicides on small grains and corn that will achieve acceptable control. The options on soybeans are fewer and relatively high cost. Cultivation and land application of herbicides can reduce this cost and should be considered as soon as field conditions permit.

Musical Team To Perform At Erskine

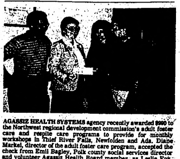
United Methodist church of Erskine will host the musical team "The Ambassadors of Praise" in concert Sunday at 8 p.m.

This Fosston based choir, under the direction of Rayome C. Koehler, has some 20 singers and instrumentalists who come from Fisher, Crookston, Erskine, Fertile, McIntosh, Lengby, Fosston, Clearbrook, Leonard, Shevlin and Pinewood.

Instruments used in the evening's concert will include piano, organ, harp, guitar, accordion, saxaphone, clarinet, harmonica, trumpet, Pakistani brass bells, glockenspiel and assorted percussion instruments.

Ages of the members range from teenagers to 80 years of age. There is no charge for the concert which is open to the public and a fellowship lunch will be served.



AGASSIZ HEALTH SYSTEMS agency recently awarded $990 to the Northwest regional development commission's adult foster care and respite care programs to provide for monthly workshops in Thief River Falls, Newfolden and Ada. Diane Markel, director of the adult foster care program, accepted the check from Emil Bagley, Polk county social services director and volunteer Agassiz Health Board member, as Leslie Fox, director of the respite care program, and Tom Jorgens, executive director of NWRDC, looked on.

STEVE FELCHLE, agricultural loan officer at Norwest bank in Thief River Falls, has accepted a position at Norwest bank in Mandan, ND, and will begin his duties there on July 2. He has worked in the ag department here since May of 1981. Steve and his wife Carlene will be moving to Mandan in July.

"LIVE YOUR DREAMS" was the theme of the 1984 junior leadership conference, held this past week in Minneapolis-St. Paul. Pennington county junior leaders who attended the conference included John Hamre of Smiley; Edna Johnson, Sanders; Lynn Johnson, Silverton; Kristi Sorteberg, Smiley; Loren Haagenson, Silverton; and Lana Wagner, Silverton. This statewide conference, open to all junior leaders, ages 14-19, provides teens with opportunities to improve communication skills, develop self-pride, motivate concern for society, and share experiences with peers. Haagenson was part of the Northwest Arts-In, which provided entertainment at the conference; and Wagner was the Pennington county representative at the Minnesota 4-H Federation, a 4-H promotional organization that meets during the conference. Other activities during the week included presentations on self-awareness and development, visits to the Omni Theatre, songfests, break dancing, a Minnesota vs. Scotland soccer game, and a Chanhassen dinner theatre production. For more information on the youth program contact the Pennington county extension service at 681-2116.

REPORT
From The Minnesota House of Representatives

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

The soaring 40-story world trade center to be built in downtown St. Paul will become the symbol of a new era in the Minnesota economy — if the plans of Governor Perpich and the legislature to plug into the world economy prove successful.

Governor Perpich's efforts to sell Minnesota abroad have been no secret; it was part of his campaign pledge when he ran for office in 1982. During the 1983-84 session, both he and the legislature developed a two-part plan for promoting Minnesota exports.

One part of the plan is to open new world markets and increase Minnesota exports. Last year, the Minnesota legislature appropriated over $5 million to create the Minnesota trade office. The trade office is expected to expand international markets for Minnesota businesses by identifying various foreign markets, and by providing financial assistance and other support services as needed.

The new world trade center — under the direction of the world trade commission — will also help open new markets and increase state exports by providing a clearinghouse for foreign buyers and Minnesota businesses.

The second part of the legislature's marketing plan is to broaden the range of state exports, particularly farm products. Perhaps the most important action taken in this area was the adoption of the agri-processing bill during the 1984 session.

Approximately 40 per cent of the goods produced in Minnesota are agricultural. But as the state learned from the Iron Range, it is not enough to rely on specialized raw products. To ensure against fickle markets abroad, and at the same time increase export revenues coming into the state, we must diversify our products.

The agri-processing program provides state-guaranteed loans to businesses which process Minnesota's abundant farm resources into food, energy and farm and industrial products.

First, and most important, it will provide new markets for state farmers. Second, it will provide jobs, often in the rural areas that have been drained by the severe farm economy of the past few years. Finally, rather than exporting raw farm products for a lower price, processed agricultural goods will increase export revenues coming into Minnesota.

According to a recently published book, "Cities and the Wealth of Nations" by Jane Jacobs, diversification is crucial not only for cities, but for keeping a vigorous farm economy and protecting the family farm.

Although the book is primarily about cities — and how they, not nations, are the source of wealth — there are some important statements about the rural sector.

Jacobs says that as the international economy grew, farming became more specialized and products travelled farther and farther from home. This put rural areas in the precarious position of being supply regions, with specialized products being more susceptible to political and market changes abroad.

Her solution for local regions — both cities and farms — is to become more self-sufficient in food and other products. States should also move away from being strictly suppliers of raw products. Instead, they should develop a broader range of processed goods to be exported.

Through its trade legislation, Minnesota has moved in that direction. It has taken the first steps to build a new economy, one shared by both rural and urban areas.

Because of the election laws in Minnesota, this will be the last discussion column I will be able to publish until after the November general election.

I would like to thank the editors and the readers of this newspaper for the opportunity to present various issues to you in my periodic columns.

I will still be in contact with you through news releases and announcements, and I continue to welcome your comments and questions.

Refined Gasoline Is Leading U.S. Import From China

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Refined gasoline, it may come as a surprise, ranks as the leading U.S. import from the People's Republic of China. In 1784, when the first American cargo ship set sail for the Orient, it was tea that the newly independent nation especially craved.

Porcelain tableware and luxurious bolts of silk were also sought by intrepid American merchants when the highly competitive China trade began. Today, after gasoline, major imports from China include outer garments, crude oil, footwear, tin and fireworks.

Through the years, commercial relations between the two nations have ebbed and flowed with changes in political currents, but the present $5.2 billion trade volume is a reminder of the heady trading days two centuries ago, a bicentennial celebrated this year by, among others, the China Trade Museum in Milton, Mass., and the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C.

On Nov. 27, 1783, within months after the close of the Revolutionary War, American merchant Robert Morris, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, wrote his friend John Jay, "I am sending some ships to China ... to encourage others in the adventurous pursuits of Commerce." This was a time before American settlers had pushed much beyond the Eastern seaboard, but the Empress of China sailed on Feb. 22, 1784, from New York for Canton, then a perilous, 18,200-mile, four-month trip through inaccurately charted waters.

American historians have long studied the expansion of the nation to the West, yet, as Portrait Gallery Director Alan Fern notes, "We are now only starting to realize that the eastward journey marked a series of beginnings as well — in trade, in medical and missionary outreach and in diplomacy — of equally enduring significance."

Importance of the Empress's departure was not lost on that day's press, but privately there were misgivings. Samuel Shaw, the expedition's "supercargo," as business agents were then called, had been told that the voyage was an "experiment, the success of which was by no means certain." Though Americans were free at last from mother England's trade controls, no American ship had ever sailed beyond Africa's Cape of Good Hope, and no U.S. merchant had more than hearsay information about trade conditions in Canton, the only port in all the Celestial Kingdom open to foreign commerce.

After docking at Canton's anchorage of Whampoa on Aug. 28, one crew member wrote, "The Chinese had never heard of us, but we introduced ourselves as a new Nation, gave them our history, with a description of our Country, the importance and necessity of a trade here to the advantage to both which they appear perfectly to understand and wish."

But by no means during this first chapter of Sino-American relations; before formal treaties, did the Chinese consider the Yanks their equals. Along with the British and other "foreign devils," the Americans (known as "Flowery Flag Devils" because the Chinese had mistaken the stars on the U.S. flag for flowers) were looked upon as mere barbarians.

In 1793, Emperor Ch'ien deigned to write to no less than England's King George III: "Our Empire produces all that we ourselves need. But since our tea, rhubarb and silk seem to be necessary to the very existence of the barbarous Western peoples, we will, imitating the clemency of Heaven, Who tolerates all sorts of fools on this globe, condescend to all a limited amount of trading through the port of Canton."

American approach to the China trade, on the other hand, was wholly pragmatic. "I did not come here for my health, neither to effect a reform, moral or political," Robert Benett Forbes, a merchant residing in Canton, admitted, "but to get the needful wherewithall to be useful and happy at home."

Empress returned to New York on May 11, 1785, laden with tea, porcelain, silk and nankeen, a buff-colored cotton. Exchanged for these was a cargo of ginseng, a root plant still dug in the Appalachian area and valued by the Celestials as a panacea and aphrodisiac.

By all accounts, the mission had been a success. The profits, Shaw disclosed, came to "upwards of twenty-five per cent, on one hundred and twenty-thousand dollars, the capital employed." By the end of the decade, 28 American ships had called at Canton, and at the peak of the trade during the 1818-1819 season, 47 U.S. vessels were anchored at Whampoa from Salem, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and ports between.

This was a "highly competitive trade," says Margaret C.S. Christman, the historian at the Portrait Gallery responsible for the China trade exhibition and catalog, "Adventurous Pursuits". "The trade fluctuated from year to year, and the American markets often were oversaturated." Morris, for example, was "intent on sailing off-season to bring tea and silk back to Philadelphia before anyone else," she says.

Timing was everything. In the 1830s, John Jacob Astor saw that the tea market was weakening, so he bailed out and invested in New York real-estate. On the other hand, Morris, who had earlier plunged into land speculation, wound up in bankruptcy. "I feel so sorry for him," Christman comments. "I think if he had just struck to the trade, he would have been all right. In a way he was overly optimistic in his business dealings."

As the competition escalated, American traders began to diversify their dealings in Canton. In addition to tea, silk and china, which greater numbers of Americans found they could afford, ship after ship came back with crepe shawls; painted, feathered and carved-ivory fans; tortoise shell combs, lacquered tea trays; paintings on rice paper; floor matting; chess sets, and firecrackers. Colors and designs were chosen for the American taste. "Basically," Christman says, "the Chinese were making most things to order."

Though bustling, Canton in the 1780-1840 period was strictly controlled to keep the foreign devils from seeing too much of Celestial life. Traders were confined to a narrow strip of land less than a quarter mile long. Between the 13 trading and residential "factories" rented to the traders ran narrow streets crowded with shops. The merchant most favored by the Americans was named Houqua. He is "very rich, sends good cargoes & (is) just in all his dealing, in short is a man of honour and veracity," captain Thomas Ward observed, jotting in the margin of his journal, "loves flattery & can be coaxed."

At Canton, the "devils" were governed by eight regulations: Rule two, promulgated to discourage lingering in China, strictly forbade women in the port. But Harriet Low, a spirited 20-year-old, restricted for four years to the nearby Portuguese island of Macao along with the wife of her uncle, a U.S. merchant, at last slipped into Canton disguised as a boy. Though discovered and ordered to leave lest the American trade be terminated, Low reflected, "I think the Chinese are much more civil than either American or English people would have been if a China woman with little feet had appeared on our streets ... Why she would be mobbed and hooted at immediately."

Trouble with the China trade for Americans, who could not seem to get enough things Chinese ("at least for a time," Christman notes), was finding products to export. The market fluctuated for ginseng, for furs with which the Chinese lined their garments and for such commodities as turpentine, varnish, tobacco and sea slugs (for soup).

Stronger was the demand for "foreign mud" — opium. The drug, Christman says, was imported illegally from India by the English "on a massive scale" but was also sold by the Americans as a "matter of course." Ironically, it was England's insistence on the sale of the insidious substance that led in 1842 to the Treaty of Naking, whereby China, for the first time, was opened up and modern trading initiated. The Americans also signed a detailed treaty in 1844. But the sale of opium was no longer routine. Though practices varied, one merchant recognized, "when the dreadful effects (are) brought before our very eyes we cannot compromise ourselves by dealing in it — thus perished one of our most important sources of business."

As the 19th century progressed, there was a great turnabout in the American-China trade; the Celestials began ordering goods such as made-in-America cotton cloth. The interest in silk had spun out at home, and, Christman says, "even the carving for porcelain had passed." Tea, at mid-century, made up about 80 per cent of American imports.

Today, the U.S.-China trade balance is weighted slightly in favor of the United States; the Chinese import, among other items, U.S. wheat, corn and soybeans and order synthetic fibers and fertilizers.

In some ways the latest chapter of the China trade is a reminder of the first. Fox Butterfield, the first New York Times correspondent permitted to live in China following rapproachement with the States in the 1970s, arrived in Beijing in 1980. "Along with restoring the grandeur of the imperial audience for visitors," Butterfield reported, "the communists also reimposed the traditional hermitic restriction on foreigners in China, in part to prevent any bourgeoise contagion from infecting China."

Over the long run, though, relations between the two nations, one American China scholar believes, may hinge on the current "emphasis on basic services" — trade, education, science — rather than on such divisive issues as Taiwan and security, and these may determine "how both countries cope with our incredibly intimate ties."

Weekend Tournaments

That was a busy weekend of tournament activity in Thief River Falls, with Father's Day particularly busy as competition was held on three fronts.

There was the Thief River Falls American Legion Bombers baseball tournament Friday, Saturday and Sunday, annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament on Sunday; and the Far North men's fast pitch softball tournament, also held on Sunday.

Baseball and golf tournaments were completed before the rain shower hit here late Sunday afternoon, but the fast pitch event came to an abrupt end when the diamonds were quickly flooded by the hard rain.

Another Sunday tournament will be offered this weekend when the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball organization hosts its annual Lake Agassiz Invitational.

Games will be played at the slow pitch diamonds on Highway 1, located just east of the Thief River Falls Vocational-technical Institute. Competition will be held on a round-robin format for six Class A and Class B teams, plus 12 Class C and Class D team.

Legion Schedule Gets Tougher

Thief River Falls American Legion Post 117 will put its unbeaten record on the line this week when a 5 p.m. baseball doubleheader in Grand Forks will give the local club a real test.

Grand Forks Royals field a classy team. It's a program Thief River Falls has come close to matching in recent years. It's a good series for a Thief River Falls team that generally has an edge over many of the smaller communities on the Post 117 schedule.

However, three of the first four 1984 Thief River Falls American Legion wins have been against bigger competition as Post 117 beat Detroit Lakes, Bemidji and Crookston after a season-opening victory over Warroad.

That 12-0 Monday night rout of rival Bemidji was a pleasant surprise. The Bemidji-Thief River Falls rivalry that is so intense in high school doesn't seem to carry over into the summer American Legion program because they play in different districts — the Ninth District for Thief River Falls, where Post 117 is paired in Class AA play with the Moorhead Blues, Detroit Lakes, East Grand Forks, Crookston and Fergus Falls, while Bemidji plays in the Sicth District where they compete at the sub-district level with Staples, Wadena, Park Rapids and Sebeka.

Monday was Bemidji'a 1984 American Legion season opener as coach Whitey Anderson began his ninth year with a 118-83-4 career record. Five Bemidji starters were back from last year's 14-12 team.

This year's Bemidji American Legion schedule will be highlighted with an appearance at the prestigious 32-team Gopher Classic July 13-15 in the Twin Cities. Bemidji will play five games that weekend in a round-robin format featuring teams from several states. They'll open against Quincy, Ill. and will meet Minnetonka, along with Viroqua, Wis. in pool play.

Thief River Falls' schedule doesn't feature anything like that, but Post 117 will have an interesting diet of teams coming up. Next week Thief River Falls will host a strong Karlstad team Tuesday in a 7 p.m. Northwest League encounter, visit Ninth District favorite Moorhead Wednesday, entertain Hallock in a Northwest League game Thursday, then fece a team from Winnipeg in a weekend series on the fairgrounds diamond.

That Karlstad outfit won the Thief River Falls Invitational tournament over the weekend hosted by the Thief River Falls Bombers B team. Karlstad beat the Bombers, bolstered by a handful of A team performers — including pitcher Tim Nyland and catcher Ryan Bakke — 5-4 in an opening round game. Karlstad, which already owns a northwest League decision over a contending East Grand Forks team, beat another strong team in the tournament finals here Sunday with a 6-4 decision over Grafton.

First week of July offers additional tests for Post 117 at Roseau, a Region 8AA winner in high school ball this spring, visits here for a 7 p.m. game Tuesday, July 3, and East Grand Forks, Thief River Falls' biggest American Legion rival, will be here for a 6 p.m. doubleheader Thursday, July 5.

Bottem Hits 3 Home Runs In Win At Bemidji

Tim Bottem hit three home runs in three at-bats Monday, driving in five runs, as Thief River Falls Post 117 routed host Bemidji 12-0 in American Legion baseball action.

Lefthander Ryan Drees pitched a five-hit shutout as Thief River Falls won its third straight season-opening game. It was the 1984 American Legion opener for Bemidji.

Bottem gave Post 117 a quick 1-0 lead with a first inning solo home run, highlighted a five-run second inning with a two-run home run and keyed a four-run fourth inning with another two-run shot.

In that second inning outburst, Ryan Drees and Cory Joppru drew back-to-back inning-opening walks and Tim Nyland put down a sacrifice bunt. A fielder's choice, an error and a sacrifice bunt by Rick Spong preceded a run-scoring single by Tom Knoff and Bottem's home run.

It became 8-0 in the third on a walk to Ryan Bakke, a single by Drees, a wild pitch, stolen base and an error.

Knoff singled to start the fourth and Bottem homered. Brian Johnston walked and Bakke singled before two wild pitches and a fielder's choice produced the winner's final runs.

Drees, meanwhile, scattered five singles and walked just one batter in the five-inning, ten-run rule decision.

Post 117 is scheduled to play at 7 p.m. game at Red Lake Falls tonight (Wednesday) and will be in Grand Forks for a 5 p.m. doubleheader Friday.

THIEF RIVER FALLS pitcher Brian Johnston put the tag on Crookston runner Jon Pokrzywinski, but not until he had crossed home plate on a wild pitch in the fourth inning of Tuesday's Northwest League American Legion baseball game played at the fairgrounds diamond. Umpire Mike Drury made the call. Two walks, a fielder's choice, a hit-batsman and the wild pitch gave Crookston its only run of the game as Post 117 ran its record to 4-0 with a 7-1 victory. Johnston, who opened the 1984 American Legion baseball season with a 7-0 no-hitter against Warroad, held Crookston to just three base hits.

Post 117 Is 4-0 Following 7-1 Win Over Crookston Tuesday

Combination of a three-hitter thrown by pitcher Brian Johnston and a 10-hit attack by Post 117 batters produced a 7-1 Thief River Falls victory over Crookston Tuesday in a Northwest League American Legion baseball game played at the fairgrounds diamond.

Johnston, who no-hit Warroad in a 7-0 season-opening victory a week earlier, wasn't quite as effective last night, but he nevertheless checked Crookston on just three singles — a first inning drive to right field by Derrick Bray, a fifth inning infield hit to deep short by Mike Madigan and a seventh inning belt into center field by Tony Amon. The Thief River Falls righthander struck out nine, but walked five, and a bit of wildness in the fourth cost him his second consecutive shutout.

That inning he walked two, hit another and issued a wild pitch to allow Crookston's only run to cross the plate.

Meanwile, Thief River Falls' offense, which produced a one-sided 12-0 win at Bemidji the day before, continued to swing the hot bat as Rick Spong, Tim Bottem and Tom Knoff all had multiple-hit games.

Spong led the way with a 3-for-4 effort, which included a lead-off home run over the left field fence off the lefthanding pitching of Amon in the first inning.

Amon also surrendered a one-out ground ball single to left by Bottem that inning, followed by a walk issued to Johnston, an RBI single to left by Ryan Bakke and a bloop single into short center field for an RBI by Knoff as Post 117 jumped out to a 3-0 lead.

Thief River Falls followed with single runs in the next four innings.

Tim Nyland singled to right to start the second, stole second and scored on an error by shortstop Troy Brekken. Bakke walked with one out in the third, moved up on a wild pitch and scored when Knoff doubled into left-center.

That made it 5-0. In the fourth, a lead-off single by Spong was complemented by an error, and he scored on an infield single to short by Bottem. Once again the Thief River Falls lead-off batter reached base and scored in the fifth as Bakke took two bases on an error by leftfielder Pat Madigan, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on an infield ground-out by Cory Joppru.

Post 117 put its record at 4-0 with the win. Thief River Falls is scheduled to play a 7 p.m. game at Red Lake Falls tonight (Wednesday).

It was a tough night for the Pepsi Bottling squad Tuesday in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball league as they fell victim to a pair of seventh inning rallies.

In the first half of a split doubleheader, Pepsi Bottling saw a scoreless tie evaporate when Nelson Implement scored three times in the top of the seventh in a 3-1 decision. Monday's action featured a 1-0 Fleet Supply victory over TG Sporting Goods when the winners snapped a scoreless draw with a run in the top of the seventh, then managed to get out of a first-and-third, nobody out jam in the bottom of the inning without giving up a run.

Falls Clinic also beat Hamms-Pizza Hut 5-3 Monday. Fleet Supply and The Aggies were also doubleheader winners. Previously winless Fleet Supply defeated Mello-Yello 16-9 and Hardees 11-10, while The Aggies stopped Hardees 7-6 and Jack Daniels 16-5.

Special Twins Promotion Set For Saturday

Minnesota Twins will offer a special promotion Saturday, June 23, when the Chicago White Sox visit the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

Sponsored by the National Kidney Foundation, the "Great Airplane Toss" will be held at the conclusion of the game with a 1984 Mercedes Benz, valued at $44,000, will be driven onto the field, parked just beyond second base, with the automobile's sun roof open.

Specially designed and weighted paper, complete with all the necessary instructions on how to make them into gliding airplanes, will be sold to fans for 50-cents per sheet.

Pilots will launch their planes on a given signal and will be allowed 30 minutes to get every craft airborne. You win the car by landing a plane in the sun roof.

Should more than one land inside the Mercedes Benz, a special drawing will decide the winner.

Additional prizes, each totaling $500 or more in cash and merchandise, can be won by landing planes on any of 25 squares, each measuring a full 20-by-20 feet on the floor of the metrodome.

All proceeds from the paper sale go to the National Kidney Foundation to aid in research.

An Arizona wildflower may someday be used to produce plastics, according to "National Wildlife" magazine. Scientists have produced polymers and polysters, building blocks for plastics, by mixing popweed oil with natural and synthetic chemicals.

DNR NEWS

Lands Reforested

Department of Natural Resources reports that 13,000 acres of state owned land will be reforested this spring.

Forestry officials said nearly 10 million tree seedlings will be required to complete the project. They added that additional acres will be reforested by counties, private land owners, forest industries and the U.S. Forest Service.

Tree nurseries operated by the DNR's Forestry Division produced some 20 million seedlings for planting this year.

In addition to the state acreage being planted with hand tools and heavy equipment, another 3,000 acres are being seeded from the air.

Most tree planting on state lands is performed by contracted crews, and this spring a privately owned helicopter and pilot were hired to fly three planters and seedlings into remote areas in the northern part of the state.

Wildlife Specialist

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has appointed Ken Varland of Boone, Iowa to fill the post of Roadside Wildlife Specialist.

Varland will be stationed at the DNR Regional Headquarters in New Ulm and be responsible for roadside management activities throughout the pheasant range.

Roadside Specialist position is a part of the Pheasant Habitat Improvement Program funded by pheasant stamp sales.

Varland, 35, has spent the past eight years working in wildlife research and management for the Iowa Conservation Commission. He worked extensively with private landowners in central Iowa on habitat improvements for upland game and also established and maintained upland game habitat on several thousand acres of state owned wildlife lands.

He has an M.S. degree in wildlife biology from Iowa State University, is a U.S. Army veteran and has worked as a research associate for Iowa State University, in addition to his wildlife management experience with the State of Iowa.

"I am looking forward to the challenge of improving roadside habitat for a wide range of game and nongame wildlife species," said Varland. "There is tremendous upland habitat potentialin Minnesota's 300,000 plus acres of roadside!"

He is married, has three children and is a fishing, hunting and photography enthusiast.

Shoreland Regulations

Department of Natural Resources is planning to amend state shoreland regulations and is seeking written comment on the existing standards from individuals, groups and organizations.

Statements, also indicating the nature of the individual or group's interest in the standards, should be sent to Steve Prestin, Flood Plain & Shoreland Management Section, Division of Waters, Space Center Bldg., 444 Lafayette Rd., St. Paul, MN 55101; phone (612) 296-9226.

Officials said the decision to amend the shoreland regulations follows a two year study funded by the legislature. The study found that although the shoreland program has generally functioned well during its 15 years of existence, that it has several problems, including deficiences in the regulations.

Turn In Poachers

Seventeen persons were arrested by DNR conservation officers last month with information provided through the Turn In Poachers program (TIP).

Ten of the arrests were for violations of the fishing laws; four were for illegal deer hunting; and three involved non-game species.

Under the TIP program, private citizens who provide information to the Department of Natural Resources on fish and wildlife violations, if the information results in an arrest, are offered a reward. Department also protects the identity of "tipsters".

Persons who wish to report violations may call the toll free number 1-800-652-9093.

Fire Control Meeting

Minnesota DNR Forestry Division hosted the National Wildlife Coordinating Group meeting which was held in St. Paul, May 22-24.

Sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service, U.S. Department of the Interior, National Association of State Foresters, and other agencies, the NWGG is a planning group which coordinates inter-agency wildfire prevention and control.

Representatives from various states and agencies attended the two days of meetings, which included a field day sponsored by the Minnesota DNR. Fire situations unique to Minnesota were discussed and there was a display of specialized fire fighting equipment.

Hinckley Fire Museum and Memorial were toured in conjunction with a visit to the local DNR Forestry field office. Throughout the tour, Minnesota forestry practices and DNR programs were discussed.

Visiting foresters also viewed a demonstration of fire fighting equipment and enjoyed a tour of Wild River State Park near Sandstone.

Bombers Beat Crookston 5-3 For First Win

A five-run second inning carried the Thief River Falls B Bombers to a 5-3 American Legion baseball win over Crookston Tuesday in the second half of a doubleheader played on the fairgrounds diamond here.

Thief River Falls' A team beat Crookston 7-1 in the opener.

All six Thief River Falls base hits in the scheduled five-inning game came in the Bombers' second inning outburst as they sent ten batters to the plate in breaking a five-game season-opening losing streak.

Al Sorum, Jeff Hamness, Mike Bendickson, Dane Jones, Lee Hamre and Dave Onkka all singled that inning to erase a 2-0 deficit.

Onkka was the game's winning pitcher, giving up just two base hits while walking five and striking out five. Brian Johnson was the losing pitcher. He walked one and struck out four. Thief River Falls had three errors, with Crookston picking up one.

Coach Mark Harder's Bombers will host Fosston Thursday in an 8 p.m. game.

Although Con Schulz of Crookston posted the top score of the 50-bird event with a 49, closely followed by teammate Ray Patnaude Jr. with a 48, Thief River Falls had the numbers on their side, with five 48-bird shooters, including Al Steinhauer, Frandell Johnson, Robert Mattson, Mark Mattson and Howard Thorson. Crookston will attempt to regain the trophy when they host the Thief River Falls club at a return match on July 11.

Water Permit Fees Required By DNR

Department of Natural Resources has proposed rules that will increase fees for permits to change the course, current or cross section of protected waters.

Proposed increase is necessary, said officials, because of recent changes in Minnesota law requiring that the full cost of permit processing and issuing be recovered by permit fees.

Increased fee, referred to as an additional permit application fee, is based either on the cost of the project, the length of shoreline affected, or the amount of material placed in, or excavated from, protected waters, whichever is greatest.

Officials said the additional permit application fee will not exceed $20 for a majority of the projects requiring permits, including all projects for shoreline protection or to recover shoreland loss by erosion. This would make the total permit fee equal to $50, since a $30 filling fee is presently required to accompany permit applications that are submitted to the Department.

For projects sponsored by a public agency, other than a state or federal agency, the maximum additional permit application fee would not exceed $500, (State and federal agencies are exempt from permit fees.)

Proposed fee rules also include fees for field inspections and monitoring related to projects requiring permits, but only if the project requires preparation of an Environmental Assessment Worksheet or an Environmental Impact Statement to comply with Minnesota environmental law.

More information on the proposed fee rules can be obtained by calling or writing the Division of Waters, Department of Natural Resources, 444 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55101, 612-296-4810.

Fee schedule proposed:

+One per cent of project cost, or $1 per cubic yard of material or foot of shoreline, subject to a $20 minimum for projects costing from $1-to-$10,000 affecting 1-to-100 feet of shoreline and requiring from 1-to-100 cubic yards of fill-excavation.

+$100, plus one-half of one per cent of project cost in excess of $10,000, or 50-cents per cubic yard of material or foot of shoreline in excess of 100 feet for projects costing from $10,001-to-$50,000 affecting 101-to-500 feet of shoreline and requiring 101-to-500 cubic yards of fill-excavation.

+$300, plus one-tenth of one per cent of project cost in excess of $50,000, or 10-cents per cubic yard of material or foot of shoreline in excess of 500 feet for projects costing more than $50,000 affecting more than 500 feet of shoreline and requiring more than 500 cubic yards of fill-excavation.

First Minnesota Sports Festival Being Planned

by Harvey Meyer
University News Service

It is being trumpeted as the largest multisports event in Minnesota history. It is being styled, by no small coincidence, after the Olympic games. And it is being cast as the state's showcase for emphasizing lifetime fitness through sports.

First-ever Minnesota Sports Festival, which will be hosted by the University of Minnesota Twin Cities campus July 26-29, will feature the state's best 2,000 to 3,000 amateur athletes in 19 sports ranging from archery to wrestling.

Festival, patterned after games competitions in six other states, was spawned from a task force created last summer by Gov. Rudy Perpich. Former Minnesota Viking Alan Page was named chairman of the 15-member task force, and Lt. Gov. Marlene Johnson was appointed honorary chair.

"It is important as a showcase for athletics and, ultimately, for fitness within the state," said Page. "I think the idea of the festival is to motivate people, to get more people involved in athletic endeavors and get them into fitness."

Said Johnson: "It is our vision that the Minnesota Sports Festival will be a starting point for Minnesotans of all ages to become involved in lifelong physical fitness and sports activities."

Minnesota's top athletes will compete in archery, canoeing, cycling, diving, fencing, kayaking, rowing, shooting, scorcer, swimming (open and masters — people over 40) track and field (open and masters), trapshooting, volleyball, weightlifiting and wrestling. In several sports, including water polo and synchronized swimming, only exhibitions will be staged. And in selected sports, disabled athletes may compete. While the sports at this year's festival will be summer-oriented, organizers are considering conducting winter games during the snowed-in months.

In true Olympic tradition, the festival will feature an opening day ceremony at Bierman Field with a parade and entertainment. And the top athletes will depart from the festival with gold, silver and bronze medals.

Minnesota Sports Festival has the backing of a nationwide coalition including the U.S. Olympic Committee, the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports and the Amateur Athletic Union.

Those organizations promoted multisport festivals in New York, Indiana, Florida, Massachusetts, Mississippi and Pennsylvania. New York introduced the festivals in 1978, when 12,000 athletes competed in the Empire Games.

John Kelley, a former Olympic rower, first vice president of the U.S. Olympic Committee and brother of the late Princess Grace of Monaco, says the state festivals will benefit the U.S. Olympic effort. "These festivals will serve as a means of building broader participation in Olympic sports, many of which are considered minority sports," said Kelly who attended a February fund-raiser for the Minnesota games.

"Some sports, like canoeing or team handball, just have a handful of participants, and it's very difficult to field a competitive team when you're competing with other countries that have thousands of competitors."

Jon Buzzard, executive director of the governor's task force, estimated that the Minnesota festival will cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. As of early June, over $100,000 in cash and in-kind contributions have been raised from corporate donors. Those donors include Dain Bosworth, General Mills, Snyders Drug Stores, WTCN-TV, Arthur Anderson & Co., Bolger Publications and Citicorp. The University of Minnesota is donating its facilities, and the state Office of Tourismis offering support services.

Tom Keller, a task force member who has been active in fund raising, forecast success for the festival. "The only question I have is at what level it will be, how fancy it will be," he said.

"There seems to be no problem in convincing corporations that it's a worthy cause," Keller said. "The problem is, as it is in any worthy venture that corporation dollars are very tightly budgeted."

Keller said the charitable contributions and promotions budgets of many corporations seem "severely restricted" at this time. Additionally, he said, many corporations have already locked in those budgets for the next one or two years. Next year, Keller predicted, there will be a better fund-raising climate.

Buzzard said that next year's festival will be expanded significantly. "We're committed to making Minnesota a national leader in the development of fitness and sports programs. And the festival is the glue, the magnet that draws all these things together."

For more information on the Minnesota Sports Festival, write The Governor's Task Force on the Minnesota Sport Festival, 3301 Silver Lake Road, Minneapolis, MN 55418, or call (612) 788-6340.

Birdwatchers Total Over 40 Million Throughout The U.S.

by Thomas Harney
Smithsonian News Service

Number of bird watchers in the United States today is difficult to estimate. One conservative guess puts the number at 40 million. To some extent, the figure depends on how you define "bird-watcher." Webster's includes catchers or hunters of birds as well as people who identify birds in their natural surroundings. Roger Troy Peterson, America's most distinguished bird watcher, takes a broader approach. He defines the major birding "types" as:

+ Window-watcher, who enjoys watching the birds attracted to a backyard feeder.

+ Print collector, who collects bird prints as others collect stamps or coins.

+ Armchair birder, who has a large library and is well-informed about all kinds of birds but spends little time in the field.

+ Sportsman, who is keenly interested in knowing as much as possible about the habits of the ducks and other game birds he shoots.

+ Typical bird watcher, who usually only engages in weekend birding in the vicinity where he or she lives.

+ Bird photographer. Peterson is one of the nation's top bird photographers, with more than 100,000 color transparencies, a library which he draws on to illustrate his many books and articles and as a visual reference for his paintings.

+ Academic and advanced amateur, who holds memberships in clubs such as the American Ornithologists' Union and subscribes to such journals as "The Auk" and "The Condor." Many of these people, like Peterson, explain various birds and their behaviors to the public through books, articles and tours.

+ Hard-core bird watcher, who will go to nearly any length to compile as large a list of "life birds" as possible. When a bird watcher says that he or she has a new "lifer," it means that he or she has spotted for the first time a species new to him or her. A select group belong to the 600 Club, whose members have a life list of 600 species seen north of the Mexican border in North America. Peterson's own life list is 696. He also boasts a substantial world-wide life list. In his years of travel to all of the world's seven continents, he has seen somehwere between three and four thousand of the nearly 9,000 plus species known to exist.

Birding boom also has seen the development of an increasing number of top-flight "interpretive birders," who, like Peterson, started out in the field as amateurs but then gradually developed into professional-level bird identifiers. A few years ago, the interpretive birders were almost entirely men, but now women, like Claudia Wilds of Washington, D.C., are coming to the fore.

Leading specialist on shorebirds, Wilds has written and consulted for two new field guides published by the National Geographic Society and the Audubon Society. She has also written "Finding Birds in the National Capital Area" (Smithsonian Institution Press, 1983).

"I enjoy birding as an intellectual pursuit," Wilds says. "You get this craving to acquire information and then to spread what you acquire." Among her many activities, she produces a weekly telephone tape for the Audubon Naturalist Society of the Central Atlantic States. The tape reports significant bird sightings in the Washington region.

For those people who are interested in becoming bird watchers, Wilds offers these tips:

First, buy one of the major field guides. Its introduction will have useful recommendations for getting started. Before you go out into the field, study your guide and become familiar with the pictures of the birds in your area. In a few months, you may want to buy additional bird references.

Wilds also advises beginners to get a good pair of central-focusing binoculars (7x and 8x are the most commonly used). If you're interested in water birds or birds of the open country, you'll eventually need a powerful telescope. These can be purchased with either interchangeable eye pieces or zoom lenses ranging up to 60x. Most birders use their telescopes on tripods or rest them in their car window.

Only other basic expense is for travel. If you only want to watch birds in your neighborhood, it costs very little. But most birders like to go farther afield to see birds in different habitats. You may want to do your bird watching alone or you may prefer to join one of the 85 recognized national and local bird clubs in the United States. Check local listings in telephone directories for names of these organizations.

Wildlife Group Facts, Figures Are Published

Humans aren't the only ones with undertakers — bees have them too, reports International Wildlife magazine. Less than an hour after a honeybee dies, another bee carries the body as far as 400 feet from the hive before dropping it. Scientists believe this undertaking is due to a chemical emission from the dead bees.

Despite the growing popularity of recycling in many countries, International Wildlife magazine reports that only about one-fourth of all paper, aluminum, iron and steel is recycled. A report from Worldwatch Institute says that in 1981 people in the United States threw away more aluminum in the form of beverage containers than all the aluminum produced in Africa.

If an unusually large number of insects gather together, scientists from the U.S. Department of Agricultura will know it. According to "National Wildlife" magazine, scientists are using radar to detect mass insect migrations. This could help improve pest control nationwide.

During the spring, bluebirds are busy creatures, says National Wildlife magazine. They lay two or three broods a year, laying three to eight eggs per clutch. Once they hatch, usually on the same day, it's almost a continuous hunt for food, as their hungry youngsters require feeding about once every 20 minutes.

WTBS Will Air NBA Games For Next Two Years

Turner Broadcasting System Inc. Board Chairman and President R.E. "Ted" Turner and National Basketball Association Commissioner David J. Stern announced an agreement between TBS and the NBA for an exclusive two-year contract for cable carriage of NBA games.

Under terms of the agreement, TBS will pay the NBA $20 million for the right to carry exclusively on cable television 55 regular season and 20 playoff games in each of the next two NBA seasons. The exclusive 55 regular season game package, which is reduced from this past season's 120 NBA games seen on WTBS, ESPN and USA.

"We're extremely optimistic about this deal," said Turner. "The interest advertisers already have shown in our carriage of this package makes us more confident than ever that these NBA games will be a success in terms of advertising revenue and number of viewers."

Stern stated, "We're looking forward to our relationship with Turner Broadcasting. In reducing the number of games to be carried exclusively on one cable network, we are increasing dramatically the attractiveness of NBA basketball to both the viewer and the advertising community. This increased value is reflected in the rights fees paid for this exclusive cable package."

NBA on TBS premieres on Friday, October 26, with the Boston Celtics visiting the Detroit Pistons. TBS programming is available in Thief River Falls on Sjoberg's Cable TV channel No. 9.

Reflection Day June 30th At St. Bernard's

"The Ministry of Community Conversion" is the theme for a day of reflection at St. Bernard's church hall in Thief River Falls on Saturday, June 30, at 9 a.m.

Brother David Andrews, CSC, will help participants develop a process whereby they reflect on their experience in the light of the Christian Gospel and the contemporary challenge. He will also give some attention to the relationship of spirituality, social justice and the development of community in the Heartland.

"In the Heartland, particularly, the signs of the times call for some attention to social change, not just in developing a system that will be more just, but a system that brings us closer to God," Andrews said. He will bring participants to consider care of creation, solidarity with the poor and community renewal.

Andrews is the executive director of the Edwin V. O'Hara Institute on Rural Ministry Education and a member of the Congregation of Holy Cross. He has a masters degree in English and has pursued graduate studies in socio-political theology at Boston college.

The day of reflection is sponsored by the rural life commission, Diocese of Crookston; Northwest Minnesota emergency action committee; Minnesota COACT; and the Land Stewardship project.

Activity begins at 5 a.m. and closes with a prayer service at 3:30 p.m. The $5 fee for participants includes lunch and coffee breaks.

Deadline For Potato Acreage Inspection Set

Recognizing that excessive spring rains have delayed and damaged Minnesota's important certified seed potato crop, agriculture Deputy Commissioner Rollin M. Dennistoun this week extended the deadlines for growers to apply for regulatory inspections by 15 days.

Certified seed potato growers now have until June 30 to enter acreage in the 1984 certification program without penalty, and July 15 will be the final deadline for participation, with a 50 cents per acre penalty added to the $10 per acre entry fee.

Minnesota is the nation's fourth leading state in annual production of certified Irish seed potatoes, ranking behind only Idaho, Maine and North Dakota in supplying the nation's potato growers with proven quality seed stocks. Last year's Minnesota certified seed potato sales grossed growers more than $13 million.

This year growers had indicated intentions to enter about 24,000 acres of potatoes in the Minnesota certified seed program.

Eight to 10 inches of rain in northwestern Minnesota during the past two weeks have flooded field crops generally jeopardizing seed potatoes, among other crops, at their most critical young growth stage. Damage assessments remain to be determined on a day by day basis, depending upon weather conditions.

While extending the deadlines for inspection applications, Dennistoun urged growers to file now regardless of the final acreage that may survive the excess moisture. He assured growers that they may withdraw weather-damaged acreage and qualify for refund of the $10 per acre entry fee on those acres if withdrawals are filed prior to the initial inspections now scheduled for early July.

He pointed out that the inspection staff will have to review all applications, map field locations and plan staffing and inspection schedules. During the first inspection of potato fields entered in the certified seed program, the inspectors will compare each grower's acres entered with the acres remaining and will make adjustments that may entitle the growers for refunds.

Courage Center Teaches Driving For Handicapped

Tony Lebahn will long remember the moment last March when he earned his driver's license.

"The instructor turned to me after my 'behind-the-wheel' test and said, 'It looks like you passed,' " Lebahn said. "I really got excited and shouted 'I did! Thank you.' Then he shook my hook."

For the 25-year old south Minneapolis resident, who was born without arms and legs, it was a personal triumph over years of waiting for technology to give him the tools to drive. For the Courage Center driver education program, it was another milestone in a long history of successfully teaching drivers with physical disabilities.

The driver education program is one of 70 rehabilitation and independent living programs offered by Courage Center, a nonprofit United Way organization headquartered in Golden Valley. The center provides a wide variety of programs for people with physical disabilities and speech, hearing and vision impairments, most of which are available to Pennington county residents.

Lebahn was no stranger to courage Center services when he enrolled in the driver education program in February of this year. He is a 1979 "graduate" of Courage residence, a transitional rehabilitation facility for young, physically disabled adults. While in Courage residence, Tony excelled in floor hockey and won many friends among the staff and other residents with his quick wit and brimming self-confidence.

Always looking for a challenge, Lebahn enrolled in the center's driver education program for the first time during his residence stay, only to be stymied by the lack of technology available to allow him to drive.

"My prostheses at the time were just too short. I could do everything with adapted hand controls but brake," he said. "The equipment just wasn't there to compensate for it. It was frustrating, because I was so close to it I could taste it."

But Lebahn refused to be discouraged. Determined to "face reality" and continue his life, he finished his residence program, lived briefly in Bloomington, and then moved, with a disabled friend to San Diego, CA. He lived there, returning to the Twin Cities for occasional visits, until December, 1980, when he decided to move back to the Minneapolis area for good.

"I just got homesick and decided it was time to come back," Lebahn said.

Upon returning, Lebahn plunged into educational training and career exploration, attending classes at Minneapolis community college and working briefly as a switchboard operator at Fairview hospital in Minneapolis.

He married his wife, a senior therapeutic recreation specialist, in December of 1981, and in the summer of 1982 began his present job as a receptionist at Courage center.

Lebahn had accomplished a great deal in a short time, but there was still that elusive goal of driving.

"Every time my electric wheelchair ran out of juice when I was trying to get somehwere, I wished I could get out and drive," he said.

Finally, the Minnesota department of vocational rehabilitation (DVR) encouraged him to enroll again in the center's driver education program, hoping it would increase his career potential. Lebahn was overjoyed to discover that his newer, longer prostheses and the more technologically advanced, "zero-effort" controls in the center's training van allowed him to brake and maneuver where he couldn't before.

DESPITE being born without arms or legs, Tony Lebahn of Minneapolis learned how to drive and earned his license with help from the Courage center driver education program.

The center's rehabilitation engineering department provided the finishing touch by designing turn signals he could operate with head movements.

After two months of training, Lebahn was ready to take his license examination.

"I wasn't nervous before the exam. Actually, I was kind of cocky," he said. "I'm still amazed just thinking I got it, with a score of 90! I wasn't sure I was ready."

Lebahn owns a van, and is waiting for DVR funds to equip it so he can drive regularly. He eagerly awaits the day when he can commute to and from work and travel more easily when he coaches two women's softball teams this summer.

"I'm just going to drive and drive and drive," he said with a smile.

Information about the driver education program and other Courage center services is available by writing to Courage Center, 3915 Golden Valley Road, Golden Valley, Minnesot 55422, or calling 612-588-0811.

Highway Work Calls For Use Of Caution

Increased highway maintenance and construction work during the spring and summer months calls for motorists to use extra caution and be especially alert for crews working along Minnesota's highways, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) advises.

Curt Christie, Mn-DOT state maintenance engineer, said motorists need to exercise care when driving in repair or construction areas for both their own and highway workers' safety.

Workers must depend on motorists to use extra care and to heed warning signs because the workers' ability to see and hear oncoming traffic is limited by dust, noise and the attention their work demands.

Many accidents occur, Christie said, when drivers fail to heed a warning sign or signal or fail to respond adequately to a lane shift or other change in the normal traffic flow.

To lessen the possibility of accidents, Christie urges that motorists take the following precautions:

— Follow directions given by flagpersons in a work area.

— Reduce speed in work areas.

— Observe traffic lane changes in the project area.

— Stay alert to sudden movements of equipment and-or workers in the area as well as to other traffic passing through the work site.

— Move into another lane on divided highways or use special caution on two-lane highways when passing trucks and other equipment.

"Our crews will use flagpersons, signs and traffic cones and other barriers to separate themselves from the traffic flow, but safety really depends on cooperation between the driving public and work crews," Christie said.

Identification Free For Rocks And Minerals

University of Minnesota geologists will examine any rock or mineral found in Minnesota free of charge, according to the Minnesota geological survey, a non-teaching department of the university, which will do a preliminary examination of a sample.

If a specimen is judged to have scientific or economic interest, further testing, including chemical analysis, will be done.

If the specimen is selected for more testing, findings of those tests will be sent to the owner who will also be told its value and significance.

Specimens will be analyzed if they're from a location, rock type or formation where there may be mineral deposits, if they show signs of mineralization, such as being stained or decomposed, or if they're of possible scientific value.

The best samples come from outcroppings or near outcroppings. Samples are less valuable if they're from streams and lakes or glacial drift deposits.

"There has been a considerable amount of interest in this program," said G.B. Morey, associate director and chief geologist with the Minnesota Geologic survey, which began offering its services in early May. "There are a lot of people who have had a curiosity about what they've been seeing. Before they never had an opportunity to ask if what they found was different and why it was different. This will provide them that opportunity."

Morey noted that at least one Scandinavian country — Finland — has been examining rock and mineral samples free of charge. "It leads to a much better understanding of a particular region," he said.

Those interested in using this geologic survey service should make certain the sample contains several ounces of mineral, preferably about half a pound.

Location of the find should be described as accurately as possible, such as the township, range and section where a specimen is found. If that's not possible, try to describe it by address and geographic description or by sketching a map.

Submittal forms for rock and mineral samples can be obtained by writing Minnesota Public Geologic Sample Program, Minnesota Geologic Survey, 2642 University Ave., St. Paul, MN 55114-1057 or calling (612) 373-3372.

BSU To Offer Summer Workshops

Nine short courses and workshops will be offered this summer for graduate and under-graduate credit in industrial technology and arts by Bemidji State University.

Short courses and workshops are intensive learning experiences on a particular topic within a discipline that last from two days to two weeks and can be taken for up to six credits.

Introduction to robotics is a two-day workshop in the history, the uses, and applications of robots. The program will take place from July 2 to 3, and is available for one credit.

On July 5 to 6, the ways to make windows energy efficient will be presented. Entitled energy efficient window design, the course can be taken for one credit.

Students interested in finding out more about air exchange system, including installation and service, may involve themselves in the July 13 to 14 workshop on the subject. Participants can receive one credit.

Learning the design, technology, and benefits of earth sheltered housing is the emphasis of a one credit July 23 to 24 offering. "Earth sheltered housing" will also explore construction techniques.

Examining the benefits, savings, and construction of super-insulated housing will be the topic of a one credit study of super-insulated housing to be held on July 26 to 27.

One-credit program in greenhouse construction will be taught July 30 to 31. The workshop is a survey of design and construction techniques for greenhouses in northern climates, as well as a study of solar rooms for the home. In conjunction with greenhouse construction, a separate course in greenhouse management will be presented from August 2 to 3 for one credit emphasizing efficient control of the greenhouse in a northern climate.

Clock factory 2, a workshop designed to share insight on a nationally successful junior high school clock making program is available August 6 to 10. The class will share materials, information, and techniques for making a successful industrial arts program work in a two-credit session. The program will be conducted in International Falls.

Basic study in satellite television systems, including techniques for installation and operation, is the subject of a seminar to be presented for one credit on August 16 to 17.

For more information or registration materials for summer session classes, short courses, or workshops, contact the Records Office, Bemidji State University, Bemidji, 56601 or call (218) 755-2020.

Yes, that's me! I looked like that . . . dressed like that . . . and had fun!

That is the part the youngsters simply do not grasp. We weren't odd characters. We were living life to the hilt. And after awhile we were not so young—but we still lived to the hilt as life unfolded before us.

Everything in life didn't change like the bathing suit. Truths we learned, we passed on to our children and they are teaching them to theirs. Principles we believed in, hopes we cherished—they still motivate Christian men and women all over the world. They are preached every Sabbath, practiced every day.

We had something. It is vital that you gain it, too. Now it's your turn to serve.

What's In It For You??

New Law Means Government Can Return Unclaimed Bank Property, But Time Is Running Out

Items of monetary and sentimental values are waiting to be reclaimed by their rightful owners if they act soon.

A new law could mean the return of some interesting family property to you if you or a relative had a safe deposit box in a bank that failed before 1933. Time is running out, however, all claims must be made by June 30, 1984.

The Garn-St. Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982 grants The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) authority to return or otherwise dispose of property that has been in its possession for 50 years. The OCC obtained the property from receivers who closed out the affairs of banks that failed before the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was established.

Most of the property, says Comptroller of the Currency, C.T. Conover, is financial and personal papers, such as letters, bills of sales, copies of mortgages and deeds and some bonds and stock certificates. There are more interesting papers as well that may be valuable to heirs, such as adoption papers and World War I discharge papers. There are also a relatively small number of objects that may have some monetary value, such as coins, flatware, jewelry and guns.

Other unique heirlooms that have been found in these safe deposit boxes: a broken baby's bracelet and a family tree complete with locks of hair from each family member.

Among the national banks that are on the Federal Register list are many once located in small towns in Indiana, California, Michigan, Illinois, New York, New Jersey and many other states.

The law stipulates that only those who file a valid claim before the June 30, 1984 deadline will be able to inspect the property. You must get a claims form from the OCC and be willing to supply certain documents that will establish your relationship to the last known owner of the property. Claim forms and lists of original owners by state can be obtained by writing to the Claims Processing Unit, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D.C. 20219, or call (202) 487-4475.

Togetherness In Teaching

Following editorial was written by Patrick Churchill, executive director of the Minnesota Education association, and published in a recent issue of the "MEA Advocate", official publication of the state association:

It's time for togetherness! It's time that we as educators hang together!

It would be easy to conclude that educators are all walking public education's last mile. Unless we get our act together, unless we start talking and working together, Ben Franklin's admonition to his rebellious colleagues will also apply to us: "We must all hang together or we shall most assuredly all hang separately."

Over the years, for valid and invalid reasons, we have successfully segmented our profession: teachers and administrators, elementary and secondary, metropolitan and outstate, men and women, Federation and Association, and many more too numerous to list.

We must now concern ourselves with the future. It is time to bind old wounds and understand that public education can only survive if all educators advance together.

The times demand such a reunion because change — for good or ill — is coming, whether we are ready or not.

American society is changing so rapidly that the schools can't possibly keep up.

Micro-chips and computers, a 1984 baby boom, new immigration, soaring divorce rates, more than 50 per cent of our students with both parents working — that is only part of the unsettling change which faces us.

How do we prepare students for the age of information and technology when some kids have better computer equipment at home than their schools can afford?

The number of certificated teachers graduating from our colleges has dropped 60 per cent since 1972. Where are the skilled teachers of the future to come from?

How are we going to enhance the involvement of parents in their children's education when there are fewer and fewer of them home to answer our calls?

All of these problems, and a dozen others, represent tomorrow. And they will demand every bit of the combined expertise we can bring to bear on them.

And as if these problems weren't enough, a host of old challenges lingers on.

It's amazing, isn't it? The American public demands world-class excellence in our schools, but simultaneously demands world-class tax cuts.

Is it any wonder that education is in a critical state? No less imperiled is the teaching profession itself.

Today's teachers suffer from a crisis of spirit. NEA research tells us that over 42 per cent of the current teaching force would not go into teaching again. College of education enrollment is down 60 per cent. What does this data tell us about tomorrow?

Teacher salaries are scandalous!

Teaching is the only profession where the practitioners are insulated in writing every two weeks — they get their paychecks. In this nation of affluence, teachers earn an average salary of $24,650. That's pathetic. The average beginning salary in Minnesota in 1983-84 was $15,400. That's a sin.

Low salaries mean financial hardships for teachers trying to support themselves and their families. Low teacher salaries make it virtually impossible to build high-quality staffs in our public schools.

Many people say they want only competent teachers in America's classrooms — yet they are perfectly content to wink at low salaries for all in order to give a few lucky recipients a few extra dollars.

Merit pay may make political hay, but it makes no professional sense. It will do nothing to attract new teachers, help current ones, or improve instruction for youngsters.

We all should oppose the testing of current practitioners.

It is an insult to every competent teacher — by far the majority.

Teachers already have been certified and hired. No other profession requires such a test once certified.

Testing will not identify competent or incompetent teachers, nor will it help the instruction of students.

There already exist proven, effective means for identifying teacher competence — such as evaluation procedures.

What should we support as the appropriate vehicles for removing incompetent teachers from the profession?

Tougher curricula in colleges of education.

Higher certification standards.

Prohibition on administrators hiring any teacher who is academically or professionally deficient.

Solid, fair and applied negotiated evaluation procedures.

Remediation where deficiencies are diagnosed. If remediation doesn't work, the teacher should not continue on the job.

Let's remember that not one single incompetent teacher in the history of American education has ever hired his or herself. The time has come to heal the many schisms which exist in the public education community. We must explore agreements and differences; to build or repair bridges. We must be willing to compromise for the common educational good, without forcing each other to compromise our principles. We can't condone profressional indolence. If we — the education family — want the job done right, we must do it ourselves.

We can move steadily toward educational excellence. . . if we are together.

Homework Issue

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

Should a woman who knows how to knit be permitted to pick up a few extra dollars by doing piecework in her home for a commercial company? Not unless she is handicapped, caring for an invalid, or can prove she is an independent contractor. So says the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) of 1938 and a recent U.S. Court of Appeals ruling that prevented Labor Secretary Ramond Donovan from removing the restrictions on the knitted outerwear industry.

The court was concerned that these cottage-industry women would be victimized by subminimum wages, no overtime pay and similar deprivations that would rebound to the advantage of greedy employers. Never mind that most American woman are capable of entering into a contractual agreement whereby they can earn some money at home without subjecting themselves to sweatshop conditions. The court has canceled this income source for the time being.

The "homework" brouhaha began five years ago when the Labor Department penalized a Vermont company for purchasing knitted ski caps from local women. The company insisted these women were independent contractors who preferred to remain at home. This argument persuaded Donovan who, soon after he arrived in Washington, proposed lifting the ban on home-based piecework in seven garment and accessory trades. Opposition from organized labor eventually led him to exclude only knitted outerwear from the regulation. But the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union filed suit to prevent any exceptions to the FLSA. And the court decided that such an exception not only has the potential to exploit "homeworkers," but would also put employers who comply with the act at a competitive disadvantage, and depress the wages of all industry employees.

This ruling pleases labor unions because it protects their members from competition, pushes up wage rates and strengthens their strike hand. But it is a blow to thousands of American women who want to earn some money while working at home. Granted they won't receive the fringe benefits available to their unionized counterparts. Homework does, however, offer compensations for women with small children.

Accordingly, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has sponsored legislation to eliminate the federal ban on these proscribed indistries, thus permitting thousands of persons the chance to earn money in the comfort of their homes. The Reagan administration should therefore support and Congress should enact this sensible measure which is menaced by Big Labor.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"Johnnie," said his teacher, "if your father borrowed $100 and promised to pay $10 a week, how much will he owe in seven weeks?"

"One hundred dollars," said Johnnie.

"I'm afraid you don't know your lesson very well," remarked the teacher.

"I may not know my lesson," said Johnnie, "but I know my father."

Anyone who can swallow an aspirin at a drinking fountain deserves to feel better.

"I'm nobody's fool!" the office braggart boasted.

"Don't worry," smiled the pride of the secretarial pool, "someone will adopt you."

Endearing terms, indeed—especially if you happen to be the next in line for the shower!

Shower after shower and hour after hour, you'll get hot water fast with today's new high efficiency gas water heaters.

Did you know that your water heater is the second largest energy-consuming appliance in your home? Stop and think; how many times each day do you use hot water?

Did you know that gas hot water heaters have a higher recovery rate than electric models do? A 40-gallon gas water heater will provide more hot water than a 52-gallon electric water heater. Naturally, family size, the temperature of incoming water supply and other variables are factors in determining overall recovery rates as well as overall operating costs. But on the average when you have a gas hot water heater, you can save as much as $10 to $12 each month.

Talk about endearing terms! With the money you save you can take in a movie and still have a little left over for popcorn!

So, the next time you're in hot water—because there isn't any—think of natural gas. Check the Yellow Pages for the name of the dealer nearest you who offers High Efficiency gas water heaters. Compare, and see for yourself why natural gas is the most economical way to keep you in hot water.

| Efficiency | Gas Water Heater *Therms/Annual Cost | Electric Water Heater Kilowatt Hrs./Annual Cost | Annual Savings Gas vs Electric |
|---|---|---|---|
| Low Efficiency | 438/yr. $274.19 | 7,916/yr. $405.30 | $131.11 |
| High Efficiency | 277/yr. $173.40 | 5,268/yr. $269.72 | $96.32 |

*Chart based on American Gas Association's "Update on Operating Cost Comparisons of Appliances," using FTC 1980 Appliance "Energyguide" label "low" and "high" ranges and converted to 1983 Unit Energy Costs.

*Based on .626¢ per therm and .0512¢ per kilowatt hours.

news of the OLYMPICS

A Pitch To Baseball Buffs

A major sporting goods company is pitching baseball buffs a unique bit of memorabilia linked to the forthcoming Olympics. An Olympic baseball, the 1984 Olympic Gameball, is being made available to collectors.

The Rawlings Sporting Goods Company is officially licensed to produce a baseball commemorating the six-nation tournament scheduled during the XXIIIrd Olympiad in Los Angeles. For collectors, the Olympic Gameball should be as prized as the annual All Star and World Series commemorative baseballs that the company sells by direct mail and through quality sporting goods stores.

The upcoming Olympic tournament will mark only the seventh time that baseball has been played as a 'demonstration sport' during an Olympiad, and many believe it will eventually become part of medal competition. The Olympic teams facing off in Dodger Stadium later this summer have the advantage of being the first to play baseball in an international tournament field on a field specifically designed for the sport.

Those teams will include squads from the USA, Cuba, Nicaragua, Chinese-Taipei, South Korea and Italy. They will play each other in eliminations running from July 31st through August 7th in a format approved in April, 1981, by the Executive Committee of the International Olympics Committee.

Coincidentally, the company, Rawlings, has its headquarters in the only other US city where baseball has been played as part of Olympic games. St. Louis had the sport demonstrated during its 1904 contests.

For baseball trivia buffs: the sport's other former Olympiad sites were: Paris, France, 1900; Stockholm, Sweden, 1912; Berlin, Germany, 1936; Helsinki, Finland, 1952; Melbourne, Australia, 1956; and Tokyo, Japan, 1964.

The 'American Pastime' was a particularly big hit at the Berlin Games where two US teams played before more than 100,000 spectators. That remains the largest crowd to have observed baseball within an Olympic setting, although the audience for the televised game between the US and Cuba this summer should easily dwarf the giant 1936 crowd.

The 1984 Olympic Gameball for collectors has the same engineering and quality of its counterparts which the sporting goods company will supply to the USA team and the Olympic tournament. For years, it also has supplied equipment and baseballs to the American and National Leagues.

Unique aspects of the Olympic Gameball are its red and white stitching and inscription: "The Gameball, XXIIIrd Olympiad, Los Angeles, 1984".

The Olympic, World Series and All Star baseballs can be ordered for $10.95 each via money order or check from: Rawlings Sporting Goods Co., Gameballs 1984, 2300 Delmar, St. Louis, MO., 63103.

Task Force Has Offered Changes In Education

Group of educators which has studied eight important issues in education gave its final report to commissioner of education Ruth E. Randall May 22.

Task forces on restructuring education in Minnesota — reflecting the work of 160 volunteers who responded to an invitation from Randall last fall — gave the report through 10 separate presentations, each from a different region of the state.

"Those most directly affected by the decision-making process must be involved in the decisions," Randall told the volunteers, thanking them for their diligence and enthusiasm.

"Your talent and experience in the day-to-day operation of schools is necessary to help state leaders make plans to improve education."

Recommendations of the task forces will be used along with citizen comments from the Minnesota Dialogue on Education and its 291 town meetings in February and March. Both were designed to give informationn and background for possible legislation and policy.

Eight issues studied were: learner outcomes; achievement tests; individualized education plans; graduation requirements; requirements for homework; requirements for elementary and secondary course offerings; basic, functional, and higher level thinking skills; and compliance with state board of Education rules.

Some recurring themes in the reports included:

— Strong support for a system of learner outcomes, indicating a desire to measure learning progress by student achievement rather than numbers of clock hours, semesters, or credits.

— Educators agreed that a switch to a learner outcomes system would require more time, effort, and money and that care must be taken to build a system which ensures uniform standards statewide and is flexible enough for the needs of different students.

— Views differed widely on achievement tests, but Task Forces members seemed generally opposed to a mandatory statewide testing system.

— Individualized Education Plans — personal learning plans for each student — were viewed as desirable, but most participants in the project said it was unrealistic to think that teachers have the time to monitor plans for each student with current workloads. The report from northeastern Minnesota said that individualizing education is "issue number one in importance." (The State Board of Education has stated that it wants to require such plans for every student by 1990.)

— Mixed views were expressed about graduation requirements. Some Task Forces members said that they should be tougher, but others said it is easy to forget that students need time for activities other than formal study. There was some sentiment for diplomas which reflect varying types of programs or levels of academic achievement, and many said that a diploma should in some way more clearly indicate a student's progress in school.

— Opposition to state-mandated homework was almost unanimous.

— The strongest sentiment expressed on K-12 course offerings was that the number of courses available, though not required, must be expanded so students throughout the state have equal opportunities.

— Basic, functional, and higher level thinking skills all need more emphasis, according to many members. "It is more important to teach a student how to think than to teach a specific skill," said one. "Learning how to learn and having a love for learning are important for the future, when present jobs may no longer exist and new ones are created."

— State rules must be enforced, but schools should have warning and be given reasonable time to correct deficiencies, said several members.

A number of concerns were expressed repeatedly by task forces participants that cut across the lines of the eight issues studied and applied to many of them. They included:

— Teachers need more time to plan and more opportunity for quality in-service training programs.

— Teachers need smaller classes and more opportunity to work with individual students.

— Schools need more money to provide teachers these opportunities.

— Technology can and must help teachers do more with existing limitations of time and resources.

— Teachers from throughout the state have similar concerns and problems, but solutions must allow for differences in individual students and school district settings.

— School district and teacher cooperation and sharing are a must if resources are to to stretched to help teachers teach.

Job of today's teacher, said a third-grade teacher, is "to look at the whole child." If the child has been abused, the teacher needs the help of a specialist like a social worker or a counselor.

We can't forget that the school should help a child develop social skills as well as academic skills, and that not all facets of the learning process can be measured, said others.

Randall thanked the task forces members for their contribution to her continuing dialogue on educational change. A summary of their report will be compiled. For more information, write Gayle Anderson, Minnesota Department of Education, 728 Capitol Square, 550 Cedar Street, St. Paul, 55101.

JOINING FORCES for the benefit of the public, a number of local organizations made contributions toward the purchase of a new $6,500 air compressor for the Thief River Falls fire department, which requires high purity air for self-contained breathing apparatus. Representatives of the various clubs visited the fire hall this week, where they were given an explanation of the equipment by Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman and personally thanked by Mayor Bob Carlson. Having a look at the compressor were, left to right: (kneeling) Don Vanek, Northwest SCUBA Divers; Vern Dokken, VFW; Mayor Carlson; (standing) Russell Moen, VFW; Marland Johnson, Northwest SCUBA Divers; Bob Anderson, VFW; Bjorkman; Roger Hible, Eagles; and Fred Dallmann, American Legion. With large amounts of synthetic materials present in most modern homes, toxic fumes often develop during fires which make the breathing apparatus a necessity for firemen as they work to save lives and property.

FATAL CRASH of two crop spraying planes left wreckage strewn across two fields just east of Warren on Wednesday morning, with the battered fuselages coming to rest about 500 yards apart. Daniel Ambrose Illies, 52, rural Bagley, pilot of the Grumman Ag-Cat in the top photo, died on the way to the Warren hospital after being pulled from the flaming wreckage by two passing motorists. Conrad Norman Chandler, 50, Lake Elmo, was apparently killed instantly in the Cessna Ag-Husky at bottom. Both planes were owned by Pulkrabek Airspray Inc., operating out of the Warren airport.

Air Crash Claims Lives Of 2 Pilots

Two area pilots were killed at about 11 a.m. Wednesday, when the crop spraying planes they were operating collided over a grain field about three-and-a-half miles east of Warren.

Conrad Norman Chandler, 50, Lake Elmo, was dead at the scene, and Daniel Ambrose Illies, 52, rural Bagley, died a short time later while being transported to the Warren hospital. Illies was reportedly pulled from the cockpit of his burning plane by two passing motorists.

According to a story in the Grand Forks Herald, Bob Wood, Warren, was filling a crop spraying truck in a field across the road from the collision site, and witnessed the accident. He said the two planes hit at a right angle, and "just came together." Apparently, no evasive measures were taken by either pilot, indicating that they failed to see each other.

Both pilots had at least 25 years of experience, according to Tom Drews, owner of Pulkrabek Airspray Inc., whom they were working for. "There weren't any more experienced pilots in the state." Other crop spraying pilots stated that visibility and low altitude could have been factors in the crash, noting that under certain conditions it can be difficult to see another plane.

Chandler had just left the Warren airport (about a mile and a half from the crash site) with a full load of herbicide, according to Tim Lee, Newfolden, an employee of Pulkrabek, and Illies was expected to return soon, since he had been out long enough to unload his spray tanks, which contained enough herbicide for about 20 minutes of spraying. Lee said he first heard about the crash when two witnesses ran from a field to the airport office and said, "Hey, you've got two airplanes down."

Lee said he called the ambulance service and was told it was already on its way. "The ambulance service was just quicker than hell," he said.

Wreckage from the planes landed in two fields just north of Highway 1, with Illie's biplane crashing to the ground about 350 yards west of the collision site. Chandler's plane crashed about 150 yards east of the apparent point of collision. Both planes landed right side up but were badly mangled.

According to county extension director Terry Courneya, spray pilots have been in great demand due to wet conditions which prevent use of ground operated spray equipment. Lee noted that demand for crop spraying after the recent rains had been so heavy that Chandler had been called in for extra help. Chandler had been piloting commercial airliners for MARY COURNEYA, 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Courneya of Thief River Falls, will be among the candidates for Miss Thief River Falls this year. The 1983 graduate of Lincoln high school will present an original speech for her talent presentation.

Mary Courneya In Queen Event

(This is the first in a series of interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title at the official Miss America preliminary pageant to be conducted Saturday, July 28, at the Lincoln high school auditorium.)

Mary Courneya hopes to parlay her interests in art, speech and broadcasting into a career in the communications field, particularly television broadcasting. She is presently studying toward that goal at Northland community college.

Mary, 19, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Courneya of Thief River Falls and a 1983 graduate of Lincoln high school. She is five feet four inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has brown hair and brown eyes. Her talent presentation at the Miss Thief River Falls pageant will be an original speech.

A resident of Thief River Falls for 17 of her 18 years, Mary has been active in 4-H club work and during her high school years in the Vocational-Industrial Clubs of America (VICA). It was a member of the VICA club that she won state speech competition and advanced to national level of competition.

Pursuing her interest in speech and broadcasting, she has completed the nine-month broadcasting course in the Thief River Falls AVTI and is now enrolled in the two-year program at Northland. She has received two scholarships in her chosen field. In addition to her studies, she has worked with activities planning at Valley home for the aged in Thief River Falls.

Sparby Named To World Trade Center Board

Speaker of the Minnesota House Harry Sieben Jr. recently appointed State Representative Wally Sparby to the world trade center board.

The appointment is considered a choice assignment for Sparby, District 1B, who is serving his first term in the Minnesota House of Representatives.

The legislature created the board to facilitate and support Minnesota world trade center programs and services and promote the growth of international trade in Minnesota. Sparby is one of four legislators who will serve on the board as nonvoting members.

"The world trade center will open new world markets and increase the number of Minnesota exports," Rep. Sparby said. "As 40 per cent of the goods produced in Minnesota are agricultural products, this will have a profound effect on our state economy.

"I am pleased and honored to have the opportunity to serve on the board and help with the development of the world trade center philosophy," Sparby said.

County Board Hears Revenue Sharing Ideas

Pennington county board of commissioners will meet Tuesday at 10 a.m. and hold a hearing on revenue sharing at 10:30 a.m. Wayne Faust and Wayne Goeken of the Northwest regional development commission will meet with the board in the morning.

Afternoon session will include discussions with representatives of Future Fuels, Inc., and the day-night unit of Northwestern hospital services, as well as business to be presented by the county engineer and county auditor.

Peterson Faces Choice In Tractor Pull Selection

by Marvin Landis
Times Editor

Robert Peterson had a problem in coming up with a tractor for the antique tractor pull in St. Hilaire this Saturday. The problem wasn't in finding an old tractor, it was in deciding which of his vintage tractors to use. He has about 30 from which to make a selection.

Actually, Bob has 33 tractors in his collection that are not used in his normal farm work. But among those are several which are not old enough to classify as antique for the tractor pull (tractors must be 1945 models or older) or are not considered competitive for one reason or another. All are in operable condition, however.

The problem isn't as big as it was a year or so ago. Last fall Bob held an auction sale on his farm about five miles southeast of St. Hilaire and sold 32 tractors from his collection that then numbered about 60. Bidders were on hand from a wide area, and Peterson was satisfied with the prices the old tractors brought at auction.

It was only about 14 years ago that Peterson started accumulating a number of older tractors, spurred by the interest of his neighbor, Ed Nichols. While Peterson is very knowledgeable about the tractors and what it takes to make them run, he describes Nichols as "a wizard" in restoration and repair. Ed's collection of tractors is smaller in number but contains some unique and choice items.

Oldest tractors in Peterson's collection are of the 1929 to 1930 vintage and include a 1020 McCormick Deering and a Model D John Deere. He also has a 1937 model F-12 International which he purchased about five years ago from Alfred Rasmussen of St. Hilaire. Rasmussen purchased the tractor when it was new and he was farming in the Grygla area.

Among his more unusual tractors is a Co-op No. 3 which was made in 1953 for the Farmers Union and sold through that cooperative's outlets. It is powered by a six-cylinder Chrysler engine and has the same transmission and rear-end as a Dodge truck of that year. It was owned by Peterson's cousin, Leonard Bjorkman of Roseau, and used extensively in that farming operation. Not many of the tractors were made and Peterson's carries a serial number of 3814. He reports that it has an extremely fast road gear and handles very well on the road.

At the tractor pull in St. Hilaire Saturday — sponsored by the St. Hilaire Lions club and scheduled to start at noon —he will probably use three of his tractors in competition. They will include a 1937 WC Allis-Chalmers, a Model D John Deere and a Model "L" Case.

The Allis-Chalmers was purchased about five years ago from an implement dealer in Newfolden. Bob and his son Neil, 22, who works on the old tractors with his Dad, were trying to decide whether to use the tractor on rubber tires or put on the steel wheels with lugs that are also available.

Somewhat surprisingly, Peterson has picked up most of his old tractors in a fairly local area. The greatest distance he has traveled has

DECISION TIME is faced by Bob Peterson and his son Neil as they try to determine whether rubber tires or steel wheels will be best for the model WC Allis-Chalmers they will use at the antique tractor pull in St. Hilaire Saturday. Peterson has been collecting tractors for the past 14 years and last September culled 32 from his collection at a public auction, leaving him with only 33 tractors to call his own — all of which will run. That doesn't count the tractors he has for regular use on the farm located southeast of St. Hilaire.

TOO MODERN a tractor to be used in the antique tractor pull in St. Hilaire Saturday, this 1953 model tractor is quite unusual. Made for the Farmers Union, the Co-op No. 3 has a six-cylinder Chrysler engine with the same Dodge transmission and rear end as a truck. Mrs. Robert Peterson, shown on the tractor at the Peterson farm, insists the tractor will travel down the road just like a car — and almost as fast. The tractor is one of the more unusual in the Peterson collection. It carries a serial number of only 3814.

"Teach The Teachers" Program . . .

Computer Literacy To Be Taught In Session Here

In response to the continuing need for computer education for teachers in school districts throughout the state, Charles A. Haggerty, IBM Rochester general manager, has announced the site has expanded its "Teach the Teachers" computer literacy program to include schools located in northern Minnesota.

The first school districts outside of southeastern Minnesota participating in the program, created and sponsored by IBM Rochester, include Bemidji, Thief River Falls, Park Rapids, Nevis, Akeley, LaPorte, Bagley, Blackduck, Cass Lake, Badger, Greenbush, Grygla, Goodridge, Erskine, McIntosh, Mentor, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Warren, Redlake, Karlstad and Newfolden. The schools are members of the Northwest Minnesota Educational Cooperative Service Unit (NWESCU), which selected the participating districts and two class locations for the "Teach the Teachers" program.

Each of the two-week-long sessions will be attended by 30 classroom instructors from the various schools. The first session, June 18 through June 29, will be held at the Bemidji area vocational-technical institute. The second will be conducted at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute July 9 through July 20. The classes are provided at no cost to the teachers or their respective schools.

Two Rochester public school teachers, Duane Mau and Bill Sears, will serve as instructors at both Bemidji and Thief River Falls. Mau, science teacher and department chairman at Kellogg junior high school, is under contract with IBM for the summer. Sears, mathematics and computer programming teacher at John Marshall

Researchers Look At Decisions On Teen Pregnancy

by Lynette Lamb

Despite the availability of more sex education and birth control options than ever before, the number of pregnancies among teenage girls went up 13 per cent during the past decade. By keeping their babies — as 96 per cent of those who have babies do — these girls are making a series of decisions that most adults would label disastrous.

In an effort to understand why these girls make the choices they make, University of Minnesota public health researchers Michael Resnick and Robert Blum have since 1980 been studying teenagers' sexual decision making. What they have found is that information — on contraceptives, abortion or adoption — is not the all-important factor it was once thought to be.

"There is an incredible gap between the knowledge and the application of that knowledge," said Resnick, adolescent health program research coordinator, adding that only a third of sexually active teenagers consistently use birth control. "In so many instances it's heartbreaking — they have the knowledge, the awareness and the understanding, but somehow it doesn't apply to them."

If lack of knowledge alone cannot account for the rising numbers of teenage mothers, what can? Resnick and Blum have concluded that an important answer is cognitive development — that is, how far along the girls' thinking and reasoning skills are.

"It's clearly a developmental ability to be able to link actions now with consequences in the future," said Resnick. "That's why health education is very hard with these kids. If they're still concrete thinkers they can't think hypothetically or of the future ramifications of their actions. For them, all the birth control information in the world may be meaningless unless it is presented in a way they can relate to."

In a recent study, Resnick and Blum looked at six areas of cognitive development in 206 sexually active teenage girls. At the time of the study, 29 per cent were using contraceptives, 24 per cent had undergone abortions, 24 per cent were pregnant and 23 per cent were already mothers.

The six factors they studied were ego development — which included self-esteem as well as the girl's ability to think complexly; locus of control — the extent to which the girl felt she had control over her own life; future time perspective — the extent to which she could project herself into the future; moral development; sex role socialization; and irrational beliefs — anxiety, helplessness, dependency and rationality in decision making.

Girls who chose abortions were best at considering the future and had the lowest demand for external approval and the lowest dependency needs of all the groups studied. Girls in this group recognized that they weren't ready for motherhood, could look ahead to the problems and complications childbearing would have for their future, and saw the aborton decision as ultimately their own.

Teen mothers, on the other hand, were the least able to consider the future, had the highest levels of anxiety and the least sense of being in control of their own lives and had accepted the most traditional notions of female sex roles. "There is a strong tendency (in this group) toward inaction, passivity and an inclination to let 'whatever happens, happen,'" wrote Resnick and Blum.

The ability to project herself into the future, said Resnick, seems to be closely related to whether a girl uses contraceptives. "Risk, susceptibility, prevention and comprehension of the future — these are very adult characteristics," Resnick said. "The decision to contracept is much more complicated than we thought. It is much more than just knowledge."

Even if a girl is able to truly consider her future, said Resnick, for many of these girls that future doesn't look so bright. "For a sizable segment of our adolescent population we as a society offer few viable alternatives to parenting and thus little impetus to delay childbearing," Resnick and Blum wrote.

Because of the Reagan administration's interest in adoption as one solution for the rising number of teenage pregnancies, Resnick is currently working on another study, in which he is comparing girls who have chosen to keep their babies with those who have chosen to place their children for adoption. The percentages in these two categories have shifted dramatically since the 1950s: Thirty years ago, 95 per cent of all pregnant teen-agers gave up their babies for adoption; in 1984 that figure is just five per cent.

Although he is still collecting the data through a series of written tests and lengthy interviews, Resnick does have some preliminary findings. "We're finding something we thought we'd find," he said, "and that is that developmentally, the kids who place (their children for adoption) are very similar to the aborters in the previous study. They're more sophisticated and developed cognitively than the parenters are."

Adopters also "almost uniformly held strong anti-abortion attitudes," had more well-developed career and educational objectives and tended to be more future-oriented thinkers, said Resnick. "They can frame their reasons for not parenting in terms of the good of the child and their own well-being," he said. "It takes a certain amount of understanding to think that through, and we don't always see that understanding in teen moms.

"I think if teenagers are encouraged to engage in a thoughtful decision-making process we may see adoption chosen more frequently as an option," Resnick said. "But having a decision forced on them could have disastrous psychological effects on adolescents.

"Kids are very capable of making decisions," he continued. "What is important is that they feel they own the decision. They need a supportive, caring adult network to guide them, but pregnant teenagers should make their own decision about what to do."

Sex education is a very important part of the overall sexual decision-making process, said Resnick, but he emphasized that it must be "more than just an organ recital. Sex education must be developmentally appropriate," he said. "It must be embedded in the context of the kid's everyday life."

Parents, too, must be willing to talk with their children and answer their questions as soon as kids bring them up, Resnick said. "What we see," he said, "is parents who don't, won't and don't know how to talk to their children about sex. This is critical."

Despite the dramatic increase in teenage sexual behavior and the promotion of teenage sexuality in advertising and movies, Resnick, who has talked to hundreds of teenagers, believes that "kids are not callous and jaded about sex."

"I see a lot of fear, insecurity, embarrassment and ignorance," he said. He added that although most teenagers aren't ready to handle sexual relationships, he believes that punitive attitudes toward their sexual experimentation is bad.

"We have to give teenagers a chance to fall down and get up in order for them to grow and develop a sense of who they are."

Back, Leg Pains Will Get Worse Before Better

BY DR. PHILLIP J. BRUNO
Doctor of Chiropractic

An estimated half million people will be disabled this year by spinal defects which cause low back and leg pain. What is being done to correct this problem?

Our research indicates that most low back pain and associated leg pains are caused by truly mechanical defects in the alignment of one or more segments of the lower spine.

These spinal segments may be displaced by a fall, accident or back strain. Another frequent cause is chronic posture decay.

It's reasonably simple. When a spinal segment is displaced, the supporting muscles and ligaments may be stretched or torn causing acute and disabling back pain. When a segment is displaced beyond a critical point it partly closes the nerve openings between adjacent segments. The result is excruciating pain, which needless to say, is anything but reasonable.

The spinal nerves which supply the legs pass through the openings between adjacent segments of the lower spine. You see, when one of the segments is displaced, the nerves to the legs might be pinched or irritated. This brings about the nerve pain that extends down the leg.

What can be done for the person with low back and associated leg pain?

Chiropractic experience shows that individuals with acute and chronic problems of this nature respond extremely well. And, I might add, early detection of the problem adds to the effectiveness of care and prevention of progressive spinal defects.

Low back and leg pains often amount to needless suffering, in my view. If you suffer from these problems contact your Doctor of Chiropractic.

Committees To Set Statewide Unit Pricing

Statewide county and municipal engineers screening committees will hold their annual spring meetings to establish construction unit prices in late June at Brainerd, according to Gordon Fay, state aid engineer, Minnesota department of transportation (MnDOT).

Municipal engineers screening committee meeting will begin at 1 p.m., Wednesday, June 27, and conclude about noon the following day. The county engineers screening committee meeting will begin at 1 p.m., Thursday, June 28, and end about noon on June 29, he said. The meeting room is accessible to the handicapped.

A city engineer from each of the nine state aid districts and an engineer each from Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul serve on the municipal screening committee. A county engineer from each of the nine state aid districts serves on the county engineers screening committee.

Construction unit prices will be applied in updating the annual county and municipal needs studies. These needs studies will be used in determining the 1985 municipal state-aid street (MSAS) apportionments to cities of 5,000 or more population and the 1985 county state-aid highway (CSAH) apportionments.

Total apportionment to the MSAS system is nine per cent of the highway users tax distribution fund which accrues from the state motor fuel tax vehicle license fees and motor vehicle excise tax (beginning July 1). Total apportionment to the CSAH system is 29 per cent of the highway users tax distribution fund.

Currently, the municipal state-aid street system covers about 2,080 miles. The county state-aid highway system covers more than 30,000 miles, including about 760 miles of trunk highways returned to the counties.

Municipal engineers screening committee members are: James Prusak, Cloquet; Brian Freeberg, Bemidji; John Dolentz, St. Cloud; Irving Bakken, Detroit Lakes; Ronald Rudrud, Bloomington; Roger Plumb, Rochester; Martin Menk, North Mankato; Duane Aden, Marshall; Steven Gatlin, White Bear Lake; J. Paul Davidson, Duluth; Marvin Hoshaw, Minneapolis9 Robert Peterson, St. Paul. Herbert Reimer, Moorhead, is the committee chairman. The vice chairman and secretary are Henry Spurrier, Shakopee, and Larry Anderson, Prior Lake.

Dennis Carlson, Benton County, is committee secretary.

Regents Set 13% Tuition Boost At 'U'M

A tuition plan that will increase the amount students pay next year by an average of 13.3 per cent met with an unenthusiastic and lopsided approval by the University of Minnesota Board of Regents recently.

Under the plan, which will generate over $84 million in revenue, tuition increases will range from 9.5 per cent to 20 per cent, with 40 per cent of the students in the five-campus system paying the lowest rate.

In recommending the plan, which passed by a ten to two vote, President C. Peter Magrath said it was "done without great relish." Most board members seemed to agree with his assessment that, although the increase is unpleasant, it is essential to fulfill the legislative mandate that tuition income account for 32 per cent of the cost of educating students at Minnesota colleges and universities.

Twin Cities regents Mary Schertler and David Roe voted against the plan. "That's my way of protesting on my own behalf and on behalf of the students and the thousands of working people in this state who are finding it increasingly difficult to send their daughters and sons to the university," said Roe, a well-known Minnesota labor leader.

Much of the board's discussion centered on ways to approach setting tuition rates in the future. Under the present system, the budget is proposed first and the tuition rate is then determined based on the budget. Duluth Regent Erwin Goldfine suggested that in the future this process be reversed, so that the tuition increase and projected revenue dictate what the university spends. Regent Charles Casey of West Concord echoed that idea.

David Lebedoff, a regent from Minneapolis, had other ideas on how to deal with the problem. "I think we've been too polite," he said. "We have to go to the Legislature and tell them that tuition is as high as it is going to go and that we need a bigger piece of the budget pie. I have always thought that the University of Minnesota is the goose that laid the golden egg for Minnesota, but right now I think it's a sick goose. We need to make our case in a more dramatic way."

Part of the increase — $500,000 — was necessary because of the reciprocity agreement with Wisconsin that allows students from that state to pay "substantially lower tuition" than Minnesota students, according to Kenneth Keller, vice president for academic affairs.

In a move they hope will remedy that and other inequities in current legislative policies, the regents voted to direct the university administration to seek financial relief during the next legislative session. Their resolution, which passed unanimously, will seek for the university exemption from the mandate requiring that 32 per cent of instructional costs be paid through tuition, because under the current system, high-cost professional programs like medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, public health and veterinary medicine are being subsidized by lower-cost programs.

The board also set student service fees, which range from $46.25 per quarter at Waseca to $84.11 per quarter at the Twin Cities. Other fees will be $53.75 at Crookston, $70 at Morris and $61.30 at Duluth.

Regent Charles McGuiggan of Marshall expressed concern that the fees, which student boards recommended, increased more than the cost of living.

State DWI Law Is Toughened On August 31

This is the year, 1984, that will go down in history as another in which enforcement against driving while intoxicated (DWI) was given yet another weapon. Beginning August 31, drivers will lose their driving privileges for one year if they refuse to take an alcohol concentration test. Refusal to take a test will also be offered as evidence against drivers in court, according to the Minnesota department of public safety.

New law further refines what happens to drivers under the age of 18 who refuse to take a test to determine whether they are under the influence of alcohol or a controlled substance. People in this age category will suffer the loss of their driving privileges for one year or until they reach their 18th birthday, whichever is greater.

Deaths resulting from alcohol-related traffic accidents continue to decline in Minnesota as drunk driving arrests continue to rise. Latest figures on alcohol-related traffic deaths reveal that in 1983, 318 people lost their lives. In 1973 573 died in accidents in which drinking was involved. Drunk driving arrests in 1983 totaled 32,155. In 1977 16,976 drunk driving arrests were made and the number has been climbing ever since.

Public safety commissioner Paul Tschida points to driver's license revocations as another indicator of the seriousness with which his department is emphasizing enforcement. Under Minnesota's two-track review system drivers are not only subject to jusicial review in which fines and-or jail sentences can be assessed but are also subject to administrative review where their driving privileges can be modified, suspended or revoked, explained Tschida. He said over 33,000 drivers had their licenses revoked in 1983.

Two-track system went into effect in Minnesota 1976. Since then 18 other states have developed a similar system, following Minnesota's lead.

Alcohol-related traffic deaths were down 45 per cent in the decade 1973-1983. Injury and property damage accidents related to alcohol also declined 10 per cent and 22 per cent respectively. Commissioner Tschida notes that 25 per cent of all traffic arrests in Minnesota are for drunk driving. He adds, "the person tempted to drive after drinking should remember that this is a crime which can carry the death penalty for innocent victims."

Co-op System Catching On In Business

In Northeast Philadelphia, 40 employees of an A and P supermarket bought the store after the business failed and its doors were closed. They saved their jobs. It's been a year and a half since the workers bought the supermarket and they now expect to turn a profit for the first time with sales up by more than 30 per cent.

In Decatur, Illinois, the owner of Simmons Construction company sold his successful firm to seven of his employees in 1982 because none of his heirs wanted to run the business. Employees now own this thriving business which has sales of four to five million dollars annually.

These enterprises are worker-cooperatives. They are spearheading a structure for business ownership that is gaining acceptance in this country. If you are interested in this form of "worker captalism," the Minnesota society of CPAs says you should know about the way cooperatives are structured, how much money you'll need to invest, the risks involved in being a worker-owner, and the peculiar tax rules that make cooperatives attractive to workers.

An estimated 200 companies with less than 50 employees are cooperatives, according to Joseph Blasi, a Harvard university professor researching the subject. He says that companies with 50 employees or less are "just right" for this type of structure because they are not too big for employees to manage themselves.

Under the cooperative arrangement, employees have ultimate control over the company, according to the Industrial Cooperative association in Somerville, Mass. This control by the workers is what distinguishes a cooperative from its distant cousin, an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP).

Workers own a percentage of the company in an ESOP, but their hand in managing affairs of the firm is restricted because they do not control a majority on the board of directors.

In a small cooperative firm with eight or 10 employee-owners, everyone participates in the day-to-day management of the company. In larger companies, a board of directors is elected to represent all the worker-owners. The board sets policy for the company and hires managers to run the day-to-day affairs of the firm. On critical issues, all worker-owners vote.

Structure for many American worker-cooperatives is modeled after those in Mondragon, Spain, where entire industries have been operating successfully this way since 1956 and about 100 such enterprises employ an estimated 20,000 persons.

In most American cooperatives, workers put up about 10 per cent of the money needed to buy the company. But the way a worker-owner profits on that investment differentiates cooperatives from conventional corporations.

In a worker cooperative, half of the company's profit is reinvested in the company and this portion of the profit is taxed the same as a conventional corporation's profit. The remaining half of the cooperative's profit, however, is divided up evenly among the employee-owners and set aside as separate bank accounts.

The principal and interest in these accounts can be withdrawn after a set period of time or when the worker-owner pulls out of the cooperative. In the meantime, the cooperative can reinvest that portion of the profit and not pay the corporate tax on it.

But cooperatives do not provide a magic formula for success. Workers who are not familiar with the accounting, operational and managerial problems of running a business can be overwhelmed. And if a business is not profitable, even the inherent advantages of a cooperative cannot overcome all the business' problems. If the business fails, a worker-owner loses not only his job, but also the profits held in the capital accoount and his initial investment.

Nationwide network of organizations, however, may make it easier for cooperatives to overcome these obstacles. To tap that network, contact the National Center for Employee Ownership in Arlington, Virginia.

Peterson Has Tractor Pull Choice To Make

been to Fourtown in Beltrami county to pick up an addition for his collection. He enjoys going to auctions where older tractors are available or where he can possibly pick up spare parts.

The least he ever paid for a tractor, he said, is $75, and he later sold that unit for $800. Parts for the old time machines are increasingly more difficult to obtain. Frequently in prior years Bob and Ed would travel to Karlstad where they were able to purchase quite a few parts from "Junk Henry" Peterson (no relation to Bob) at his salvage yard.

Bob's interests also extend to other old farm equipment and vehicles. He has a Model 60 Allis-Chalmers combine from the late 1940's, a loose hay loader, McCormick binder, Allis-Chalmers threshing machine and a 1956 Ford-one-ton pickup in exceptional condition.

There are no duplicates in his collection of 33 tractors. He has two Model B John Deere and two Model D John Deere tractors, but the "B" units are 1939 and 1952 models and the "D" units are 1930 and 1949 models.

Although he has pared his collection by about half from what it was a year ago, he continues to look for additions to it. He has John Deere tractors in the Model 40, 50 and 80 series but is missing Models 60 and 70. "I'm always on the lookout for one of those," Bob said. "I keep watching the auction bills and I have seen a couple of them listed."

Peterson originally lived on a farm west of St. Hilaire as a youngster but has been at his present farm since the fall of 1940. He milks about 20 grade Holstein cattle and maintains about 15 beef cows.

People interested in older tractors and seeing how they compare in power and traction are encouraged to attend the tractor pull located on the island in St. Hilaire. Three-wheeler races will follow the tractor pull.

Set Computer Literacy For Teachers Here

senior high school, attended the "Teach the Teachers" class during the summer of 1982. He is on sabbatical from Rochester Independent School District 535 to IBM for the 1984-85 school year.

In addition to the instructors, IBM Rochester is also providing the program curriculum, software and classroom materials and 15 personal computers for use by the teachers during the Bemidji workshop. Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute is providing use of its computers and facilities for the program in this community.

"IBM has long recognized the need to increase computer literacy among junior and senior high school students," said Haggerty. "We also recognized that before effective classroom instruction in computers could take place, it would be necessary to have classroom instructors become familiar with computers. As a result, the 'Teach the Teachers' program was created in cooperation with the Rochester schools in 1981. Since that time, the program has been expanded to include schools throughout southeastern Minnesota and now to the northern portions of the state.

"Through this program, classroom teachers who have had little or no training in computer usage develop a familiarity and working knowledge that allows them to teach computer literacy to their students in their individual classrooms."

Teachers participating in the program are given an intensive course in BASIC programming techniques, spreadsheets, word processing and some applications unique to teachers. Major emphasis is placed on assisting the teachers to feel more comfortable in presenting computer usage to their students.

TRF Delegates At Methodist Conference

The 130th session of the Minnesota annual conference of the United Methodist church was conducted by Bishop Emerson Colaw at St. Cloud state university.

Worship services for the conference were centered around four key events of the Christian church year: Christmas, Good Friday, Easter and Pentecost.

Representing the Thief River Falls Methodist church were the lay member Orin Green and pastors Melvyn Budke and Bernard Lewellin. Visitors included Mrs. Green and Mrs. Budke. Both of the pastors were assigned by Bishop Colaw to the Thief River Falls United Methodist church for another year.

There was a great deal of discussion and debate on the merit and amount of the budget for 1985. Final accepted budget for the Minnesota annual conference to be apportioned to all the United Methodist church in Minnesota was $3,651,000. These monies will go to support the ministry of the conference around the world through the conference council on ministries and their programs, ministerial support items, conference administration, and the world service and conference benevolences.

One of the highlights of the annual conference each year is the Wednesday night ordination service at St. John's Abbey at Collegeville. This year 12 deacons and 16 elders were ordained.

Health Dep't. Urges Caution After Flooding

Continued heavy rains in Minnesota this spring had led to flooding of basements and private water wells in some areas of the state, according to the Minnesota department of health.

Department authorities are urging that well owners take appropriate steps to disinfect flooded wells and have them tested for bacterial contamination. Local community health service agencies across the state can advise well owners on how and where to have their wells tested.

Residents of this area should contact Quin-county public health agency, phone 874-7845.

Authorities warn that water from flooded wells should be boiled before use, until the well and the entire water distribution system has been flushed out, disinfected, tested and found safe. Officials recommend taking the following steps to flush and disinfect a well, before having it tested:

(1) Pump the well until water runs clear.

(2) Mix together and pour into the well a solution of three gallons water and one quart laundry bleach (Clorox, Purex, Hilex or similar hypochlorite product).

(3) Pump the solution into the piping system and leave it there at least overnight.

(4) Pump and flush the system until the taste and odor of chlorine are completely gone. Then wait 48 hours before having the well tested.

(5) If you have a water softener, disconnect it while disinfecting your water system. Regenerate the unit before placing it back in use, and be sure to add a tablespoon of disinfectant to the regenerating solution.

Flooded basements and contaminated food also present potential health hazards, authorities say. Homeowners are advised to begin cleaning and reconditioning their basements as soon as flood waters recede — unless the ground outside is saturated, or there is still flooding above ground. In that case, pumping and cleaning should be delayed, so that the pressure of water outside the basement will not collapse walls.

After silt and debris have been removed, scrubbing the walls and floor with soap and water will usually be enough to eliminate any health hazards. A disinfectant solution of two ounces laundry bleach to a gallon of water can also be used to scrub down the basement.

Food which came in direct contact with flood water, or which was packaged in non-waterproof containers, should be destroyed. In the case of canned foods, remove all labels, wash cans thoroughly, wipe down cans with solution of one ounce laundry bleach to two gallons of water, and rinse in clean water. In the case of home-canned foods, also boil the food for 10 minutes before using.

Auditor Says Cities To Have Money Problem

State Auditor Arne Carlson states that Minnesota cities and counties may have serious financial problems in the future if they are forced to continue to operate under the current system.

"The real problem," Carlson said, "is simply that too many local government decisions are made in St. Paul. Since the early 1970's Minnesota has been shifting local governmental decisions to the Minnesota state legislature and the results are increasingly alarming. Financially, counties are spending more for current programs and deferring long-term capital expenditures, while cities are getting deeper into debt.

"The time has come for the state as a whole to decide whether or not we want this practice to continue. The worst part," Carlson warned, "is that no one can tell us who is accountable for what."

Carlson is releasing a report on the financial health of Minnesota cities and counties over recent years; the report is based on his office's financial health program, which collects extensive data from cities and counties throughout the state.

The 28-page report summarizes four-year revenue and expenditure trends for the 87 counties and for the 180 cities in Minnesota over 2,500 population. It highlights aspects of their economic vitality, current financial conditions, future solvency and management practices.

"Financial health," Carlson said, "is the ability to adapt expenditures to resources on a continuing basis."

"In Minnesota," Carlson said, "an inquiry into the financial health of cities and counties inevitably raises questions about the system in which they operate."

Carlson emphasized that the local governments are managing their money well, but that they are constrained by limits of state laws and formulas that affect revenues and expenditures.

"The current system is formula-driven and mandate-driven, that is, it is geared to expenditures rather than available resources such as taxes," Carlson said. "The current system vastly reduces policy options for cities and counties."

Carlson cited a serious need for long-term planning and goal analysis. "We need first to ask ourselves if our goals are valid. The system has never really been examined because it has been focused on short-term survival."

According to Carlson, the basic assumptions of government change drastically, but we are unable to adapt to those changes. He noted that the base rate of structural unemployment, four per cent in the 1960's, is now assumed to be around seven per cent. "Such a change has incredible ramifications throughout our governmental system," he said.

"We can build a system where we know who's in charge," Carlson stated. "But we have to examine the role of the state legislature in making spending decisions for cities and counties. Right now, the cities and counties don't even know what their resource base is going to be until the legislature meets."

According to the report, all counties and majority of cities met the "bottom line" criterion of short-term financial health. From 1979 to 1982, no county had a deficit balance in its county revenue (general) fund. In 1982, only nine cities — five per cent of those over 2,500 population — showed a deficit in their general fund.

Support Group For Chronic Illness Meets

Fireworks Are Best Enjoyed At Displays

Mention July Fourth and people will think of family outings, parades and "bombs bursting in air" at public fireworks displays.

However, not all bombs burst in air, as an estimated 8,277 Americans found out last year when they were treated in hospital emergency rooms for injuries caused by fireworks.

According to the National Society to Prevent Blindness, an estimated 1,232 of those people suffered some type of eye injury. The materials most often causing them were firecrackers, cherry bombs, M-80s, salutes, roman candles and fountains.

Fireworks are not toys, although some people may think they are, says the blindness society. Last year 72 per cent of fireworks injury victims were between the ages of five and 24 years old. Even "safe" fireworks, such as sparklers, pose high risks to unprotected eyes. Sparklers burn at more than 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit. That is almost the same temperature it takes to melt gold. Upon contact with an eye, sparklers could cause severe burns.

Despite the continued high incidence of fireworks-related injuries, some states have eased fireworks controls over the past few years. However, that trend now seems to be reversing itself.

A prime example of this is the state of Washington. In 1982, the state liberalized laws restricting the type of fireworks available for sale. However, a study conducted by the Washington state department of social health services sampling hospital emergency rooms in nine counties, showed conclusively that fireworks-related injuries more than doubled during the July 2, 1984 season over the same period for 1981.

Earlier this year, Washington state Governor John Spellman signed a bill outlawing firecrackers, noisy and explosive ground devices. He vetoed a provision that made the law effective on Jan. 1, 1985 to ensure it would be in effect this July Fourth.

The best way to make it a safe July Fourth, advises the national society, is by enjoying fireworks the only safe and sane way — at a licensed public display.

The National Society to Prevent Blindness, found in 1908, is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through a comprehensive program of community services, public and professional education and research.

Value Of Water

"You see, folks, the whole concept of free water is based upon a surplus of water. For the first time in the history of this country, we do not have a surplus of water. We even have shortages in a lot of places in the country, and shortages bring value. So all of a sudden, water is going out of the category of free and going into the category of valued. What implications does that have for us in the valley?"

This compelling comment is made by Dr. Joseph P. Rossillon, executive director of the Freshwater Foundation, writing in a publication called "Environmental Heritage". The publication is prepared by the International Coalition for Land and Water Stewardship in the Red River Drainage Basin.

Dr. Rossillon points out that it is necessary from time to time to stop and see if the way we have been doing things is still the right way to do them. Frequently there are new ground rules and new questions that require different answers.

To area farmers who have seen all the surface water they want to see and then some for the past three to five years, the value of water in volume can be cynically questioned. But Dr. Rossillon notes that three terms are now being applied to water in volume — cost-sharing, user fee and vendability.

It is projected that between now and the year 2000 the United States will spend $160 billion on water projects. That money will have to come from user fees. Those fees will be paid by various benefitting people and agencies, and that means cost-sharing. What's left is the vendable. Dr. Rossillon addresses that potential change in perspective as follows:

"Two years ago South Dakota sold the water behind Oahe dam in the Missouri river," he writes, "sold it for $28 million a year. And every state around is drooling at the thought. Twenty-eight million dollars a year, and all of a sudden we have something that is vendable. All of a sudden we have a way to balance our state budget. All of a sudden water is a valued resource."

Saying water is becoming a valued resource may seem simplistic, he notes, but the economy of the United States is based upon water as a free resource. Nobody pays for water. You get it free at the source. We pay for storage, delivery, cleaning, piping, all kinds of stuff, but water is free. You go get a bucket and pick it up.

Dr. Rossillon says that $28 million a year for the water behind Oahe dam figures out to two cents for every 10 gallons — which seems to be a pretty cheap figure. But if water was worth two cents for 10 gallons, you would have to add 30 cents to the cost of a Sunday newspaper and 60 cents to a loaf of bread to pay for the water. You would have to add $8 to a pound of beef, $3 to a hamburger, French fries and a soft drink.

In the United States it takes an estimated one and one-half million gallons of water a year to produce the food for one person — the equivalent of $30,000 at two cents per 10 gallons. An average Christmas dinner for eight people would cost $85 for the water value alone. Placing a value on water changes the perspective a great deal. Dr. Rossillon speculates as follows:

"Now what are the implications? Every year we have a flood in the Red River Valley, or dang near every year, and it all goes up to Canada, and Canada gets all upset about it and everything. Two cents for evey 10 gallons of flood can make Canada rich. Look what they're got coming down the way.

"If water is worth two cents for every 10 gallons, who gets it? Does Canada get it? Or should it be right, then, that the upper watershed should start damming it and holding it? After all, why should we give Canada all that free water: In fact, do you suppose, if we are going to send all that water to Canada in a flood, maybe we ought to charge them two cents for every 10 gallons that comes down the road: Or are we just going to give it to them free? 'That's a very magnanimous gift. At no time in the history of the United States has it ever done anything that wonderful.

Can you imagine the flood going to Canada and then they sell it back to Nebraska and South Dakota because the Oogalala's pumped dry — selling it back for irrigation? You see what two cents for every 10 gallons does?

"You see, folks, the whole concept of free water is based upon a surplus of water. For the first time in the history of this country, we do not have a surplus of water."

He calls attention to a ruling by the supreme court of the Southwest that ruled the city of El Paso, TX, was authorized to go into New Mexico — against the wishes of New Mexico — and drill 316 wells to provide water for the city of El Paso. The reason was that the needs of people take precedent over ownership.

"Now who is water-rich?" Dr. Rossillon asks. "Is Minnesota a water-rich state? Or is Minnesota a reservoir for those people who need water? Ownership is an interesting question.

". . . We manage water as a surplus, we manage water as a free resource, and we manage water to get rid of it. Most of our management is designed to get rid of that surplus. If suddenly that surplus is worth something, then it is not a surplus any more. It is not something that you design to get rid of; you figure a way to keep it — to retain it. In other words, the change in value requires a change in management approach.

"I had a nice chat with the DNR (department of natural resources) of the state of Minnesota. I said, 'Look here, you are chock full of hydrologists and a bunch of legals; and there is not an economist in the bunch. You run the chance of being responsible for the richest resource in the state of Minnesota with no experience or training in how to do that. That could be as exciting as hell if you stop to think about it!"

It's an interesting concept and worth of some consideration, this ownership of water business. Right now, however, there are plenty of farmers who would settle for a lot less than two cents per 10 gallons if someone would come and get the water right away.

Milk And Cholesterol

The following editorial was submitted by Janet Herman, director of nutrition education for the Dairy, Food and Nutrition council of Minnesota. DFNC, supported by Minnesota dairy farmers, is responsible for nutrition education and research.

A recent study by the National Heart, Lund and Blood institute has sparked new concerns about cholesterol. Minnesota dairy products are again being linked to high levels of cholesterol and heart disease, not by the actual finding of the study, but by some of the misinterpretations that are being made.

First and foremost, the study on the relationship between blood cholesterol and heart disease was not a diet study. It was research on the effects of a drug called cholestyramine.

Depiste this specific scope of the study, numerous media reports have interpreted the results to implicate not only diet in general, but also individual foods. Somehow the success of the drug cholestyramine on men with high cholesterol levels has been turned into blanket recommendations on diet to the general population. Dairy products especially have been wronged and it's time to set the record straight.

Products like whole milk and cheese are not high-cholesterol foods, as so often reported. According to the U.S. department of agriculture, a one-cup serving of milk (whole, two per cent or skim) or a one-ounce serving of cheddar cheese, has less cholesterol than a three-ounce serving of fish or chicken, two foods normally included in a low-cholesterol diet.

Cutting out one particular food or group of foods is not the cure-all for heart disease, and it is wrong for anyone to convey this false sense of hope. It ignores other factors like genetics, obesity, smoking, high blood pressure and lack of exercise — all risk factors for heart disease.

For nearly 70 years, the National Dairy council and its local units, like the Dairy, Food and Nutrition council of Minnesota, have recommended a balanced diet. It may seem old-fashioned, but it still holds true today; the key to good health through nutrition depends on variety and moderation. What you include in your overall diet is far more important than the cholesterol content of any single food.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Two sailors were adrift on a raft in the ocean, seemingly without hope for rescue. One began to pray aloud, "O Lord, I have led a worthless life. I've been unkind to my wife and neglected my children, abused my body with hard liquor and tobacco, but if you'll save me, I promise. . . ."

"Hold it!" the other sailor shouted. "I think I see land!"

The naughty young boy took refuge under his bed when his mother finally threatened a spanking. She let him stay there a short while until his father came home. Informed of the youngster's activity, the father went to the youngster's room and lifted the bedspread. "Hi, Dad," the boy whispered. "Is she after you, too?"

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

It was unfortunate that the Jaycees were given "the rotten fish award" for June. It is quite an honor (?) for the Jaycees. It's not often we are recognized for what we do, whether good or bad. I only hope the Mr. or Mrs. "Name Withheld By Request" doesn't judge the Jaycees as a group by the actions of one. I don't know the circumstances of the award, but I'd like to add my comments.

Having worked on the sandbox fill for about nine out of the last 10 years, I know of the sweat, aching muscles, the blisters of lugging around 100 pound wheelbarrows of sand through trees, bushes, over curbs, around gardens, through mud, etc., to fill those 100 sandboxes around town. I just talked to several other Jaycees and it seems we filled nearly all the sandboxes in Thief River except our own. Sure sounds like fun, doesn't it?

Why do I continue to have such fun: Because I have real concern for kids! The kids are the real "key" to the project. Several years ago, our last stop of the evening was in Basswood Mobile Home court. After we emptied the truck, the kids thanked us, the mothers thanked us, and a little girl whispered something in her mother's ear. The mother flagged us down, ran over to us, and told us her daughter had said that the Jaycees rated up there just after Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny. That makes it worthwhile. Now how the aches, pains and blisters seem so trivial!

Please publish the following letter:

Dear "Name Withheld By Request":

In response to your recent letter in the Times, we apologize for the inconvenience and-or confusion concerning the handling of our sandbox fill project. Over the past years of the project we have received complaints of leaving too much sand, too little sand, putting sand in the wrong place, too large a tire, too small a tire, and have left sand at unattended homes with some homeowners rewarding us with NSF (bad) checks or in some cases not paying our statements.

To briefly summarize how we run the project, it goes like this (simply stated): (1) Schedule project dates; (2) confirm use of borrowed equipment and supplies; (3) take orders; (4) schedule deliveries — separate orders into areas; (5) round up equipment; and (6) deliver sand.

Our basic guidelines, other than price, are that deliveries will be limited to city limits or nearby trailer parks, and deliveries will be made as soon as possible during the delivery week. We try to do the best we can with the borrowed equipment we have, the limited time we have (away from our own families) and the manpower we have.

Yet, how seldom we see any praise or thanks. It's not often organizations get words of thanks. Maybe that's why praise is so precious. We look at projects like Operation Christmas, summerfest, demo derby, radio days, Halloween patrol, haunted house, fireworks, etc., and say: "Why? What's in it for us?"

Again we apologize for what may have been inappropriate actions by one of our members. Please do not judge us by the actions of one. In closing we would like to extend public thanks to the 100+ families who patiently waited for us to fill their sandboxes. Thanks for your support. We would also like to thank those who graciously donated their time, help and support: Firestone, Schumacher Tireland, Joe Kezar (for the truck), Falls Supply, Ace Hardware, KKAQ, KTRF-KSNR and The Times.

Also, thanks kids, for your patience and your smiles when we came around; you make it all worth while.

Sincerely,
Thief River Falls Jaycees

Home Health Aides Course Passed By 22

Twenty-two students from seven counties recently completed a 60-hour home health aide-homemaker training course which was offered for the first time by Thief River Falls area vocational technical institute.

Course was intended to acquaint the students with the philosophy of public health nursing services and the role of the homemaker-home health aide, and prepare them to work on a public health team. In addition to teaching basic performance skills needed to safely carry out duties under the supervision of a professional nurse, the course offered basic concepts of the responsibilities, limitations and duties of the job.

Under supervision of Lou Nelson, a registered nurse from Crookston, students were instructed through use of films, lectures, demonstrations and group discussions, with many sessions handled by resource people from the community.

Instructors demonstrated basic skills of personal care and described possible adaptations for their use in the home setting. Return demonstrations by the trainees were evaluated for information of prospective employing agencies. In addition, identical tests were taken by each trainee on the first and final days of class, so that agency directors could evaluate the degree of change, when considering the students as prospective employees.

FOURTH PLACE in the kiddie parade sponsored by the Thief River Falls community arts council as part of Art in the Park festivities on Thursday was declared a tie by the judges, who couldn't decide between Kristine and Elizabeth Goddard, in Scandinavian costumes, or Laura Steiger in her bunny suit.

Bill To Allow VA To Acquire Existing Homes

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has introduced a bill that would ensure quality, cost-effective nursing home care for veterans as the larger number of war-era vets put a potential strain on existing vets facilities.

The Boschwitz bill would allow states to use Veterans administration state nursing home program construction funds to acquire existing facilities. Currently these funds can only be used to construct new nursing homes or repair those already in the system.

"My bill gives states the flexibility to use the option to acquire an existing nursing home at a much lower cost rather than go to the expense of building a new one," Boschwitz said.

Minnesota Congressman Tim Penny is the bill's author in the House of Representatives.

"Most people realize that the VA does not have the resources to build the number of nursing homes it will need to handle the aging World War II veterans," Boschwitz said.

"We also realize that even if the resources were available, a short-term solution of major nursing home construction would only leave us with large numbers of unused facilities 20 to 30 years down the road when we no longer have such a large over-65 veteran population.

"Currently in Minnesota 20 per cent of our elderly are veterans and already 50 per cent of the males over 65 are vets. We are also facing an incredible increase in the number of vets over 80. These are the people who will most likely need and use long-term care facilities. This group numbers 5,500 now and will be 60,000 by the year 2000.

"I believe this bill will provide the VA and the states with another tool to give these veterans the health care they will need."

The state home program has two parts: one provides partial payment for the cost of the veteran's care and the second provides grants for up to 65 per cent of the cost for construction or modernization of extended care facilities.

"The state home program is a well-run, cost-effective program and my legislation will only improve it."

Boschwitz credited the Minnesota Department of Veterans Affairs for bringing this matter to his attention.

Congressman Offers Bill On Farm Loans

Congressman Arlan Stangeland has joined Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa introducing a bill to give family farmers more time to pay back loans.

The bill would involve the Farmers Home administration (FmHA), commercial lenders and farmers who are caught in the cost-price squeeze with mounting loan debts.

The farmers and the lender would voluntarily work out a "loan stretchout," so that the term of the original loan and the extension would not exceed 20 years.

If the county FmHA committee certifies that the farmer has a credible chance of surviving and approves the application for the program, the lender takes a 10 to 20 per cent writedown on the unpaid principal of the loan, and in return the FmHA guarantees 90 per cent of the remainder.

The government receives the 10 to 20 per cent writedown as payment for guaranteeing the loan, with interest accruing on this portion at the average rate the government paid on funds it borrowed in the previous year.

The interest rate the farmer pays on the rescheduled loan is negotiable, but the rate can be no higher than three percentage points above the discount rate.

Farmers who enter this program cannot incur more debt than is necessary for operating capital for the duration of the loan restructuring program unless specifically authorized by the county FmHA committee after two years of consistent loan repayment.

"This is not a bail-out for land speculators nor a give-away to poor farm managers," Congressman Stangeland said. "It is an effort to create a program with risks and benefits for everybody.

"Farmers who qualify would get a chance to avoid bankruptcy and work off their debts, but they must accept restrictions on their ability to incur further debts," he said. "Lenders must take a 10 to 20 per cent loss on the loan, but in exchange they get a government guarantee on 90 per cent of the rest of the loan and they have a chance to sell the loan to FmHA at the end of the original term of the loan.

"The government takes a risk in guaranteeing the loans, but could potentially make a profit if loan repayments exceed loan losses," Congressman Stangeland said.

He also noted that this is similar to the Chrysler loan guarantee. That auto-maker received $1.2 billion of loan guarantees, and the government received warrants for Chrysler stock. When Chrysler began to make money, the government sold the stock warrants for a $300 million profit. Thousands of jobs were saved, including hundreds of jobs in Minnesota.

"This bill would ease some of the burdens on hard-working farm families that are in trouble through no fault of their own," Stangeland said. "It is an investment in good families that provide food for our tables at a reasonable cost."

Non-Ag Wage Employment Rises In State

Nonagricultural wage and salary employment in Minnesota reached an all-time high in May, according to Commissioner Barbara Beerhalter of the department of economic security.

A total of 1,814,400 persons had employment in May, up 35,100 from April. The previous high of 1,806,900 jobs was recorded in October of 1979 (figures not seasonally adjusted).

The favorable news came on the heels of a March labor department report that job growth in Minnesota was 4.8 per cent above year-ago levels, exceeding the national growth average of 4.1 per cent, to lead all other Midwestern states, Beerhalter added. As of March, Minnesota ranked ninth in the nation for growth of nonfarm jobs in the past year, she said.

"This past year's rapid job expansion exceeds the post-recession rate of recovery recorded in 1975-76," Beerhalter said.

Expansion of jobs in May was led by particularly strong gains in trade (up 10,500 jobs or 2.4 per cent), construction (up 9,800 or 16.6 per cent), manufacturing (up 5,700 or 1.6 per cent) and services (up 5,300 or 1.3 per cent).

Since last May, 94,800 wage and salary jobs have been added, with 24,200 in trade, 22,900 in services and 22,500 in manufacturing. Over-the-year gains as large as this have not been experienced in Minnesota since the late 1970s, Beerhalter added.

Minint employment, although up from a year ago, still remains in a depressed state of 5,500 jobs below May of 1981, with little prospect of significant improvement in the near future, Beerhalter said.

After seasonal adjustements, nonagricultural wage and salary employment in May was up 11,200 from April and set an all-time high in May of 1,801,600, Beerhalter said. The previous high was in April of this year when the level for the first time exceeded the previous record high of 1,788,700 in December of 1979, she said.

Recovery in 1983-84 has been faster than the 1975-76 economic recovery over smiliar time period, when total nonfarm employment was up 6.1 per cent as compared with an increase of 7.3 per cent during the current recovery period.

Industry patterns during both recoveries were generally similar. Industries doing much better this time were construction (with an increase in jobs of 21.5 per cent compared to 5.5 per cent during the previous period) and mining (with a gain of 47.8 per cent compared to 12.8 per cent for the earlier period.) Beerhatler said the mining figure does not mean that much, however, as it started from such a low level during the current period, 6,900 jobs as against 14,100.

The growth in government employment was up 2.1 per cent now, compared to 3.9 in the mid-70s recovery.

The average weekly earnings of manufacturing production workers decreased from $394.28 in April to $388.49 in May due to drop in the average work week from 40.9 hours to 40.3 hours. Average hourly earnings remained unchanged at $9.64.

Rib Section Is Used To Build A Lower Jaw

In a remarkable procedure, a section of a rib has been removed from a patient with blood supply and vessels intact, molded into the arched shape of a jaw and implanted into the mouth to produce a new mandible, or lower jaw, strong enough to eventually support dentures.

In the procedure, called a vascularized rib graft, the jaw-shaped rib was secured to the inner jaw by wires and the vessels were attached to the facial arteries to link up and re-establish a natural flow of blood.

Mouth cancer, serious accident, congenital deformity, loss of teeth and bone deteriorations may be some of the reasons a person would need reconstruction of his mandible. "The diminished quality of life for these patients is dramatic and far-reaching," said a plastic surgeon who worked as part of a team of plastic surgeons and oral surgeons at the University of California at Irvine to perform this intricate surgery.

"Not only are patients with mandibular deformities reduced to a limited diet, but socialization is greatly impaired and a normal appearance impossible," he stated.

During surgery, the two teams worked together, using an acrylic model of the mandible as a guide. The oral surgery team prepared the jaw and gums to receive the transplant. The plastic surgery team selected the rib with the best curvature to simulate a human jaw line, removed a graft of the rib, shaped it and wired it into the jaw.

The blood vessels from the rib to those of the mouth and face were carefully attached.

After the rib was in place in the mandible, bone chips were packed around the new lower jaw to strengthen and fill in the cheek area. Additional surgery was then required to strengthen and lower the floor of the mouth to improve the stability and comfort in accommodating new dentures.

This is the first instance reported of a graft with an intact blood supply being taken from one part of the patient and transferred to another part of the body. Called an autograft, the transference of one's tissues to oneself limits rejection, decreases infection and provides a stronger bone.

Several positive changes have occurred in the two years since surgery. Now, with less limited food choices, one can enjoy eating in a restaurant, have confidence in one's appearance, and experience an increase in self-esteem.

Reagan Budget Cut Report Is Released

First comprehensive report of program-by-program and state-by-state cuts made or porposed in the 177 major federal social spending programs during the four years of the Reagan presidency was released recently by the American federation of state, county and municipal employees (AFSCME).

AFSCME, the nation's largest public employee union with over one million members, said the cuts totaled $88 billion if the FY 1975 budget submitted to the Congress was included in the cuts already enacted in the previous three fiscal years of the Reagan presidency. AFSCME report notes that $59 billion in cuts come from grants-in-aid to state and local government while $29 billion in cuts come from entitlement programs. Losses measured are based on changes from pre-Reagan policy levels.

Minnesota has lost a total of $1.4 billion in federal aid since 1981, an amount equal to $339 per person in the state. Minnesota ranks 34 out of all the states in per capita losses.

Grant-in-aid losses totalled $960 million, or $232 per persons. Minnesota ranks 32 out of all the states in grant-in-aid losses. It ranks sixth in losses for urban development action grants, seventh in Medicaid losses, and eighth in lost aid for energy conservation.

Losses in payments to individuals totalled $442, or $107 per person. Minnesota ranks 36 out of all the states in per capita losses in this category.

"These cuts impact all Minnesotans, especially the needy, the unemployed and the elderly. It's going to take a coalition of all who oppose these unfair, insensitive cuts to defeat Ronald Reagan and Rudy Boschwich, said Eliot Seide, AFSCME area director.

Summer Hockey News

Section 8 high school hockey secretary Frank Fee of Crookston issued a summer hockey newsletter last week that reviewed activity concerning the sport that has developed this spring.

Included among his notes was a very early preseason prediction on the 1984-85 Section 8 hockey race as he projected Bemidji No. 1, followed in order by Fergus Falls, Warroad and Moorhead.

Fee noted there will be at least three new head hockey coaches in Section 8 next winter, with Thief River Falls product Jeff Lindquist, squeezed out of the Red Lake Falls system in budget-related moves, going to Devils Lake, N.D.; Father Pat Sullivan of East Grand Forks Sacred Heart has been reassigned to the campus of Bemidji State University; and Doug Nosan has resigned at Lake of the Woods.

At their spring meeting, Section 8 coaches selected Mike Donahue of Alexandria as the new president of the Section 8 Hockey Coaches Association for the 1984-85 season, and voted to stay with the same Iron Range-area officiating crew for the Section 8 tournament, including Mike Tok, John Bymark, Bob Tok and Robert Zuelke, who will work the four quarterfinal games. The Mike Tok-John Bymark combination will work the tournament semifinals and finals.

With only East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls bidding on the Section 8 tournament, officials, as it was reported earlier, have opted to continue to alternate the tournament site between East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls. The tournament quarterfinals, semifinals and finals, held in Thief River Falls in 1984, will move to East Grand Forks in 1985 and will return to Thief River Falls in 1986.

Fee reports that the 1984 Section 8 hockey playoffs netted some $19,933.92. The North Sub-Section 8 playoff games netted $2,503.88, including a big $1,021.76 pot for a first-round East Grand Forks-Crookston match-up at Crookston. The South Sub-Section 8 playoffs netted another $1,604.72 and the Section 8 tournament in Thief River Falls netted $15,824.32, a figure reported earlier.

Region 8 Committee, reminded Fee, approved the Section 8 Hockey Coaches Association recommendations for the 1985 tournament. Last year marked the first time coaches seeded the top four teams into the Section 8 tournament quarterfinals instead of automatically giving those spots to the four finishers in the regular season Section 8 standings.

In 1985 the coaches will be seeding the team on three different occasions during the playoffs.

First, the top four teams will be seeded as they were for the 1984 tournament. Then, the remaining teams will seed the rest of the field in their own north of south divisions — seeding teams only within their own division. In 1984 those positions were determined by the regular season standings.

After sub-sectional play, which will qualify two teams from the north and two from the south in the Section 8 tournament quarterfinals, the coaches who were involved in the sub-section playoffs will once again seed those four teams to determine their tournament opponents at East Grand Forks.

It was not a unanimous vote by the coaches that passed that playoff procedure, reported Fee, with 10 voting for the measure, seven against and two were undecided.

Two Section 8 skaters were taken in the spring NHL draft, pointed out Fee, with Roseau's Paul Broten selected on the fourth round by the New York Rangers and Moorhead's Jim Steen picked on the 11th round by the Pittsburgh Penguins.

In canvassing the area, Fee came up with a list of where some of the 1984 Section 8 hockey seniors will be playing their hockey in 1984-85, although he's quick to point out that the players' plan could change:

Alexandria — Brent Lervick, Iowa State; Jeff Bast and Lonnie Little, Juniors; Dave Faber, Ross Campbell and Steve Davis, Northland Community College.

Brainerd — David Ellingson and Kurt Muesing, Concordia; Steve Ebinger, undecided.

Crookston — Rick Dahle, Juniors or St. Cloud State; Mark Lyczewski and Mike Hastings, Juniors or North Dakota State; Tom Conati, Scott Sirek, Mike Madigan and Dave Holmquist, University of Minnesota-Crookston.

Detroit Lakes — Bob Caulfield, Miami or Ohio; Tom Johnson, St. Olaf; Chad Meyhoff, Bemidji State or North Dakota State; Aaron Burnside and Kevin Anderson, Rainy River Community College.

East Grand Forks — Todd Boushee, Juniors; Ryan Christiansen and Bill Stauss, North Dakota State; John Schacher, University of Alaska-Anchorage.

Fergus Falls — Joe Gervais, University of Vermont; Kris and Kurk Werner, Boston University; Craig Hedstrom, Jason Wentler and Mike Donley, Juniors.

Lake of the Woods — Curt Bitter, Juniors; Daryl Grund and Kevin Pieper, Northland Community College.

Moorhead — Jim Steen, Juniors; Scott Sarbacker, Yale.

Bagley — Bob Bestul, Juniors.

Grand Forks, St. Hilaire Teams Win Lake Agassiz Tournaments

Southgate Lounge of Grand Forks won the Class A-B portion of the tournament, while the St. Hilare Bears took the Class C-D title Sunday during the sun-drenched Thief River Falls Lake Agassiz men's slow pitch invitational.

Six teams participated in the round-robin Class A-B event, won by Southgate Lounge with a perfect 5-0 record. The tournament draw worked out perfectly as Southgate Lounge and Thief River Falls' American Legion-Miller Beer wound up matching 4-0 records against each other in the final 6 p.m. round.

Southgate Lounge won it in an unusually low-scoring 1-0 fashion, producing the game's only run on an error and two hits in the second inning. American Legion-Miller Beer, held hitless through four innings and retired in order through the first 11 batters, finished with just four base hits. Southgate Lounge had six.

En route to the title, Southgate Lounge also beat Pepsi Bottling of Thief River Falls 21-1, Molsen Light of Winnipeg 12-11, Mr. Steak of Grand Forks 13-9 and the Red Lake Falls Rabbits 13-11.

American Legion-Miller Beer won four -in-a-row before meeting Southgate Lounge, beating the Red Lake Falls Rabbits, a last-minute replacement for a Portage La Prairie entry, 25-4, Mr. Steak 12-3, Pepsi Bottling 12-5 and Molsen Light 12-6.

Rest of the Class A-B finishes included the Red Lake Falls Rabbits at 3-2, Pepsi Bottling 2-3, Molsen Light 1-4 and Mr. Steak 0-5.

There were 12 teams competing in two round-robin divisions making up the Class C-D field, with the divisional winners meeting in the championship game while the divisional runner-up teams played for third place.

St. Hilaire Bears, 5-0 in the Division II, handled Grand Forks' Wayne Davis Jewelers, 5-0 in Division I, by a 7-1 margin in the Class C-D championship game.

Crookston Eagles 873 defeated Thief River Falls' Best Western 9-1 in the Class C-D third place game.

Final Division I standings in the Class C-D tournament showed Wayne Davis Jewelers at 5-0, Crookston Eagles 4-1, Falls Clinic of Thief River Falls 3-2, Hamms-Pizza Hut of Thief River Falls 2-3, Stone's Mobile Radio of Thief River Falls 1-4 and Fleet Supply of Thief River Falls 0-5.

In Division II, it was the St. Hilaire Bears at 5-0, Best Western, a late replacement for Mello-Yello of Thief River Falls, 3-2, Spud Bar of East Grand Forks 3-2, East Grand Forks Eagles 2-3, Coors of Thief River Falls 1-4, and Big Johns-Meadowbrook of Thief River Falls 1-4.

In going unbeaten, the St. Hilaire Bears beat Best Western 10-5, Coors 9-0, Big Johns-Meadowbrook 13-3, Spud Bar 8-5 and the Crookston Eagles 12-11 in addition to the title-game victory over Wayne Davis Jewelers, a team that had beaten the Crookston Eagles 8-7, Hamms-Pizza Hut 9-8, Stone's Mobile Radio 6-0 and Falls Clinic 12-2.

Fri., June 29 — Schmidts-Coke vs. Coors, 7:30 p.m.; United Satellite Systems vs. Coors, 9 p.m.

The week in men's fast pitch turned out to be a good one for Schmidts-Coke, pretty good for Melvies, a tough one for Popplers, a difficult one for Coors and a disaster for United Satellite Systems (USS).

League-leading Schmidts-Coca Cola won two games, 9-1 over Melvies and 10-3 over USS. In the win over Melvies, Mark Lundin picked up his first pitching win in his first start as Schmidts-Coke unleashed an 11-hit attack. Kevin Sanders and Dave Kays each had a homer and two RBI's.

In Wednesday's second game, Popplers and USS went seven scoreless innings before Popplers exploded for eight runs in the top of the eighth in an 8-0 win. Jeff Hendrickson tossed a three-hitter and fanned 11. Popplers used seven hits and a walk in their big inning. Joe Walton and Keith Charbonneau each had a pair of hits in the inning.

Thursday night featured a single game, and the hard-hitting Schmidts-Coke team broke loose for 16 hits in handing USS their second loss in two nights. Tim Bottem hit his league leading fourth homer in the first inning but Schmidts-Coke took a 4-3 lead in the fourth. The winners struck for three runs in both the sixth and seventh inning for the final 10-3 margin. Paul Walker had two homers for the winners and four RBI's. Winning pitcher was Howard Dalager; loser was Dean Lawrenz.

In the first game on Friday night, Popplers and Coors hooked up in a classic pitching duel. Popplers took a 1-0 load in the first on the strength of Jim Olson's run scoring single; Coors tied it in the fifth on Nick Niebauer's single. Jeff Hendrickson then retired the next 23 batters until Jeff Cwikla's two-out single in the top of the 12th. Coors won the game in the 14th inning as Bruce Johnson reached on an error, reached second on Mike Kvarnlov's fielders choice, and eventually scored the winning run on a bases loaded throwing error. Winning pitcher Al Erickson retired the side in order in the last of the 14th.

Thus, an oddity in the fact that Coors was outhit 8-6 but scored the winning run without the benefit of a hit.

I don't know if the 23 batters retired by Hendrickson is a league record; when Leroy Christenson threw his perfect game a number of years ago (21 in a row), he must have gotten the last out in his previous game (22), maybe the last couple of hitters? How about his next start? Did the first batter up get on base? I'd have to check the old books but Lord knows where they are!

In game two Friday, Melvies won their first game of the year behind Erv Melvie's four-hitter as Melvies shades Coors 3-2 in what might be termed a major upset. Coors had grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Roger Cota's one-out homer. Coors upped the lead to 2-0 in the third on Cota's single, a passed ball and Bruce Johnson's ground out. Melvies used three hits, a walk, and an error to scored three runs in the bottom of the third for the 3-2 lead. Coors kept Melvies from any possible scoring with a couple of double plays, and Melvie retired the final nine batters to preserve the one run margin. Cota had three of the four Coors hits; Melvies collected a total of nine. Coors hitters have been held to 12 hits and four runs in their last three games.

Trophy winners included:

Olympics Greek To The Ancients

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

It is midsummer, and the Olympic games are about to begin. From all over, spectators and political leaders are arriving to witness the spectacle promoted for months in advance. Accommodations are nearly nonexistent, roads are jammed and athletic facilities are strained to capacity. It is hot and dusty and people are complaining about the fierce heat and noise.

Everywhere are booths and stalls with vendors selling snacks and hawking souvenirs. Musicians provide further diversion.

Having trained for months, even years, the athletes are nervous, aware that all too soon their events — and the chance for fame and perhaps fortune — will be over. News of the winners will travel fast, and victors will be feted in their hometowns with parades and sought for personal appearances at other festivals.

This is how it was at the Olympic games in ancient Greece circa 300 B.C. In many ways, not much has changed.

"We don't know if the ancient Greeks had an official cheeseburger of the games, but they probably had an equivalent," says Dr. David G. Ramano, a classical archaeologist specializing in ancient athletics at The University Museum of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. "In fact, almost every problem and situation we face in the modern Olympic games existed in antiquity."

"Politics, including boycotts and other politically motivated actions, were always a part of the games," he says. "In the fourth century B.C., for instance, Athens unsuccessfully threatened to boycott the Olympic games because one of its athletes had been fined for cheating in the pentathlon. Earlier, in 420 B.C., the Spartans were refused permission to come to Olympia to participate in the games."

But the ultimate in politics may have occurred at Olympia in 364 B.C. "At those games," Romano says, "a military battle actually took place in the middle of the pentathlon, when the people of Elis, who had usually been responsible for the games, fought a battle with the Arcadians and Pisatans who had tried to seize control."

And yet, Romano says, there are several important differences between the ancient Olympics, which endured for amost 1,200 years, and the modern Olympics, first held in 1896 and scheduled this year in Los Angeles from July 28 to August 12.

"From the beginning, the Olympic games, in fact all the Greek athletic contests, were primarily religious festivals," Romano says. The religious nature of the games may account for their longevity depite wars and political upheavals as well as for their demise: The Roman emperor Theodosius I, a Christian, put an end to the "pagan" games in A.D. 393.

"Most important, the ancients didn't have to deal with the question of 'amateur' status," Romano says. "The Greeks did not even have a word for 'amateur', only a word for 'athlete', meaning 'one who competes for a prize'."

Prizes at the four Panhellenic ("all-Greek") games were only wreaths — an olive crown at Olympia, laurel at Delphi, pine at Isthmia and parsley at Nemea. "But when the athletes got home from these 'vegetable games'," Romano relates, "they often became rich and famous. Some received subsidies, pensions or free meals for life from their home cities or wealthy patrons and politicians."

In short, Romano says, "the idealistic image of an 'amateur', which our modern athletes are told to emulate, did not exist in ancient Greece."

That we know so much about games originating nearly 3,000 years ago is a tribute to the work of classical historians and archaeologists. "Think of a civilization thousands of years from now," Romano suggests, "trying to reconstruct our modern game of baseball from the excavations of a few stadia around the country where baseball, among other sports, was played. Add a few fragmentary newspaper clippings mentioning a player's batting average and salary and you have an idea of the dimensions of the problem."

Athletic facilities — stadia and dromoi (racecourses), for example — and the religious temples and sanctuaries associated with them are known from excavations of the Panhellenic sites, beginning with Olympia from 1875 to 1881 and concluding in the past decade with Nemea, the last Panhellenic site established in antiquity. Numerous festivals of lesser importance were held all over the Greek world, and stadia and dromoi have been excavated at many of these sites; and process has unearthed many small objects used by the athletes — discuses, weights to enhance performance in the long jump and implements to scrape off oil and sweat.

First games were recorded at Olympia in 776 B.C., but "thatdate is suspect," Romano says, "Because the Greek alphabet was introduced about the time and earlier written records may not have existed." Archaeological evidence indicates that religious activities which may have included athletic competitions were taking place at Olympia as early at 1000 B.C.

Each of the Pahellenic games was dedicated to a god — Zeus at Olympia and Nemea, Apollo at Delphi and Poseidon at Isthmia. The Greeks believed that the gods bestowed on the athletes the physical prowess that enabled them to take part in the games. "Each athlete made an individual offering to the god in whose honor the games were held," Romano explains. "Victory was the ultimate expression of honor." In fact, victory was all that mattered. No prizes were given at the "Big Four" games for second- and third places.

Very little remains of the early stadia at the Panhellenic sites but, at each site, the stadium was undoubtedly a religious structure located near the sanctuary. "Fifth-century B.C. stadia excavated at Olympia and Isthmia give us a good idea of what a classical stadium looked like," Rmoano says. The running area was 600 "feet" or a "Stadion" in length, although the length of the ancient "foot" varied greatly from place to place and from century to century.

Spectator comfort was not on the stadium builder's mind. "Early stadia provided seats only for the judges and a few VIPS'," Romano says. The rest of the crowd — 25,000 people or more — either sat or more probably stood on the gradually sloping earth embankments surrounding the running area. The word stadium, in fact, is probably derived from the Greek verb "to stand."

In the fourth century B.C., there was a trend to move stadia out of the sanctuary to a nearly location to provide more spectator room. About this time, some stadia were built with seats. Others, such as the one at Nemea, also had vaulted entrances providing the athletes with direct access to the stadium from the sanctuary — "and a place to carve graffiti," says Romano, who directed the stadium excavation at Nemea for three years.

From such inscriptions on vaults, tombstones, statues and monuments, scholars have pieced together achievements of individual athletes, lists of victors, even the costs of running events. Another rich source of information comes from vase paintings, primarily from the sixth and fifth centuries B.C., depicting various athletic contests. The illustrations are not always technically correct, however, since the artists seem to have been more interested in aesthetics than accuracy.

"But they weren't far off in their depictions of physique," says Dr. Lawrence Angel, a physical anthropoligist at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C., who has studied ancient Greek skeletons. "In general, the skeletons do fit the fitures of the paintings and sculpture — stock, muscular, fairly long trunks, widish shoulders and hips. This is the stuff of which basic effective athletes can be created."

And created they were, through vigorous training that began in boyhood. For many years, only the sons of the wealthy could afford the time and expense of training, but eventually athletes acquired patrons, and the games became more democratic.

Still, only male citizens of Greece with its far-flung colonies were allowed to compete at Olympia, and only males — and unmarried women — were permitted to attend the events as spectators. Women had their own festival, dedicated to the goddess Hera, but woe to any married woman caught breaking the all-male rule: She was to be tossed off a nearby mountain.

Like today's athletes, ancient Olympians tended to specialize in a single event. For the first 52 years at Olympia, the sole event was the stadion race, which continued to be the most prestigious even after other events were added. Eventually, athletes competed in wrestling, boxing, the pankration (a brutal, no-holds-barred combination of wrestling and boxing), the pentathlon (discus, javelin, long jump, foot race and wrestling) and a race in armor.

Contrary to popular belief, the marathon and the torch race of the modern Olympics were not part of the ancient games. "There were torch races in antiquity associated with religious festivals," Romano says, "but not at Olympia."

In contrast to the original Olympics, the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, depite the Soviet-led boycott, is expected to attract thousands of athletes from dozens of nations, competing in 21 events and two demonstration sports. Some 700,000 spectators will see the $500 million games, and 4,000 officials will be on hand to decide the victors. An Olympic Arts Festival will feature an international array of 75 performing arts events and 20 exhibitions. Television via satellite will bring the games to an estimated 2.5 billion people, more than half the Earth's population. The spectable would be Greek to the ancients.

Detroit Lakes Triathlon Is Slated Aug. 11

Ford Hermanson had hoped and dreamed of sponsoring a triathlon for several years before deciding that 1984 would be the year of his first Ironracer Triathlon.

When Hermanson began the spadework of organizing a triathlon this winter, he discovered that he had lots of company. In less than a year, interest in the combined swimming, bicycling and running event had exploded.

Triathlon Federation USA, the governing body of the sport, estimates that a million athletes will participate in some 2,000 triathlons this year. Only two years ago there were less than 10,000 triathletes in the United States.

Four triathlons were held in Minnesota last summer. According to the newly organized Minnesota Triathlon Association, at least 17 are scheduled from late May to early September this year. Suddenly the calendar is crowded with events. — at least one triathlon each weekend.

Hermanson scheduled the Ironracer for Saturday, Aug. 11. That day in Detroit Lakes, where for the past 24 years Hermanson has operated the three-par Ironman Golf Course, will also be the peak of the More in '84 Minnesota Country Music Fest. Runners on the last leg of the triathlon will toil up Soo Pass Hill to be greeted at the finish line by thousands from the massive outdoor country-western music conert. The six-day More in '84 is expected to draw as many as 100,000 to Detroit Lakes.

Entries began to arrive soon after Hermanson announced the Ironracer, but he can only guess at how many may participate. In cautious moments he anticipates 500 triathletes. But when he factors in the sudden surge in triathlon popularity and the added attraction of More in '84, he can foresee 5,000. He admits that a field of 5,000 would make him "kind of nervous."

Most entries in the Ironracer will probably be participating in their first triathlon, Hermanson believes. Although prizes include expensive racing bicycles and a myriad of medals and merchandise, he thinks the goal of most entrants will be simply to complete the 56.5 kilometer (about 35 miles) course.

For the runners and cyclists the Ironracer course circles Detroit Lakes and dips into a network of tranquil roads used principally by lake residents and farmers. Triathlon swimmers will follow the north shoreline of Detroit Lake in four to six feet of water. To complete the course, participants must first swim 1.5K (.9 mile), then bicycle 40K (24.5 miles) and finally run 15K (9.3 miles) to the finish line.

The fastest competitors will cover the course in about three grueling hours.

But Hermanson, a runner himself, knows well that few people maintain the kind of physical conditioning that a triathlon demands.

For more information about the Ironracer Triathlon, contact Hermanson at the Ironman Golf Course, Route 2, Detroit Lakes, MN 56501; phone 847-5592.

Women's Slow Pitch

Russells-Kees pulled into a first place tie with the Ridgerunners in the Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league Division I standings with a 9-8 victory when those two teams met Wednesday. They carry identical 5-2 records.

Seedlings are growing six times faster than the normal rate in a special chamber operated by a Minnesota reforestation project. By placing paper birch and white spruce seedlings under 1,000-watt arc lamps, the state project produces six-inch trees in about four months, compared to two years required in a nursery.

Summer Basketball League In Operation

Sixty-five players are competing on six different teams in the first Thief River Falls summer basketball league.

Promoted by Bob Stevens, a Bloomington Jefferson graduate who has been a member of the Thief River Falls community for the past 1½ years, the summer basketball program here features high school players in grade 9-12, plus college-age players and some older players.

"The purpose of the league," said Stevens, is to promote basketball among the high school age, and to give these kids an opportunity to sharpen their skills by playing during the summer months against older competition. As far as I can tell, this is the first boys summer basketball league held in Thief River Falls.

There are players involved in the program from Thief River Falls, Badger, Goodridge, Oklee, Gonvick, Clearbrook, Bagley, Brooks and Newfolden. Games are played each Tuesday night at the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Many of the younger players also participate in a high school-only league on Sundays in Crookston.

Participants paid a $5 fee to compete in the Thief River Falls summer league. Stevens coordinated the program through Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith, Prowlers' head basketball coach Tom Hunt and Thief River Falls Parks and Recreation Department director Mike Mongoven.

Games scheduled Tuesday, June 26, will feature Highlanding vs. Lakers at 6:30 p.m.; 76'ers vs. Celtics at 7:30 p.m.; and Bulls vs. Rockets at 8:30 p.m. Spectators are welcome.

Results last week found the Bulls beating the Lakers 60-59, Highlanding over the Celtics 67-59 and the Rockets defeated the 76'ers 79-52.

After two weeks of play the Bulls and Rockets are both 2-0, Highlanding and the Lakers are 1-1, while the 76'ers and Celtics are 0-2.

Babe Ruth Team Carries 7-1 Mark

Thief River Falls Babe Ruth baseball team for 14-15-year-olds will have a pair of doubleheaders this week, visiting Crookston Tuesday for games starting at 11 a.m. and hosting Bemidji Saturday for games starting at 1 p.m.

Coach Wayne Huseth's Thief River Falls squad carries a 7-1 season record after a twinbill sweep over Crookston Tuesday by 12-2 and 10-9 scores.

Tom Knoff and Kory Joppru combined on a no-hit pitching performance in the 12-2 first game, which ended in the fifth inning because of the ten-run rule. Knoff was the starter, working the first two innings, before giving way to Joppru, who pitched the final three frames. They combined for nine strike-outs, but also surrendered seven walks and hit two batters.

Marty Levin was 3-for-4 and Mike Anderson 2-for-3 in the 10-hit attack for the winners, who broke open a 1-1 tie with an eight-run third inning.

Crookston was charged with all three of the game's errors.

Second game, featuring Thief River Falls' B squad, was a lot closer. Thief River Falls took an 8-6 lead with a five-run fifth inning and managed to hold on for that 10-9 win, although Chris Nelson was called on to get the pitching save with a final out strike-out in the seventh as Crookston pulled within one and had runners on first and second.

Kurt Dupree was the winning pitcher.

Brian Maki and Steve McGann each had two hits for the winners, who had a 9-7 base hit edge. Bill Dicken had a triple.

Crookston collected seven errors in the second game, and Thief River Falls being charged with four.

In Babe Ruth Prep action this week for 13-year-olds, the Thief River Falls squad is scheduled to play three 11 a.m. doubleheaders, visiting East Grand Forks today (Monday), hosting Roseau Wednesday and driving to Crookston Thursday.

No scores were received from last week's Babe RuH Prep games.

U.S. Farmers Defended On World Market

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz and Illinois Democratic Senator Alan Dixon are pushing the Senate to pass a resolution that the U.S. will make "meaningful retaliation" if the European Community (EC) proceeds with its proposed restriction of imports of U.S. corn gluten feed.

The EC is a 10-country economic alliance that heavily subsidizes its agricultural programs, and now seeks to pay for those subsidies by trade tariffs.

"At international trade negotiations in the 1960s, the EC accepted a zero import duty obligation on all imports of U.S. corn gluten feed. The recent proposal by the EC to impose import levies on corn gluten feed violates the fundamental purposes of international trade agreements such as the general agreement on tariffs and trade (GATT)," Boschwitz said.

The EC has asked for formal consultations on the issue through the procedure called for under the GATT. The first meeting took place on June 12.

"The U.S. exported over 3.7 million tons of corn gluten feed to the EC in 1983 at a value of $700 million. We can't afford to lose such a valuable trading partner, yet we also must not stand by and let the EC dictate U.S.-EC trading policies," Boschwitz said. "It's our hope that a trade conflict can be avoided by an EC decision not to restrict the entry of corn gluten feed."

The resolution also expresses Senate opposition to the possible imposition by the EC of a consumption tax on vegetable oils and fats.

"Even though action on an oils and fats tax does not appear as imminent as do the corn gluten restrictions, any decision on corn gluten will establish a precedent which could affect U.S. soybean exports," he said.

SHIFTING GEARS is a long-range proposition on this 1937 WC Allis-Chalmers tractor owned by Bob Peterson of rural St. Hilaire. Peterson plans to use the tractor in the antique tractor pull sponsored by the St. Hilaire Lions club on Saturday. There will be seven classes for tractors of 1945 vintage or older at the tractor pull beginning at noon in St. Hilaire. Peterson has cut down on his tractor collection, selling 32 tractors at auction last September. He now has only 33 tractors left — all of which are operable.

Note Whistler's 150th Birthday At Smithsonian

by Susan D. Bliss
Smithsonian News Service

It was 1855 and the young artist, James McNeill Whistler, not quite 21, resigned from his job as a draftsman for the U.S. Coast and Geodetic survey in Washington, D.C., and sailed off to London.

Whistler never was to see his native land again.

Like other Americans who headed for the art capitals of Europe in the 19th century to refine their training and soak up the nourishment offered by civilizations that had long supported the arts, Whistler enjoyed the easy, unconventional way that artists could live in cities like London and Paris.

Whistler spent the rest of his life making a name for himself in those cities, but America still claims this expatriate painter as its own. Born in Lowell, Mass., on July 11, 1834, Whistler is linked inextricably with the immortal painting of his mother. That solemn image, however, belies the artist's calculated and outrageous personal style and overshadows the artistic innovations that characterize his oil paintings, watercolors, pastels and decorative schemes. Today, art historians acknowledge Whistler's works as precursors of 20th-century modernism.

The man most responsible for bringing Whistler's legacy back home was his friend and patron, Charles Lang Freer, a Detroit industrialist whose collection of Whistlers now is housed in the Smithsonian's Freer Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. In a fitting observance of Whistler's 150th birthday, the Freer is presenting a major showing of 300 works from this collection. The exhibition, sponsored by AT&T, will fill most of the Freer from May 11 through Dec. 1, 1984.

Whistler and Freer couldn't have stood farther apart on the scale of human personality. Freer was decorous, circumspect and tactful, an excellent businessman. Whistler was volatile and controversial, afflicted with a quality that his biographers, Elizabeth and Joseph Pennell, called "a sort of transatlantic impudence." His profligate spending kept him in perpetual debt and at one point led him to bankruptcy.

But in March 1890, when Freer, in a rare, impulsive moment, first called upon Whistler in his London studio and met the man whom he had known only through his etchings, the self-made millionaire discovered a rapport with the artist: Freer and Whistler agreed about art.

"Whistler's art was too subtle for most people of his time," says Dr. David Park Curry, curator of American art at the Denver Art Museum. Curry organized the Freer's exhibition and wrote the accompanying catalog. "Whistler's art theories were abstract at a time when Britain still worshiped realism and 'the human form divine'."

Freer understood subtlety, however, and he began to collect Whistler's etchings as appropriate embellishments for a grand, but tastefully understated, home he was building in Detroit. As Freer's collecting interests expanded to include the artist's works in a full range of media, Whistler wired transatlantic gratitude: ". . . I think I may tell you without the least chance of being misunderstood, that I wish you to have a fine collection of Whistlers!!! Perhaps THE collection."

Freer turned out to be one of the few people whom the acerbic Whistler did not eventually alienate, and the two remained friends until Whistler's death in 1903. Frederick Richards Leyland, the artist's first important patron, was not so lucky. Leyland hired the painter to help decorate his elegant London town house, an arrangement that ended in a maelstrom of misunderstanding when Whistler carried the embellishment too far.

Excited by his opportunity to create a full interior scheme, the artist painted over the priceless antique leather wall coverings in Leyland's dining room with blue-green oil paint and gold peacocks. Leyland never forgave Whistler for covering the leather or for the copious newspaper stories that Whistler generated and even encouraged during the course of the decoration.

Many years later, as fate would dictate, Freer was to purchase the Peacock Room, now commonly recognized as a herald of Art-Nouveau. The room can be seen in the Freer Gallery.

Whistler's penchant for arousing strong feelings can be traced back through is youth. Following a childhood spent abroad, the young artist returned to the United States, having developed in the meantime a noticeable flair for youthful insubordination. He sashayed through West Point flouting dress codes and narrowly missing dismissal for bad behavior, then dashed his mother's hopes that he would follow a military career by failing chemistry. On the job at the Geodetic Survey, Whistler gained admiration for his drafting skill, but the margins of his renderings of coasts and shorelines were sometimes decorated with elegant — and illicit — doodles.

In Europe, Whistler quickly became a recognizable fixture among the bohemians of Paris and London, with his "gleaming eye-glass, and his shock of curly black hair, amid which shone his celebrated white lock," as the Pennells wrote of their friend.

"Whistler was one of those somebodies you always notice," Curry says, recounting French Impressionist Edgar Degas' facetious comment to his already dandified, cape-clad companion, "Whistler, you have forgotten your muff."

"Whistler used controversy and showmanship to keep his name floating in the public consciousness," Curry says. "He was one of the first modern artists to understand the cult of the personality as a public relations trick. He knew that notoriety would attract attention to him and his art. But it hurt him in a sense, because it served to trivialize some of the most interesting art of the 19th century."

In fact, Whistler's quiet paintings of London at night, which the painter appropriately called "nocturnes" for their harmonious loveliness, were revolutionary in a society that still praised heroic "history paintings." One of his night paintings of fireworks at Cremorne gardens, a London amusement park, got him into trouble when the conservative art critic, John Ruskin, hurled insults at painting and creator: ". . . For Mr. Whistler's own sake, no less than for the protection of the purchaser, (dealer) Sir Coutts Lindsey ought not to have admitted works into the gallery in which the ill-educated conceit of the artist so nearly approaches the aspect of willful imposture. I have seen and heard much of cockney impudence before now, but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask 200 guineas for flinging a pot of paint into the public's face."

Whistler sued Ruskin for libel and received a symbolic farthing in damages — clearly not enough to stop a financial slide that was finally arrested by a profitable commission to do a set of etchings of Venice. He had gained early fame for his prints of London's grimy but lively East End, and his graphics continued to receive accolades.

The paintings, however, were little understood. Portraiture was a lucrative pursuit that Whistlers eagerly sought, but many of his greatest portraits profited him little, featuring likenesses of the mistresses he kept before his marriage at age 54 or pretty but anonymous young women who caught his eye as he walked through his Chelsea neighborhood.

His most famous painting, "Arrangement in Grey and Black: Portrait of the Painter's Mother," was begun on a day when one of those women failed to show up, and he asked Anne Whistler, who was staying with him in London, to strike a standing pose. The long-suffering, aged lady "stood as a statue. . . two or three days," as she wrote to her sister, until Whistler finally took pity on her and painted her "sitting perfectly at (her) ease." Both Whistler and his mother were overjoyed with the results, with Mrs. Whistler ascribing the "attractive charm" of her expression to "a Mother's unceasing prayer."

In 1891, Whistler must have felt a glowing sense of revenge when the portrait, which had been ridiculed by some critics, was bought by the French government. Since 1926, it has hung in the Louvre. Today, most people appreciate the painting for its subject matter instead of for the complex arrangement of shapes and tones that concerned Whistler.

On hearing the news of its purchase, Freer wrote to Whister's wife: "This significant recognition of Mr. Whistler's art speaks in many ways and comforts many hearts — and although of universal interest, it is as peculiarly gratifying to all good Americans as it must be extremely disappointing to the few remaining scalpless followers of Ruskinism."

Freer, who had once advised a business associate not to fire a subordinate, offering the comment that "Genius is always erratic," never seemed flustered by Whistler's reputation for touchiness. When faced with a problem in obtaining a work of art that he wanted to buy from the artist, Freer advised his frustrated intermediary to "forget the man and remember his art."

Could any artist wish for a better remembrance?

MVMA Warns Of Racoon Roundworms

Human beings risk severe illness from a common intestinal roundworm of raccoons, warns the Minnesota Veterinary Medical association (MVMA).

According to MVMA spokesman Dr. Daryl Hartman, the parasite Baylisascaris procyonis has recently been the cause of fatal infections in other wildlife species and two children. Milder infections in adults have resulted in eye damage and other symptoms.

People, especially small children who habitually insert dirty hands or objects into their mouths, may become infected by ingesting parasite eggs found in contaminated dirt or food. The eggs eventually hatch into larvae, migrate through the body organs, especially the brain, eyes and-or spinal cord, and cause death.

Since raccoons are frequently found in residential and recreational areas, raccoon fecal contamination is these areas is likely and exposure to Baylisascaris procyonis is a possibility. The parasite eggs may remain infective for long periods of time.

MVMA recommends that pets and children should not be allowed access to areas where raccoons may have nested or been caged. In addition, people should wash their hands immediately after contact with dirt or waste material.

Because there is no effective rabies vaccine for wildlife, the MVMA also cautions against keeping raccoons, skunks and other wild animals as pets.

Wildlife Refuge System Grows To Number 422

A unique desert wetland that straddles the Nevada-California border, Ash Meadows National Wildlife Refuge, will become the 422 refuge in the national system, Interior Secretary William Clark has announced.

First portion of this newest national wildlife refuge — an 11,173-acre tract currently owned by The Nature Conservancy, a private conservaton organization — has been purchased for $5 million by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service with an appropriation approved by Congress in 1983.

New refuge, about 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas, Nevada, will serve as secure habitat for 26 plants and animals found nowhere else in the world. Several of these unique species have already been given federal protection as endangered species.

"Desert oases like Ash Meadows are so rare in the southwestern United States that addition of this property to the National Wildlife Refuge System represents a noteworthy accomplisyment," said Clark. "The rarity of the habitat is exceeded only by the uniqueness of the animals and plants it supports.'

"Once again, The Nature Conservancy, through its ability to move quickly to acquire and hold properties such as Ash Meadows until the federal government could receive them, has provided the key to this successful acquisition. The Nevada Congressional delegation, led by Senator Paul Laxalt, has also been instrumental in assuring the success of this project."

Creation of Ash Meadows National Wildlife Refuge will ensure protection of the variety of unique animal and plant species that inhabit this spring-fed wetland basin barely 40 miles from parched Death Valley National Monument. The area has been selected for development as a residential community before it was purchased by The Nature Conservancy and held for later purchase by the federal government.

Four federally-listed endangered species — the Ash Meadows speckled dace, the Ash Meadows Amargosa pupfish, the Devils Hole pupfish and the Warm Springs pupfish — are found on the property. Seven rare plants and one insect that are currently proposed for "endangered" status are also found at Ash Meadows. In addition, a number of other species whose status is precarious enough to possibly merit future listing as "endangered" are included.

Management of Ash Meadows National Wildlife Refuge by the Fish and Wildlife Service awaits formal transfer of ownership of the property and development of a management plan that could include restoration of local marshes for use by waterfowl.

Funding Given For Wildlife Refuge Set-up

The U.S. Senate has voted to authorize more than $39 million for completion of the Minnesota Valley national wildlife refuge south of Minneapolis-St. Paul. The legislation now goes to the president, who is expected to sign it, thereby enlarging the refuge and making funding authority permanent.

"This is an unusual, water-based wildlife refuge, and an important resource for the people of Minnesota," stated Durenberger, who said he was elated at the funding authorization, which passed the Senate on June 8.

"The valley and marshes support many types of migratory birds, fish and other wildlife, including white-tailed deer — and right next to a large metropolitan area. The opportunities for education, recreation and tourism are enormous," he said.

The legislation (which also includes funding for other American wildlife refuges) authorizes $29.5 million to acquire land for the Minnesota Valley refuge, and $9.8 million for constuction of a visitor's center. The refuge's original authorization, passed in 1976, expired last year.

Unlike the 1976 legislation, the newly-authorized funds must remain available until the project is completed. That amendment was added to the bill by Durenberger.

"Since this project was authorized eight years ago we've been able to get less than $7 million actually appropriated to be spent on it," said Durenberger, a member of the environment and public works committee. "I'm determined to get that money flowing. But in the meantime, the uncertain schedule of appropriations makes it even more important to keep the authorization in force until the refuge is completed."

ONLY A FEW hours after the crash of two crop spraying planes claimed the lives of both pilots, other pilots were in the air just east of the crash site, working to keep up with a heavy work load brought on by wet weather which hampers spraying with ground operated equipment. Although other pilots felt that the accident may have been caused by something "freaky", noting that there is a lot of room up in the air, it may also be noted that they operate without benefit of traffic signs such as the one in the foreground.

Senator Would Eliminate 'Cop Killer' Bullets

Senator Rudy Boschwitz wants to eliminate the use of "cop-killer bullets," and has cosponsored a bill that adds five years to the sentence of anyone collecting or using them during the commission of a violent felony.

"Cop-killer" bullets are high velocity small caliber pointed bullets made of hard alloy or steel jackets that can penetrate the equivalent of four bulletproof vests.

"It is illegal to manufacture these bullets for commercial use, and the fact that they are legal at all is absolutely abhorrent," Boschwitz said. "I think the only way to avoid the use is to put real teeth into the penalties; that's the only way they will be deterred."

Development of bulletproof vests in the 1970s provided law enforcement officers with a great deal more protection than they had previously. Yet the bullets mentioned pierce right through vests.

"These bullets were not developed for legitimate commercial use, but rather, are used in the perpetration of criminal acts," Sen. Boschwitz said.

"It's well known that law enforcement is a particularly dangerous and unappreciated occupation. We have entrusted police officers with the tremendous responsibility of protecting us from acts of violence. I believe it is our duty to protect the approximately 250,000 officers who, even with bulletproof vests, everyday face the danger of being injured or killed.

"I feel this bill will be an important step to helping to protect police officers who protect the citizens in our country," Boschwitz said.

City Council Settles Hiring

Thief River Falls city council wound up their meeting by 9 p.m. last night, which might have been a record for brevity if they hadn't adjourned a special meeting last Monday, after two minutes, without any action.

Among topics for the council last night were the hiring of an electronics technician (which was the intended purpose of the special meeting last Monday), approval of a downtown sidewalk improvement project, and notification of an official summons and complaint from attorneys for Consumers Cooperative Association of Thief River Falls.

Hiring of the electronics technician had first come before the council on June 11, in the form of a recommendation from the utilities committee to hire one Kevin Peterson for the newly created job. That recommendation was complicated when one of the other applicants for the job protested, asking for preferential consideration as a city resident and a veteran. The matter was tabled at that meeting, pending a recommendation from the city attorney.

Mayor Bob Carlson called the special meeting at 5 p.m. June 18, only to learn that City Attorney Bob Wurst was not prepared to render an opinion at that time, and the meeting was immediately adjourned with no action.

At last night's meeting, Alderman Ken Murphy, chairman of the utilities committee, noted that after reviewing all of the applications a second time, even with points for veteran's preference figured in, the committee had come up with the same recommendation. "Peterson's academic scores were still higher than the other candidates," he stated.

John T. Anderson, superintendent of utilities, noted that the Minnesota fair employment act would not allow them to use sex, religion or where a person lived as qualifications for hiring someone, adding, "we have to hire the person who is best qualified." He further noted that the importance of

Plummer Sets Celebration On Fourth Of July

Civic-minded community organizations at Plummer are banding together to sponsor an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration next Wednesday. Activity will begin with a flag-raising at 10:30 a.m. in the park, sponsored by American Legion Post 523, and conclude with a fireworks display in the ballpark and three evening dances.

A men's slow pitch softball tournament will be conducted throughout the day and teams are still being sought for that event. Two diamonds will be used and persons who would like to enter a team are asked to contact John Zimpel at 465-4396.

From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. a dinner will be served at the Presbyterian church in Plummer. At 12:45 p.m. a kiddies parade will be held with prizes offered to all participants. The main celebration parade will begin at 1 p.m. Riding in the parade will be Miss Plummer of 1984, Nancy Jo Hesse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hesse, who was crowned at a pageant on Saturday. First runner-up and winner of the Miss Congeniality award was Lana Konickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Konickson.

At 2 p.m. a horseshoe pitching tournament will begin at the park and at 4 p.m. there will be three-wheeler races sponsored by the Plummer Lions club. Entries are still being accepted in all classes and persons interested in entering may contact Jerry Freitag at 465-4293.

Dancing will begin at 9 p.m. with a teen dance to music by "Soundsation" being held at the community hall and adult dances with old-time music at the Plummer liquor store and American Legion club rooms. Fireworks display will take place at dusk at the ballpark under sponsorship of the Plummer volunteer fire department.

Throughout the day there will be games and contests for children at several places in the community and various concession stands will be located in activity areas.

Barley Growers Turn Down Market Order

Barley producers in the 23 western and northwest counties of Minnesota turned down a proposed marketing order Tuesday, according to unofficial tabulations made by the Minnesota department of agriculture. Turn-out in the election was very light — only 645 in Minnesota out of an estimated 12,000 to 15,000 eligible voters.

Rollin Dennistoun, Minnesota deputy commissioner of agriculture, told the Times this morning that the unofficial vote total was 255 "yes" and 290 "no", a margin of 35 votes.

In Pennington county, which has 537 barley base farms, where were 53 votes cast — 20 yes and 33 no. Marshall county, with 1,335 barley base farms, had 126 votes cast at Warren and Grygla. At Warren, 101 voters had 54 yes and 47 no votes while at Grygla 25 voters had nine yes and 16 no votes. County total was 63 yes and 63 no.

In Roseau county with 794 barley base farms, only 18 farmers bothered to vote with five in favor and 13 opposed. Red Lake county, with 346 barley base farms, there were 27 yes votes and 19 no votes among 46 voters.

Had the referendum passed, farmers would have paid one-half cent per bushel in a check-off to finance the development program of the grower-elected Minnesota barley research and promotion council. Growers who did not want to participate would have had the option of requesting a refund of their payment.

The referendum Tuesday was supervised by the Minnesota department of agriculture. Other Minnesota commodities which have marketing orders and check-offs on first sales include beef, corn, dairy, dry edible beans, eggs, paddy wild rice, potatoes, soybeans, turkey and wheat.

700 At New Solum Centennial Sunday

Approximately 700 people participated Sunday in the 100th anniversary celebration for New Solum township at a morning worship service at Rindal Lutheran church and afternoon dinner and program at the New Solum town hall.

Rev. Silas Erickson, who served Rindal Lutheran church 40 years ago, conducted the morning worship service: Centennial chairman Pat Moen presided at the afternoon program in the New Solum town hall.

Oldest person present for the celebration was Ida Gustafson of Viking, a former resident of New Solum township. Her sister, Miss Agnes Halvorson, was recognized as the oldest resident of New Solum township at age 89.

Youngest resident present who was born in the township was Brian Hall, six-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hall. ## More Plans For County Fair Are Announced

Further developments in the planning and arrangements for the Pennington county fair July 19-22 have been announced by several of the project chairmen assigned to specific duties by Skip Swanson, president of the sponsoring Pennington county fair association.

Ticket sales for the Ricky Skaggs country music show on Thursday, July 19, have generated considerable interest in surrounding communities, according to Norris Thune, but response has not been as active from the Thief River Falls community.

"It's likely that local people don't feel the need to get their tickets very far in advance and are waiting until closer to the show date," Thune said. "I would like to encourage persons to plan to attend to get their tickets right away. It will help us out in reducing the last minute rush and will provide early buyers a better choice of seating, especially for groups or families."

Tickets are $11 and $9 and may be obtained by sending checks in the amount of the number of tickets ordered to Thune-Upham and Associates, Highway 59 South, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Thune also noted that the popular area band "Back Behind the Barn Boys" has been contracted to perform as the warm-up band for Ricky Skaggs at both evening performances Thursday, July 19, and will also be the featured group for a Friday night entertainment event July 20 in front of the grandstand.

Cecil Anderson is making arrangements for one of the hottest entertainment features in the midwest for a Saturday afternoon program July 21 — a combine demolition derby. The derby using combines which have seen their better days in the field will be presented at 2 p.m. in front of the grandstand. Persons interested in entering may contact Cecil Anderson at Anderson Power and Equipment.

Because of the popularity of kiddies days and special ride tickets at the carnival in previous years, special ride tickets will be offered for five days this year, according to Terry Nelson. The tickets may be purchased by people of all ages.

According to Nelson, tickets may be purchased at $6 in advance at local grocery and convenience stores or $7 at the fair grounds during the fair. The tickets will be exchanged at the midway for bracelets or some other type of passes which will entitle the holder to ride as many rides as they like from either noon to 6 p.m. or from 6 p.m. to closing.

Cindy Peterson Weds Darrick Wiskow June 9

Miss Cindy Jo Peterson and Darrick Eugene Wiskow exchanged marriage vows Saturday, June 9, at 4:00 p.m., at Zion Lutheran church in this city.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Janet Peterson of this city. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wiskow of rural Goodridge.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony was Rev. Richard Larson, assisted by Rev. Gene Broughton, pastor of the Goodridge Lutheran parish. Phyllis Dalager was the organist, playing the traditional "Bridal Chorus" as the bride was escorted to the altar by her uncle, Delaine Johnson, and given in marriage by her mother. During the lighting of the candles, Nancy Halvorson, a friend of the bride, sang, "The Rose." She also sang "Wedding Song," following the meditation, and "The Lord's Prayer," as the couple knelt at the altar, was the bridesmaids and groomsmen assembled at the altar, Sue Hoffman, a friend of the couple, sang "Through the Eyes of Love." She also sang "God, A Woman and a Man," as the couple lit the unity candle and presented long-stemmed red roses to their mothers.

Forming the chancel setting were spiral candelabra with greenery and white satin bows, matching the bows on the pews. On the altar were two arrangements of blue carnations interspersed with white gladioli and Majestic daisies, placed there by the bride's mother in memory of the bride's father, Duane (Swede) Peterson.

The bride was attired in a Victorian styled gown of white ribbon lace and knit chiffon with Wedgewood lace accenting the sweetheart yoke and high neckline. Matching lace formed a ruffles at the wrists. Her chiffon knit bouffant skirt with ruffles of Wedgewood lace and a wide flounce of ribbon lace, flowed into a semi-cathedral length train. A lace profile headpiece, edged with seed pearls, held her waist-length veil of bridal illusion, bordered with lace. She carried a silk cascade of blue carnations and daisies, complemented by white roses, stephanotis and babies' breath. At the neckline, she wore a cultured pearl and diamond necklace, a gift from the groom.

Julie Musburger, Bemidji, a friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lynn Pederson and Nancy Larson, friends of the bride, and Kristi Johnson, East Grand Forks, cousin of the bride. Their identical gowns of a medium blue sheer featured diagonally tiered blouson bodices with short sleeves and softly draped skirts. In their hair, they wore a cluster of blue daisies, white stephanotis and babies' breath. Their round bouquets backed by white lace featured the same flowers as those in the bride's bouquet.

Wearing a long-sleeved, floor-length gown in a deeper shade of blue, was the flowergirl, Wendy Lindquist, a cousin of the bride. The flowers in her white lace garden basket corresponded with those carried by the bridesmaids. Like the bridesmaids, she wore a cross necklace, a gift from the bride.

The rings were carried by Matthew Dyer, a friend of the bride. His silver tuxedo with darker gray trim, light blue shirt and darker gray bow tie, were like those worn by the groom's attendants.

The groom was attired in an all-white tuxedo. His gold watch was a gift from the bride.

Best man was Tom Pederson, a friend of the groom. Groomsmen were Darrell and Dean Wiskow, Goodridge, brothers of the groom, and Dale Wiskow, Greenbush, a cousin.

The ushers were Ken Lindquist, uncle of the bride; Darren Wiskow, of this city, Kevin Wiskow, Roseau, cousins of the groom, and Tom Race, Goodridge, a friend of the groom. To correspond with the bride's chosen colors, all boutonnieres were in shades of blue, accented with white. Their gifts from the groom were key chains. The ring bearer received an ID bracelet.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Peterson selected a medium blue floor-length gown with a flat pleated chris-crossed, draped bodice, matching the pleated sleeves, gathered at the wrists into deep cuffs. At the U-neckline, she wore a triple stand of pearl. The mother of the groom wore a sheer pale blue gown with a Victorian styled, long-sleeved bodice, gathered at the waistline by matching satin ribbon. Lace formed the ruffled cuffs and outlined the deep V yoke. Their blue and white corsages were of roses, daisies and babies' breath.

Honor guests were Mrs. Esther Lindquist and Mrs. Ida Peterson, grandmothers of the bride, and Mrs. Edna Wiskow, grandmother of the groom. Kelly Pikop was the bride's personal attendant.

Hosts and hostesses at the reception which followed were Mr. and Mrs. George Broadwell, friends of the bride's family; and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pederson, Rapid City, S.D., friends of the groom's family.

Dana Peterson, Holt, registered the guests as Dawn Anderson, Goodridge; Joyce Shimpa, Greenbush, Chad Broadwell and Jeff Olson ladled the punch. Gift bearers were Brian Johnson, East Grand Forks, and Karla Hill, Newfolden. Kris Johnsrud, Goodridge, and Kim McFarland were at the gift table.

The four-tiered wedding cake which centered the serving table was baked and decorated with blue roses, sugar bells and cherubs by the groom's mother. At the base was a blue water fountain. Between the pillars which supported the upper tier were a "Precious Moment" bride and groom. Topping the cake was a double wedding bell ornament with ribbon streamers leading to heart-shaped cakes inscribed with the names of the couple.

The cake was cut and served by Karen Peterson, Holt and Margine Wolff, Strathcona, Carol Johnson, East Grand Forks, and Sylvia Sannes, Newfolden, poured the coffee.

Waitresses were Jessie Walz and Paul Kvien, Roseau, Donna Parnow, Goodridge, Donna Grimley, Dilworth, and Paul Wilkens and Connie and Vicki Grovum.

The rice packets, 1984 lucky pennies and candy kisses were distributed by Tina Marie Sikorski, Lancaster, and Joshua Wiskow, Greenbush, Gina Peterson, Holt, and Shanon Sikorski, Lancaster, were in charge of the wedding programs, and Deb Wiskow, Greenbush, and Susie Botner served as flower hostesses.

Approximately 350 guests attended the wedding.

Following a wedding trip along the North Shore Drive, the couple is at home in Thief River Falls at 1918 East Greenwood, Apartment 302. The bride is a 1981 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1983 graduate of Northland Community college. She is employed at the Thief River Falls Times. The groom, a 1981 graduate of Goodridge high school, and a 1983 graduate of the local AVTI, electronics program, is employed by the Pennington County Engineers department. ## Library Lil

Library Lil here to tell you that something special will be happening Thursday, July 5 at Northwest regional library. Kickoff for the 1984 summer reading program will be held that day at 2 p.m. in the library. There will be two skits put on by 4-H groups and prizes and singing and all kinds of shenanigans. Best of all, you can register for the summer reading program then and decide your goal in reading books for the next month. So join ol' Library Lil at the library Thursday and get in on the fun!

Some books I've wormed my way through:

Sutton, Caroline. "How Did They Do That?" Caroline Sutton gleans tantalizing information about 100 of the most puzzling questions of all time. The answers are illustrated with technical drawings and unusual vintage photographs.

Dobson, Dr. Fitzhugh. "How to Grandparent." This is a book dealing with an unusual and timely topic. Grandparenting is a very special task and this book outlines the roles of grandparents, communication with the young, evolving child-rearing attitudes, and the importance of grandparents in a world in which the emphasis on the extended family is declining.

Van Leeuwen, Jean. "Tales of Amanda Pig." This is an easy-to-read book in which Amanda, the youngest member of the Pig family, takes center stage in five new tales to delight beginning readers.

Bitter, Dr. Gary G. "Exploring With Computers." This book discusses how computers work, their types, uses and misuses, computers of the future, and careers in the field. Included are computer-related activities.

Added Info On Ed Fiterman, Once Of TRF

Added information has been received regarding Edward Fiterman, 81, of Minneapolis and formerly of this city. Fiterman died Wednesday, June 20, following heart surgery at the University of Minnesota Variety Heart hospital.

Fiterman attended school in Thief River Falls. Shortly after graduating from Lincoln high school in 1921, he started a tire business here. In association with Al R. Kohn, he developed a Chevrolet dealership which they operated from 1923 until they moved to Minneapolis in 1927. The following year, they founded Fidelity Acceptance Corporation with assets of $10,000 or less. The company first made auto loans and then branched into consumer and home-improvement loans with branches in 17 states and Guam and assets of $110 million.

Among former Thief River Falls residents who were connected with him in his early Minneapolis operations were attorney Gay Halvorson, broker Morlan H. Bishop and C.layton Stenerson.

He was a world traveler and had just returned from Japan with his wife, Dolly, who operated the Dolly Fiterman Art Gallery in Minneapolis and has sponsored showing of many leading American artists.

According to Dreng Bjornaraa, former Times editor, who provided the added information, Fiterman was proud of his Thief River Falls background, his high school training and early business experience here. Hr recently commented, "Despite economic difficulties, we had a good, constructive environment that encouraged diligent effort and private enterprise and a belief in the 'American Dream'."

Bjornaraa said, "Fiterman was highly regarded in the Minnesota business community as a person of keen judgement and unquestioned integrity, together with a strong sense of community, social and cultural responsibility."

Compromise On Great Lakes Shipping Made

A compromise on Great Lakes shipping expansion, offered by Congressman Arlan Stangeland, has been accepted by the House rules committee. That action clears the compromise for Congressional approval by the end of June.

"Everyone comes out a partial winner with the compromise," Congressman Stangeland said. "We get to work for expanded exports immediately, while nothing will prevent ongoing efforts for navigation season extension."

To avoid a protracted battle over an earlier Stangeland plan to extend the length of the shipping season on the Upper Great Lakes, the rules committee agreed to the "Fourth SeaCoast" plan which Stangeland offered as a compromise.

"The economic and strategic health of America depends on jobs and farm exports from the Upper Midwest," Congressman Stangeland said. "This three-pronged compromise will work to expand exports and maintain a strong shipping industry on the Great Lakes."

The compromise will authorize a marketing group to do immediate research into using innovative marketing, storage and transportation approaches to promote foreign purchases of Midwest grain and other commercial products.

The marketing group will be made up of representatives from the agriculture, commerce and transportation departments, the Great Lakes commission, the army corps of engineers and the St. Lawrence Seaway development corporation.

The second part of the plan creates an international advisory group to coordinate U.S.-Canadian navigation strategies on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Seaway.

The third part of the plan authorizes the multi-year studies of the impact of Great Lakes shipping on the environment, economy and transportation in the region. Those studies were part of the original Stangeland plan.

The compromise was worked out with Rep. Jim Howard (D-NJ), chairman of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, Rep. Gene Snyder (R-KY), ranking Republican on the Committee, and Rep. Robert Roe (D-NJ), chairman of the Water Resources Subcommittee. Stangeland is the ranking Republican on that subcommittee, which is handling the Omnibus Water Bill. Rep. David Bonoir (D-MI), a rules committee member and opponent of an expanded shipping season, agreed to the compromise.

"What we need is more farm income and more jobs for the Midwest," Congressman Stangeland said. "This compromise will help us to achieve those goals."

Stangeland To Oppose OSHA Elevator Rules

Congressman Arlan Stangeland will submit testimony against proposed regulations for small town grain elevators during a field hearing in Minneapolis Thursday.

The hearings will be conducted by the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health administration (OSHA), which is considering expensive regulations which would threaten the economic viability of small elevators, which are usually locally-owned or farmer co-ops.

"I strongly believe that our small elevators should be totally exempted from these impractical and costly regulations," Congressman Stangeland said he will testify.

One example is a proposed regulation on grain dust. Elevators would have to take one of three actions to reduce dust: install expensive pneumatic "suction devices," sweep down the facility after each shift or establish an action level for dust build-up at one-eighth of an inch.

"These small operations can't afford the new equipment, and it is almost impossible to do the "sweep downs" during harvest, when many crews are working 16-18 hour days," he will report.

"As for the one-eighth inch rule, it is expensive and won't affect the problem," he will say. "Grain industry experts report that a grain explosion can be supported by a dust level as small as one-one-hundredth of an inch."

Another proposed regulation would require elevators to either install expensive magnets or reduce the grate openings to 2½ inches to keep metal objects out of the grain.

"Aside from the prohibitive costs involved here, a small grate opeining would impede the flow of sunflowers and wet grains in may area, and off-the farm grain has too much chaff and straw to pass through such openings" according to Congressman Stangeland.

"There are fundamental differences between country elevators and the huge export and terminal facilities that OSHA would include in these regulations," he will report. "The large facilities handle huge volumes of dry grain, which is much more potentially explosive."

Even OSHA admitted in its proposed regulations that "while large elevators accounted for almost five times as many deaths from fires and explosions as country elevators between 1976 and 1982, the cost of compliance for all country elevators will be several times that for large elevators."

The Northwest Agri-Dealers association is proposing that all country elevators with a capacity of less than 2.5 million bushels or an annual volume of less than 10 million bushels be exempted from the proposed regulations. Congress Stangeland supports this concept.

"I have been a farmer all my life, and am concerned for safety," he will report. "But these proposals will not significantly increase safety, but would threaten the economic survival of operations that most farm families depend upon."

Much progress has been made by the grain industry on its own, without government mandates imposing exorbitant costs on grain-handling facilities. There were no lives lost in U.S. dust explosions in elevators in 1983. Prior to a tragic explosion in Lake Lillian this spring, it had been over two years since any life was lost in a grain elevator blast, he said.

Regulations that jeopardize the economic survival of farmer-operated country elevators without significantly improving safety would be a serious mistake, especially when farm income is being seriously affected by other conditions," Stangeland said.

Hog Inventory In State Down From Year Ago

Minnesota hog producers reported inventories of 3,870,000 hogs on June 1, down 13 per cent from last year and three per cent below last quarter, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Breeding hogs fell five per cent while market hog inventories came in 15 per cent short of last year.

There were 14 per cent fewer market hogs in the under-60-pound group and 11 per cent fewer in the 60-119-pound group. The number in the 120-179-pound group was off 20 per cent while the number in the 180-pound-and-over group fell 19 per cent.

Minnesota's March-May pig crop of 1,857,000 head was 13 per cent lower than a year earlier. A larger litter rate — 7.90 per sow compared with 7.75 a year earlier — failed to offset a 15 per cent drop in the number of sows farrowed (235,000).

Hog producers in Minnesota indicated they will farrow 230,000 sows in June-August, the same as last year, and 225,000 during September-November, a drop of six per cent.

46,636 Driver Licenses Were Revoked In '83

Public safety commissioner Paul Tschida has released information showing there were 46,636 driver license revocations in 1983. Eighty-nine per cent (41,311) of the revocations were related to drinking and driving.

Based on analysis of drunk driving revocations by the division of driver and vehicle services, director Marlene Swanson reported that 69 per cent were first-time offenders, 19 per cent were for second offenses, and 12 per cent had three or more alcohol-related incidents.

Swanson said that a study of drunk driving cases shows significant and increasing chances of repeat arrests once a pattern of drunk driving begins. For the first-time offender, there is a 31 per cent chance of getting caught in a second offense. After two offenses, the odds increase to 60 per cent; jumping to 66 per cent from third to fourth offense. Seven out of 10 fourth offenders will be arrested a fifth time, and 86 per cent of five-time losers will do it again.

According to public safety officials, their challenge is to get repeat offenders off the road and keep them off until there is sufficient assurance they will not create a danger to other drivers or themselves by driving again. Swanson said that under current rules, a person receiving three DWI convictions in a five-year period will not be relicensed until there is evidence of complete sobriety, and any evidence of subsequent use of alcohol will result in loss of the drivers license for an indefinite period of time.

According to Tschida, the distrubingly high percentages for repeat drunk driving offenses indicates the need for emphasis on problem drinkers. "There is evidence that new laws, tough enforcement and citizen groups such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving are having an impact on the average social drinker," he said, "but a big problem remains with persons who have real chemical dependency problems.

"Our challenge is to identify them, get them off the road, and keep them off until they no longer pose a problem," Tschida said. Much more research needs to be done, he added, and his department is working with other agencies and experts in chemical dependency to find answers to this severe problem.

Asks Release Of Farm Loan Funds For MN.

Congressman Arlan Stangeland has asked Agriculture Secretary John Block to control sales of FmHA-held farmland, and to release $25 million for FmHA farm operating loans for Minnesota.

In the first request, joined by other members of the House agriculture committee, Congressman Stangeland asked Block to take three steps to bolster sagging land values in farm areas where all farmers are being threatened by other's land sales. Such areas in Minnesota include Pennington and Red Lake counties, which have been hit by five consecutive years of natural disaster.

"When FmHA sells land in an area where land prices are depressed, that decreases the value of the assets of neighboring farmers," Congressman Stangeland said. "It is a policy that compounds farm problems."

The four-term House veteran asked Block to bar FmHA from selling inventory land in areas where land prices are depressed. He also asked Block to order state FmHA offices to conduct reviews of areas where land values have not stabilized or have just turned the corner. These studies would determine when farmland could be marketed by FmHA.

He also asked that Block direct FmHA to give the highest priority to buyers who intend to keep land in agricultural production. At the head of that list should be buyers who are family farm operations.

In the second request, joined by the entire Minnesota Congressional delegation, Congressman Stangeland asked Block to release $25 million in FmHA farm operating loans.

Since the last week of May, Minnesota has been out of farm operating loan funds. The $3.258 million for loans Minnesota received recently were inadequate to cover loan applications which supervisors in county offices have said will be approved when funds are available.

On June 1, Block said that "FmHA has adequate funds to meet all of those operating credit needs. Should that situation change, I have the authority to allow additional funds to be made available."

Congressman Stangeland told Block today, "We would like to act on this promise and intervene on behalf of the Minnesota farm families."

Loyland and his dancers from Setesdalen will be joined by about 25 other visitors from that area. Music for the dancer will be provided by Vedar Lande on his "Hardingfele." Loyland is president of the Setesdals Laget of Oslo, Norway.

"U" Magazine Explores Family Violence

Family violence has been covered in the media fairly extensively in recent years, but typically in a piecemeal fashion: one month a news magazine will cover child abuse, the next month the local paper will write about wife battering. But the connections between forms of family violence and the emotional consequences of each are rarely looked at as a whole.

New magazine called "A Silence Too Loud: Family Violence" takes a look at the overall picture of domestic violence. Members of a University of Minnesota magazine production class explored the way domestic violence manifests itself, the Twin Cities families it affects and the local programs designed to help those families out of the cycle of abuse, pain and silence.

"A Silence Too Loud" deals with child abuse, incest, women's shelters, a crisis nursery, violent men and why they batter, the police and legal systems' connections to family violence, the emotional violence of shame and Illusion theater's program to teach kids about sexual abuse. Also included are personal essays on family violence, the connection between family violence and social class, the story of a local couple who stopped their family violence and saved their marriage and the words of an anonymous battered woman.

"A Silence Too Loud" was planned, researched, designed, written, illustrated and photographed by journalism students at the University of Minnesota. Camera-ready pages were produced in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication graphics laboratory.

Production costs were paid through a fund established in memory of Milton Kaplan, who was president of King Features syndicate until his death in 1972. Kaplan was a 1943 graduate of the University of Minnesota. Previous publications made possible by this fund are: "Closing the Circle, The Indian in Minneapolis: A New Era"; "The Discerning Eye, Minnesota Innovators"; "Minnesota's Mississippi"; "Age, A Minnesota Perspective"; "Liberal Arts, Making the Grade"; "... And A Time to Die"; "Survivors, Political Refugees in the Twin Cities"; and "Work in Progress."

Copies of "A Silence Too Loud: Family Violence" may be obtained by sending $1.50 plus 75 cents for postage and handling to Student Publications, School of Journalism and Mass Communication, 111 Murphy Hall, 206 Church St. S.E., University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, 55455.

Research Done On Goodridge Bldg. History

In preparation for special activities being planned for the Fourth of July in Goodridge, co-sponsored by the Goodridge historical society and the Goodridge Jaycees, two old log buildings have been moved to a lot just east of the school and restored as a historic exhibit.

Norma Hanson, president of the historical society, notes that the buildings had an interesting history prior to being donated to the society in 1982, remaining in use until quite recently. Restoration work was done under the supervision of Lynn Hanson, with most of the materials furnished by the society, and labor donated by the Goodridge Jaycees.

According to her research, the log house was built by a Mikkel Torgerson, who homesteaded in Reiner township in 1904. After living there for a number of years, he moved off the homestead and built the post office at Torgerson, which a few people still remember as a fairly good sized town with two livery stables.

The little log cabin was later occupied by the Nils Jorgenson family for several years, serving as the birthplace for Norman Jorgenson, a former Goodridge resident who now resides in Thief River Falls. The Jorgenson family eventually moved out of the cabin and returned to their former residence in Espelie township.

In later years, Thor Helle purchased the original homestead property, and the building was eventually moved to the farmyard of his son Gunder, who remodeled it as a chicken coop, installing roosts and modifying the door now at the north side of the building. Shortly before donating the building to the historical society in 1982, Gunder put on new roof boards and purchased cedar shakes, which were donated with the building. These were installed by the Jaycees, along with the windows, a door and new rough-board flooring.

Vertical log barn was built in 1933 on the Herb Race farm, by George Vraa, who was assisted for several days by Bert Coan. George and his brother Archie cut the logs for the barn at the farmstead of Thorold Thoroldson, hauling the 22 foot long poplar by sleigh, paying a dollar a load. These logs were cut into three-seven-foot pieces to make the walls of the barn. Tops of the trees were left at the Thoroldson farm to be used for firewood, true to the pioneer policy of wasting nothing.

Some of the larger logs were saved and sawed into rafters and roof boards by John Coan. Again, true to the policy of wasting nothing, the nails which were used to hold the chinking between the logs were salvaged from the site of the old mercantile store in Goodridge, which had burned to the ground.

George Vraa milked in the old barn until 1942, when he sold his cows. Bud Race bought the quarter of land on which the barn stood from Herb Race in 1945, using it to keep eight cows and a pen of calves. Bud sold the building to Edgar Miller in 1955, who donated it to the historical society in 1982.

With assistance from Lynn Hanson, Edgar Miller, Bud Race and LeRoy Johnson, the buildings were hauled to town on a lowboy trailer pulled by a tractor, and set on a foundation of railroad ties. Labor for the restoration was furnished by the Jaycees, who also installed a rail fence around the property.

As part of special activities being co-sponsored by the historical society and the Jaycees on Wednesday, July 4, the buildings will be dedicated at 2:30 p.m. In the evening, at 7 p.m., they will serve as a set for presentation of a semi-historic documentary play titled "Let The Winds Howl," which was specially written for the occasion by Norma Hanson.

THIS OLD LOG house and barn, donated to the Goodridge area historical society, have been undergoing restoration by the Goodridge Jaycees, in preparation for special Fourth of July activities to be cosponsored by the two organizations. With an overall theme of "Memories Are Yesterdays," the celebration will include a parade at 1 p.m. with the theme "Scenes From the Prairie," a dedication of the historic buildings at 2:30 p.m. and a presentation of an original play by Norma Hanson, "Let The Winds Howl," at 7:30 p.m.

Solheim also served as the "guiding Lion" for formation of the Thief River Falls Lioness club which his wife Beverly served as its first president. The group received credit for six years as a Lions auxiliary when it was chartered and is now in its official ninth year of operation.

Prior to the actual Lions International convention July 4-7, Sverre will take part in a three-day training session for district governors in San Francisco.

CHERYL LEE of Thief River Falls was a new exhibitor at the Art in the Park festival sponsored by the Thief River Falls community arts council this year, showing a fine selection of high quality stitchery work. Alhough the weather threatened rain several times, it never amounted to more than a few sprinkles, but may have discouraged some of the shoppers from coming out for the annual event.

WELCOMING new business to Thief River Falls, chamber Ambassadors Arnie Narverud and Jess McCabe extended congratulations and a first dollar of clear profit to Milt Swenson, president and manager of Exercise Dynamics. Located at 2020 East Greenwood Street, the business offers complete weight lifting and exercise facilities, including four regulation racquetball courts and whirlpool baths. ## City Council Settles Hiring Tuesday Night academic excellence to the job could not be underestimated, since the employee would be city's load shedding equipment, adding that it involved "a whole lot of money" if the equipment failed to operate during a critical period.

When the committee recommendation was called to a vote, only Alderman Clayton Restad voted against hiring Kevin Peterson, at a salary of $7.25 per hour, for a six month probationary period, stating that he had been opposed to posting for the job in the first place.

Council passed a resolution to proceed with an approximately $14,000 project to improve sidewalks in the downtown area, following a hearing at which no opposition was raised by businesses which will be assessed for $3,200 of the work.

Consulting engineer Dave Kildahl estimated that the businesses would be assessed between $2.50 and $3 per square foot, for work to be done in front of their property. Since the work will be scattered, involving removal of faulty sections and replacement with a four-inch slab of reinforced concrete, council suggested that businesses which wished to improve their sidewalks or accesses might benefit from the competitive bidding process, and could request that the work be added to the project. Businesses also have the option of doing the work themselves if they feel they can get it done more cheaply. Work is scheduled to be done in August.

Notification of the summons and complaint from attorneys for Consumers Cooperative was announced by City Clerk Jerry Wigness, who noted that it had just been received that day. City Attorney Wurst, who also received a copy summarized the document for the council, but declined to give an opinion on what action should be taken until he had had an opportunity to study it further.

Consumers Coop is demanding payment of $94,398.22, plus interest, legal fees and costs, as a result of a resolution to purchase their building at Second Street and Atlantic Avenue, which was passed by the city council on December 20.

Following passage of that resolution, a signed purchase agreement was delivered to the city, and the city clerk issued a $100 check as earnest money. Mayor Bob Carlson refused to sign the agreement purchase agreement, stating publically that he would "go to jail first."

After gathering opposition to use of the building as an off-sale liquor outlet, the Mayor called a special meeting of the city council on January 10, and the council voted to put the agreement on hold.

After council voted last night to refer the matter to the attorney for study and advice, Carlson commented, "I'm not so sure I'll want to take his advice."

In other business, the council:

— approved a lease agreement with Bemidji Airlines for use of a 60 by 120 foot hangar at the airport, to be shared with three other private planes;

— Heard that a meeting would be held at 5 p.m. tonight, to duscuss bonding issues with the Pennington county board, regarding funding for the Nordhagen recycling project; — Approved a special use permit for Byron Stale to display and sell accessory buildings at a site just north of the Barnick property on Highway 59 South;

— Discussed tax assessments on the T-59 Motel, referring the matter to the mayor to contact MnDOT personnel and see if modifications could be made to the Highway 59 project to improve access for the motel;

— Adjourned to 5 p.m. Thursday, June 28, to review bids for the 1984 Street project.

Home Cooling Information Is Available

"There are many things to consider befor buying an air conditioner," states Phil Smith of the Minnesota department of energy. "First, you should be sure that you really need an air conditioner at all. Many homes can be cooled with ventilation and simple adjustments to the home of lifestyle. Check with the energy information center on alternative ways to cool your home.

"If an air conditioner is necessary, take into account several factors," Smith suggests. "Have a good idea of how much the unit will be operated. The unit should be sized properly — too small and it will be unable to cool the space while too large a unit will cool too quickly and have too little time to dehumidify the air before it shuts off. The result will be a cool, clammy feeling in the room.

"Finally, if you're smart, buy an energy efficient air conditioner which probably cost more than a less efficient model but also costs less to operate."

Find the efficiency of a new air conditioner should be easy. A black and yellow tag attached to it shows the energy efficiency rating (EER) and estimated costs of running the unit for different periods of time at different electrical rates.

"The tag is called the 'Energy Guide' and it will show the EER and a table of anticipated cooling costs," Smith said. "The higher the EER, the more efficient it is. For instance, 8.5 is better than 7.0.

"You should look first for a high EER and then compare costs with other units with different EER's Also estimate how much the air conditioner is going to be operated and use the cost chart to figure out the savings a higher EER will bring," Smith suggests.

"The average life of a room air conditioner is 10 or more years so the savings resulting from use of a high EER unit can accumulate over the years and be substantial. It may cost more initially but it will also save money in the long run." The energy division recommends a minimum EER of 8.0 for room air conditioners.

The energy information center has publications that will help a buyer calculate the payback of a high EER air conditioner, as well as many other energy conservation publications. To receive any of the publications, free of charge, call toll free 1-800-652-9747 and ask for energy.

Suicide Study Of Adolescents Reveals Pattern

by Deane Morrison
'U' M News Service

Best and brightest young people tend to be the most successful at everything — including suicide, according to a University of Minnesota psychiatrist who has studied young people who commit suicide and those who attempt it.

Dr. Barry Garfinkel found that adolescents who were doing well in school were more successful in suicide attempts than those having difficulty. And, although girls tried to kill themselves, three times as often as boys, boys were much more likely to succeed.

Garfinkel studied records of completed and attempted suicides in the Canadian province of Ontario to identify patterns of experience and behavior that put people 10 to 24 years old at risk. He examined records of suicides among this age group throughout the province between January of 1971 and August of 1978 and emergency room charts for young people treated at a Toronto hospital from January of 1970 to January of 1977 following suicide attempts. He conducted additional studies in southern New England, and believes that his findings apply throughtout the United States.

"Typically, adolescents who kill themselves tend to have stable relationships and goals and, if in school, to be good students," Garfinkel said. "But then they encounter depression for any number of reasons and, turning to alcohol or drugs, find no relief and no one to turn to."

Suicides were rare before age 16, but increased sharply between ages 15 and 17. The rate then rose more slowly, levelling off at his highest point at age 20. Boys outnumbered girls by four-to-one, partly because they tended to choose more lethal means that offer little chance for interruption and rescue. For example, boys were 12 times more likely than girls to use guns, seven times as likely to hang themselves and twice as likely to jump to their deaths. Drug overdose was equal for both sexes.

However, beginning in 1975, girls showed a trend toward more violent methods. "This could reflect the changing sex roles in society, with girls relating more to guns — a symbol of power," Garfinkel said. Firearms account for half of all U.S. suicides and are the leading means of suicide in North America.

Adolescents who tried to kill themselves presented a different picture from the completed suicides; three-quarters were girls, most chose drug overdose and most had a history of unstable family and social relationships. The average age was 15.

When Garfinkel compared the suicide attempters' records to those of a matched group of adolescents admitted to the hospital for other reasons, he found that the fathers of 50 per cent of attempters — but only 14 per cent of the matched group — were absent from the home. Both parents were absent for a quarter of the attempters, but for only three per cent of the matched group. The mothers of attempters were more likely to work outside the home. Most attempts came in the wake of a conflict — usually with family members, sometimes with boyfriends or girlfriends, school or police — which may have been exacerbated by parental absence.

"When an adolescent is dperessed or troubled and has no available adult, that compounds the situation," Garfinkel said. "An adolescent may see suicide as the only way out, whereas adults could provide alternatives. The absence of responsible adults didn't create the trouble, but it doesn't help to resolve the situation."

Although most of the attempts occurred in the home, suicidal adolescents were much less likely than the matched group to be accompanied to the hospital by a parent. Instead, they often arrived in the company of a social worker, child-care worker, police officer or other professional. Many attempters had been living in group homes, which partly accounts for the lack of parental support.

Adults should be aware of warning signs and be ready to provide assistance, Garfinkel said. Things to look for are changes in mood or behavior, such as altered sleep or eating patterns, decreased ability to concentrate in school, periods of crying or moodiness, irritability and loss of energy. But the most significant warning sign is a previous suicide attempt by the adolescent or a family member. Suicide tends to run in families, but whether genetic factors or learning is the cause is not known.

Child abuse is also a factor in some bases. People who have been beaten by others often have a low regard for their own well-being, and are thus at risk for self-injury. But there are no statistics to indicate the extent to which such abuse contributes to suicidal behavior.

Garfinkel things that perhaps eight or nine out of 10 unsuccessful attempters actually want to be saved, or at least experience a great deal of ambivalence about their actions. But if those youngsters do not resolve their conflicts, a goodly number will try again and ultimately succeed. Therefore, he said, even attempts that appear halfhearted should be taken very seriously. Another important precaution is not to leave potential means of self-destruction lying around in easy reach of children or adolescents. Old medicines should be discarded and guns locked up securely.

Suicide attempts tend to be financially as well as emotionally costly. Hospital personnel generally treat such cases as serious medical conditions, often requiring admission to the hospital and stays of three days or longer.. This puts a heavy burden on health care resources. But the situation is likely to worsen. Garfinkel detected a 32 per cent rise in the suicide rate between 1971 and 1977, and thinks that adolescent depression is more commonly recognized today.

"We have to learn to recognize depression in young people very early," he said. "Parents must sometimes rely on other people's impressions of their children. For example, a teacher, coach or clergyman might notice depression. And although it is normal to think about suicide occasionally, talk of suicide should always be taken seriously, especially if the person has done some planning. The greater the detail of the plan, the greater the danger."

Conservation Revisited

Fifty years ago this summer, farmers in large parts of Minnesota were watching in horror as their precious topsoil literally blew away. Millions of acres of farmland across the American palins were abandoned. Farm foreclosures were occurring at record rates. Our country was slipping into a deep depression.

Our of the depths of the Great Depression of the 1930s, the federal government made a commitment to work with farmers to improve soil and water conservation practices, a commitment that has included some $25 billion in federal funding over the past 50 years.

Now, in 1984, we are seeing a renewed interest in and concern about soil and water conservation by farmers and many of those who depend on them. Farmers do not want to see their valuable land turned into a 1980s "dust bowl."

Most farmers realized that, next to their families, soil and water are their most important resources. Unfortunately, in our rush to boost production to keep up with rising expenses, we often lose sight of the need to preserve and protect our soil and water resources, both for ourselves and for future generations.

Hardly a day goes by that we don't read of a neighbor's well having been contaminated. And, despite the billions of dollars we have spent on soil conservation over the past 50 years, a recent federal study found that the average farm in Minnesota is still losing six tons of topsoil per acre per year. Nationally, we're losing a staggering four billion tons of topsoil from croplands each year. That's intolerable!

All of this lost soil means more cost to farmers and less income; more fertilizer, more pesticides and more fuel expended, but lower yields. The director of the USDA's Soil Conservation Service told a recent press conference in the Twin Cities that our state's farmers are losing between $20 and $40 per acre per year in lost nutrients, all to erosion.

The direct economic loss to farmers, both today and in the future, is one reason that concerns about soil and water conservation have risen to the top of the Congressional farm issue agenda.

Many observers in Congress now agree that new farm legislation will not be adopted without tough soil conservation features.

The increased interest in soil and water conservation parallels closely the frustration many farmers and farm policy makers have experienced with past agricultural policies that have encouraged 'fencerow-to-fencerow' planting.

Farmers have been caught in a cost-price squeeze that has forced them to maximize acreage and maximize yields in order to pay the bills. Low prices, uncertain world demand and continually-rising expenses have forced many farmers to postpone conservation practices that they know will have long-term benefits.

That's why many farmers and farm policy experts are now giving serious consideration to a new direction for federal farm policy. The new direction would stress soil and water conservation, perhaps returning some of the incentives to farming that produced large-scale "soil banking" in the 1950s.

But no major changes in federal soil and water conservation programs and policies should take place without the consideration and ideas of farmers themselves. That's one reason I will hold public hearings later this year in Minnesota.

The hearings will address a wide range of conservation issues including the effectiveness of current soil and water conservation programs, the proper role of federal conservation programs and regulations, proposed tax incentives for conservation, Reagan administration efforts to reduce conservation funding, and groundwater protection proposals.

These hearings, along with my meetings with individual farmers and their organizations, will help work toward a farm policy that truly addresses the crisis in our rural economy.

Liberty Statue To Carry A New Torch

by Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

"Oh, oh — daylight," Paul Kinney almost whispered. Kinney, curator of the Statue of Liberty's American Museum of Immigration, was guiding another of the many millions of visitors up the steep, double-flight spiral staircase inside the statue. Along the 168-step journey from Liberty's feet to her crown, he had seen light filtering through a small hole in her copper toga — somewhere around the hemline.

After almost 100 years, even a symbol of America can wear out — especially if she is subjected constantly to salty air, high winds, air pollution and the strain of forever holding aloft a 21-foot torch. That torch was first lighted with great celebration at Liberty's dedication in New York City's harbor on Oct. 28, 1886. President Grover Cleveland spoke eloquently of liberty enlightening the world, but the statue's sculptor, Frederic Auguste Bartholdi, complained that the torch cast the light of a "glowworm."

Statue's lighting has been improved considerably over the years with ever-more-powerful electrical systems, but time has worked against Liberty in other ways. Her "bones" have become weak in places and her "skin" has rusted inside and out.

Statue of Liberty's deteriorating condition has worried both private citizens and the national park service for some years. Since 1933, the park service has been the guardian of the national monument, which today includes the Statue of Liberty on Liberty Island and Ellis Island, the former immigration station a half mile away.

In 1982, President Reagan announced the formation of The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial commission and named Lee A. Iacocca its chairman. The commission's goal is to raise $230 million entirely from private sources — including America's school children, ethnic groups and large corporations — for the restoration and preservation of the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island by 1986 and 1992, their respective centennials.

Statue of Liberty is familiar to millions, but not many give much thought to how she's made or what kind of shape she's in. Her classic body is formed by a thin molded-copper exterior skin made up of 300 pieces hung independently from an interior support skeleton. This iron framework, designed by Gustave Eiffel a few years before he created his famous tower, is basically in good condition but does require strengthening.

Structural connection of the upraised torch-bearing arm to the central iron pylon that is the statue's backbone is seriously weakened and must be rebuilt. Every effort will be made to repair the ailing arm in place, but testing may reveal the need to remove it.

The statue's torch, however, definitely will have to be removed and replaced. The legendary beacon is corroded and leaky and, according to a joint French-American architectural and engineering team's 1983 report, is at "definite risk of structural failure." Once, visitors loved to stand on the torch balcony, but it was closed in 1916 because access was difficult. Today, ascent to the torch remains the dubious privilege of park service personnel. "Her torch is a little loose," Ross Holland, the director of restoration and preservation of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, says. "It's waving about 15 inches."

Torch and balcony will be rebuilt and their replacements constructed according to the sculptor's design. The present internally lighted torch flame made of copper and hundreds of pieces of amber glass will be replaced with a gilded solid copper flame like Bartholdi's original creation. New external lighting will enhance the torch's golden glow.

Structural report shed light on another, rather startling fact — Liberty's head is two feet off center. Apparently, there were slight miscalculations in reassembling the great gift from France after she arrived from Paris in 214 crates. "She looks beautiful," Holland says, "and since this isn't a structural problem, we won't do anything about it."

Other external work to get Liberty in shape for her centennial includes replacing with modern alloys the corroded interior iron strapwork supporting the copper skin; replacing worn parts of the skin with prepatinized (green) copper; reshaping skin portions distorted from corrosion, and bathing the entire statue in a mild detergent to remove stains, pollution and other foriegn materials.

Beauty may be only skin deep, but Lady Liberty will get a number of practical visitor improvements as well. One new feature will be closed-circuit TV cameras that will allow those unable to make the arduous climb to her crown to get a good look at the inside of the statue. However, after years of experience, David Moffitt, superintendent of the Statue of Liberty National Monument, knows what a magnet that steep and narrow spiral staircase is.

"Once, I was climbing the stairs behind a visitor, a bit impatient at his slow pace. When I got to the crown, I saw that the man was blind. From that moment on, I realized that people climb the Statue of Liberty for more than the View."

State Jobless Rate Declines During April

Minnesota's unemployment rate in April dropped to 6.5 per cent, from 7.1 per cent in March, continuing an overall downward trend begun last year, Commissioner Barbara Beerhalter of the Minnesota Department of Economic Security reported today.

The decline was due to seasonal factors and held close to the average March-to-April change since 1970, Beerhalter said. However, the April rate of 6.5 per cent is a big improvement over the April 1983 jobless rate of 9.4 per cent, she said.

The drop in Minnesota's unemployment rate is the eleventh decrease in the rate in the past 14 months, Beerhalter added. The jobless rate had peaked at 10.5 per cent in February 1983.

The continued downward progress in unemployment also is reflected in the latest department report of unemployment insurance claims that shows for the week ending May 11 a total of 38,300 active benefits claimants in the regular unemployment insurance program, almost 18,000 fewer than one year ago.

Department analyst Wayne Graner said that Minnesota's labor force, at 2,221,100, was up 2.6 per cent from March. This was an ordinary March-to-April shift, he said, but larger than has been experienced since 1979.

Nonagricultural wage and salary employment increased by 37,100 jobs over the month, bringing the total to 1,779,200. The monthly increase was far greater than the average gain of 21,360 recorded since 1979, Graner said.

Seasonal changes in the nonmanufacturing sector accounted for much of the gain, he reported, particularly in trade jobs which were up 12,600, service, up 7,600 and construction, up 7,400.

In the manufacturing sector, small advances were noted in most industries, Graner said. "Payroll jobs were up 90,400 over a year ago as manufacturing advanced 6.0 per cent and non-manufacturing gained 5.2 per cent, he said.

Average April weekly earnings of production workers in the manufacturing sector increased to $395.09 from $391.79 in March. The increase primarily was due to a longer average work week (40.9 hours vs. 40.6 hours) as average hourly earnings went up only one cent, to $9.66.

The unemployment rate pertains to the entire labor force and is not used to determine whether unemployment insurance benefits will be extended beyond the 26-week maximum. The unemployment rate among persons covered by unemployment insurance is used to determine whether the benefit payments will be extended.

Minn. Tourism Is 2nd Largest Industry

Observance of national tourism week in Minnesota is a celebration of the importance and growth of the state's second largest industry, according to Arnold J. Hewes, executive vice president of the Minnesota restaurant, hotel and resort associations.

Citing the importance of tourism to the Minnesota economy, Hewes said the latest data shows the state's travel and tourism industry generated: 108,000 jobs; 15,000 part-time and seasonal jobs; over six per cent of all state jobs; $735 million in payroll; $2.5 billion of annual expenditures in the state; $188 million annually in state tax revenues; and $26.3 million annually in local taxes.

Hewes provided a breakdown of the tourism dollar, indicating the food slice is the largest, encompassing a 27.1 per cent share of each dollar in expenditures. Auto transportation is the second largest category with a 23.2 per cent portion of each dollar spent. Public transportation accounts for 17 per cent of the tourism dollar. Lodging accounts for a 15.7 per cent share of each tourism dollar spent in the state, Hewes said. Entertainment, recreation, and incidentals share the remaining 17 per cent of the tourism dollar.

Hewes indicates the additional tourism promotion made possible by an increase in the 1983-85 biennial budget of the Minnesota office of tourism has resulted in predictions for a banner tourism year.

Through cooperative efforts by private industry and the Minnesota office of tourism, promotional efforts for restaurant, hotel and resort businesses have increased substantially, Hewes reports. These associations produce three guides cooperatively with the tourism office and early reports show distribution is up in both the associations' distribution center and the state of Minnesota's information center.

Hewes cited an example how promoting Minnesota tourism is being made more effective by joint efforts between private industry and the Tourism Office. The Minnesota resort association, American Express, and the office of tourism shared in a resort promotional effort in early March. Information about Minnesota resorts was supplied to 153,000 cardholders outside Minnesota with access information for the state's toll free tourism and information line. Several thousand requests have resulted from the special promotion, according to Hewes.

Randy Ruttger, Birchmont Ruttger resort, Bemidji, president of the resort association, indicated his resort's reservations started coming in earlier this year than ever before. He said his increased advertising and promotional efforts along with those of the Association and the office of tourism may have accounted for the increase. He said, "It's going to be a good year," basing his impression on his charting of reservations at Birchmont.

Scattered returns from resorts across the entire state indicate an "above average" travel year is expected.

Hewes indicated the Minnesota Resort Association, which represents resorts of all sizes in the state, has heard generally positive comments from members about expectations for the 1984 season. Many resorters report heavier - than - average inquiries and increased bookings for the year. The real test for a banner tourism year for resorts will be whether the weather cooperates, Hewes said.

Besides the financial, tax, employment, and other contributions which Minnesota tourism provides for the state, Hewes said tourism also has other significant returns. Tourism lrovides increased understanding and awareness between cultures and it provides for personal growth, health, and education, Hewes said. He expects the impact of tourism in the future will be even greater since predictions are for more leisure time and continued growth of the hospitality and service industry in the years ahead.

Homeowners to Receive Double Tax Refunds

Homeowners who get the 1983 special property tax refund are going to get at least double the refund the amount the state originally expected to pay out, according to the Minnesota department of revenue.

Also an estimated 10,000 homeowners who weren't eligible for the refund when the yellow instruction booklets were printed and mailed in January have since been made eligible and should apply, says the revenue department.

All together, from 50,000 to 60,000 homeowners are eligible for the 1983 special property tax refund, according to Arthur C. Roemer, state revenue commissioner.

Unlike the regular property tax refund — which is received by most of the state's homeowners — only homeowners who've had an unusually large increase in their property tax bill over the previous year are eligible for the special property tax refund.

Both refunds are determined by filling out the yellow and white form M-1PR. The special property tax refund is determined by filling out schedule 3 on the back of the form.

The deadline for applying for both refunds is August 31.

Doubling of the 1983 special property tax refund amounts if the result of a law change by the 1984 state legislature.

Before the 1984 legislative session, state law provided for a special property tax refund of one-half of the amount of the increase in a homeowner's property tax bill over 20 per cent — with the maximum refund amount limited to $200.

As a result of the law change, the state will now pay the full amount of the increase over 20 per cent. And there is no limit to the maximum amount of the special property tax refund.

Legislature also increased the number of homeowners eligible for the special property tax refund by raising the maximum amount of household income applicants can have and still be eligible for the refund.

Previously, eligibility was limited to homeowners with household incomes under $40,000. Now, homeowners can have a household income up to $50,000 and still be eligible to apply.

Elimination of the maximum special refund amount means that homeowners who under the previous law would have gotten refunds of more than $200 — except for the 200 limit — will not get more than double the refund amount originally expected.

Law changes have required the revenue department to revise part of schedule 3 on the form M-1PR it mailed to most of the state's homeowners in January, Roemer says.

But if you've already filled out schedule 3 and sent in your 1983 form M-1PR, don't worry, he says. The revenue department will re-figure your special property tax refund and see that you get the larger refund amount.

If you haven't filled out the schedule 3 you got in January, Roemer says the first thing to do is fill out lines 1 through 12 of that schedule to see if the increase in your property tax bill is large enough to qualify you for the special property tax refund.

To qualify, your property tax bill must have increased by at least 20 per cent over last year's bill — after this year's bill has been reduced by subtracting this year's regular property tax refund from it.

(By the way, you may be eligible for the special property tax refund even if you're not eligible for the regular property tax refund, Roemer says.)

If you have an amount to fill in on line 12 of schedule 3, then call the revenue department for help in filling out the rest of the schedule according to the revised instructions, Roemer advises.

Or you can ask the department to mail you the revised instructions, he says. From the Twin Cities, the number to call is 296-3781. Call during normal business hours.

From elsewhere in Minnesota, call 800-652-9094, toll free.

Increase in the special refund amount for individual homeowners is expected to raise the total cost of the special refund program from approximately $3 million to an estimated $11.5 million, according to Roemer.

Truck Length Limit Book Available Now

Increased allowable length limits for trucks and the maximum legal loads they can carry on state highways are illustrated by a new map and companion booklet produced by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT). The map and booklet now are available without charge from the department.

New legal lengths are listed for the first time on the truckers' map this year. The increased length limits reflect a change in Mn-DOT policy to allow longer semitrailer trucks and twin-trailer trucks to operate on certain, designated Minnesota highways. The new limits become effective June 1.

Color-coded map and 33-page booklet provide the public and truckers with guides to routes that allow semitrailers more than 55 feet in length, routes that permit twin-trailer combinations, and indicate legal weight limits on interstate and major trunk highways.

They also list permanent 10-ton routes and provide advance notice of specific dates when seasonal 1-ton routes become effective each year, said Darrell Schierman, manager of emergency operations, permits and road condition information.

For example, Schierman said, a trucker planning to use trunk highway 55 between Hoffman and Glenwood could tell by checking the map that he could operate a truck-tractor and trailer combination as long as 65 feet but could not use a longer combination nor use a twin-trailer configuration. He also would learn that the route can carry legal 80,000-pound (10-ton) loads beginning Aug. 1.

Those who receive the map and booklet will also be sent bulletins advising them of changes in 10-ton routes as they occur. The booklet, 5½ inches by 8½ inches, is a convenient size for drivers to carry in their vehicles.

Information about changes in 10-ton routes also is available on a 24-hour basis by calling (612) 297-2093.

Copies of the map and booklet are available at Mn-DOT district offices throughout the state or by writing the Emergency Operations, Permits and Road Condition Information, G-17 Transportation Building, St. Paul, 55155 or by calling (612) 296-3072.

Sabo Signs Pro Baseball Contract

Thief River Falls' Scott Sabo signed a professional baseball contract Wednesday with the Oakland A's organization.

A 23-year-old lefthanded pitcher, Sabo gave up a final year of baseball eligibility at the University of Wisconsin to sign with the A's, reporting to the team's Class A Idaho Falls farm club.

Sabo, a 1979 Lincoln High School graduate, was in contact with professional scouts throughout most of his college baseball career in Madison. He was a draft choice of the Minnesota Twins, but turned down their offer, and was being followed closely by the Milwaukee Brewers.

He was in Milwaukee to pitch for the Brewers' scouts once again early this week, but wasn't enthused with their contract offer. Even before he left town, Oakland officials contacted him at his motel room and Sabo was on an airplane the next morning for Phoenix, Arizona, where he pitched well enough to receive a contract offer from the A's that he accepted.

Sabo, who was also a member of two NCAA Division I championship hockey teams at Wisconsin, admittedly didn't have a particularly impressive set of statistics for the Badgers' baseball team this spring when he was bothered by a sore knee and shoulder, but he did beat Illinois 7-0 on a one-hitter and he had a two-hitter vs. Big Ten West Division champion Minnesota but still lost a 4-2 decision on a home run by Jack Schlisting, who is now playing for the Los Angeles Dodgers organization in that same Class A league that Sabo just joined.

He had a fifth year baseball scholarship still awaiting him at Wisconsin, but opted to try his hand at professional baseball.

TRF Legion Tackles Moorhead

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team will have a chance to see how it stacks up against the best in the Ninth District tonight (Wednesday) when post 117 visits Moorhead.

Moorhead Blues, as everyone probably knows, have been the dominant team in the Ninth District the past dozen years, winning ten district tournament titles in that span, including a current string of three straight. Until they're beaten, the Blues will continue to rank as the Ninth District favorite.

East Grand Forks figured to give Moorhead a run for its money this summer, but the Blues swept a recent doubleheader when they met in Fargo by 7-6 and 11-4 scores.

Actually, East Grand Forks did challenge Moorhead in the opener until the Blues' Terry Fergew scored the winning run on a missed attempt at a squeeze play at the plate in the seventh inning.

After doubling to start the winning, Fergew moved to third on a sacrifice and then scored when the ball got by the catcher after his Moorhead teammate had missed on the squeeze bunt attempt.

Moorhead started with a 5-0 lead, but fell behind 6-5 before Darin Kraemer homered to start the Blues' sixth inning.

Second half of the twinbill was decided early when Moorhead scored eight times in the first inning, highlighted by a two-run Tim Hill triple following a pair of walks.

Miscellaneous

+ Erick Wigand, the 17-year-old Crookston shooters, finished well behind the leaders in a field of 140 at the United States Olympic trapshooting trials competed Sunday in San Bernadino, Calif. He failed in his bid to earn a spot on the U.S. Olympic team for the upcoming 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles. He was named as an alternate on the U.S. Junior Diplomatic team. Wigand, after a short break from the sport, will be at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs for a month of intensive training. He has his sights set on earning a spot on the U.S. team for the Pan American Games next year, then try to qualify again for the Olympic squad in 1988. Crookston community raised some $2,350 to help defray the cost of Wigand's trip to California.

+ Bemidji American Legion baseball team, a 12-0 loser to Thief River Falls in its 1984 season opener, bounded back from a 20-3 first round lacing at the hands of Grand Rapids to take third place honors at the Grand Rapids Invitational over the weekend, with wins over Proctor 6-3 and Brainerd 4-2. Grand Rapids, the Class AA state high school baseball champion this spring, beat Superior, Wis. 11-0 in their invitational tournament title game.

TRF Baseball Games Rained Out Tuesday

Rain Tuesday erased the baseball schedule at three fronts for Thief River Falls teams.

An American Legion game here last night against Karlstad was postponed. An American Legion Bombers B game at Warroad was also postponed Tuesday, with no new make-up date announced.

Tuesday morning the Thief River Falls Babe Ruth 14-15-year-olds were in the midst of the first inning of a doubleheader opener at Crookston when a rain shower put an end to things.

Thief River Falls American Legion team, 5-2 for the year, plays at Moorhead tonight (Wednesday) and hosts Hallock Thursday at 7 p.m.

American Legion Bombers, 2-5, will play Hallock Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the second half of a split doubleheader on the fairgrounds diamond.

THIRD BASEMAN Mark Drury of the St. Hilaire Bears put the tag on Don Grabowska of American Legion-Miller Beer when the runner tried to stretch a double into a triple during the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball game Tuesday. It was a match-up of the top two teams in Division I, but unbeaten American Legion-Miller Beer handled the once-beaten St. Hilaire Bears easily, collecting a 15-4 five-inning victory.

TRYING TO SCORE in the first inning, American Legion-Miller Beer runner Rocky Ammerman was tagged out at the plate by St. Hilaire Bears catcher Kevin Fanfulik during Tuesday's Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball Division I first place battle. On-deck batter Jeff Tunberg watched the play closely. American Legion-Miller Beer remained unbeaten with a 15-4 win.

— Men's Slow Pitch —

American Legion-Miller Beer secured its first place position in the Division I standings, while Stone's Mobile Radio caught Coors atop the Division II race Tuesday in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball league.

In Division I, unbeaten American Legion-Miller Beer met the challenge of the second place St. Hilaire Bears in impressive 15-4 fashion. St. Hilaire Bears entered the game with just one loss in league play, plus a championship finish in the Class C-D portion of Sunday's Thief River Falls Lake Agassiz Invitational. American Legion-Miller Beer had a runner-up finish in the Class A-B portion of that same tournament to set up an interesting league confrontation.

St. Hilaire Bears looked like they were really going to provide some excitement when they jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning, but American Legion-Miller Beer opened the bottom of the inning with nine straight base hits — including a three-run home run by Tom Ronchetti to tie it — and went ahead 8-3. The winners tacked on three more runs in the second and closed out a ten-run-rule victory with a four-run fourth.

Meanwhile in Division II, Coors saw its two-game lead disappear last night by dropping both ends of a split doubleheader. Stone's Mobile Radio rallied for three runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to edge Coors 6-5 in the opener, with third place Hardees adding a 4-2 victory over Coors in the nightcap.

Stone's Mobile Radio followed the first-game decision over Coors with a 23-2 rout of The Blacksheep to move atop the Division II standings at 9-3, just ahead of Coors at 8-3 and Hardees at 8-4.

Elsewhere Tuesday, TG Sporting Goods got by Nichols Beauty Nook-Paint & Glass 8-6, Pepsi Bottling handled The Source-Wennberg's Welding 14-2 and the Hamms-Pizza Hut vs. Best Western game was postponed when early-evening rains flooded Field I.

On Monday, Jack Daniels won a Division II doubleheader, beating Fleet Supply 7-4 and Mello-Yello (no score available). The Aggies, meanwhile, lost twice — falling to Mello-Yello 7-6 and losing to Fleet Supply 6-3.

League schedule, normally featuring as many as four doubleheaders five days a week, will be spotty now until after the Fourth of July holiday. There are no games scheduled tonight (Wednesday). Four doubleheaders will be played Thursday, but then league teams will be idle until Monday, July 9.

Ask Residents To Watch For Marked Birds

Residents of Minnesota and other states in the Upper Mississippi river valley are being asked to report sightings of red-winged blackbirds with small plastic ribbons attached to their legs.

The ribbons were placed on the birds by the U.S. fish and wildlife service as part of a study aimed at reducing damage to sunflower crops in the Dakotas and western Minnesota.

Reports of sightings will help researchers define migration routes and wintering and breeding areas.

Anyone observing the marked birds is asked to write a note giving the dates, ribbon color and location of the sightings to John Cummings, research biologist, Denver wildlife research center, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Building 16, DFC, Denver, CO 80225.

THIS HEFTY NORTHERN started Friday out right for Tim Brenna of Thief River Falls when he hooked the lunker about 7 a.m. He was fishing from shore in the Red Lake river with a red and white casting spoon. Brenna said the 38-inch fish weighed in at 13 pounds. The prize catch is a bit of justice, since Brenna landed a 14-pounder before the season opened and had to return it to the river.

Women's Slow Pitch

Ridgerunners, involved in a first place Division I tie with Russells-Kees, swept a Monday night doubleheader in the Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league by beating the Musharettes 5-3 and doubling Century 21 by a 6-3 margin.

Russells-Kees kept pace with an 8-3 victory over Century 21 as Cheryl Hinschberger and Dorene Larson homered.

Schmidt Stealers pulled off a triple play to close out a 9-8 win over Northland-Thomas, but fell victim to the Health Hustlers 11-0 in the second half of their split twinbill.

Betsy McKeever homered, but it wasn't enough as Roseau Transport edged the Musharettes 7-6, and the same goes for Peggy Peterson, who homered in a 6-5 Hardees loss to Hutchinson-Sheldons.

Pizza Hut doubled the Health Hustlers 16-6 to complete the eight-game Monday night schedule.

League play resumes tonight at the fairgrounds, Northland Community College and Eastside Park diamonds.

Twins Plan Fanfare '84 Event July 3

Fanfare '84, a July 3 celebration of baseball, music and fireworks in downtown Minneapolis, will be presented by the Minnesota Orchestra and the Minnesota Twins, it was announced recently.

Twins and World Champion Balltimore Orioles will lead off the evening at the Metrodome, followed by a free concert by the Minnesota Orchestra in the Metrodome parking lot. A huge fireworks display — coordinated with the Orchestra's finale — will close out the celebration.

"We are very excited about working with the Minnesota Twins and being a part of Fanfare '84," said David Wax, general manager of the Minnesota Orchestra. "We expect the evening to be a great success and to be the foundation for future Independence Day celebrations in Minneapolis."

Originally scheduled for 7:35 p.m., the game will be moved to a 6:35 p.m. start. The concert will begin immediately following the conclusion of the game, which is estimated to be around 9 p.m. No cars or buses will be allowed to park in the Metrodome parking lot during the evening, freeing the entire lot for concert-goers. Persons would provide their own blankets or other means of seating comfort.

Fans attending the Twins' game will have the option of going outside to view the concert or staying inside to hear the Orchestra broadcast over the Metrodome's sound system. Those staying inside will also have access to the concession stands and rest rooms until the conclusion of the concert.

Poster Contest Has Minnesota Award Winners

Minnesotans James Wintheiser of Lake City, Alis Holmberg of Butterfield and Erik S. Jones of Alexandria were named among the winners in the 1984 National Hunting and Fishing (NHF) Day Poster Contest. Their posters illustrating the theme "How Sportsmen's Duck Stamp Dollars Benefit Wildlife" had already been selected as winners in locally sponsored contests before being submitted to the National NHF Day Poster Contest.

James, a sophomore at Lake City, won honorable mention and recognition and will receive a $75 U.S. Savings Bond. His entry was sponsored by Wild Wings, Inc.

Alis, a sixth grader at Butterfield, was also an honorable mention winner and will receive a $75 U.S. Savings Bond. Her entry was sponsored by Speedway Builders 4-H Club and by Minnesota Conservation Federation.

Erik, a fifth grader at Alexandria, was the third Minnesota entry given honorable mention status and will also receive a $75 U.S. Savings Bond. His entry was sponsored by Lake Mary Troopers 4-H Club and by Minnesota Conservation Federation.

Their posters were among thousands entered in local NHF Day poster contests sponsored by schools, sportsmen's clubs and civic organizations throughout the country. In addition to local prizes, there were 53 national awards totaling $5,550 in U.S. Savings Bonds for youngsters who best illustrated the contest theme "How Sportsmen's Duck Stamp Dollars Benefit Wildlife."

Sportsmen have contributed more than $5 billion toward wildlife conservation in this country since the turn of the century. Through license fees and special taxes, sportsmen have paid for fish and wildlife management programs and the acquisition of millions of acres of vital habitat that benefit all wildlife.

Designed to foster an increased awareness of the need for conservation and the role sportsmen play in America's conservation efforts, the 1984 NHF Day poster contest was open to all students in grades 5-12.

'U'M Regents Plan Budget For 1984-87

Preliminary plans for a 1985-87 university of Minnesota budget that "is prudent, but not bashful" were discussed for the first time recently by the board of regents.

University President C. Peter Magrath, who said there are no budget figures on paper yet, outlined a timetable for arriving at the amount the university will ask the Legislature to appropriate. He said increased faculty salaries and graduate student support are likely to be among the top priorities. The university's capital request will be discussed next month. At the same meeting in July, the board will hear the administration's six-year plan for setting priorities. In August, the regents will hear plans for setting the university's operations and maintenance budget and for special requests for state funding. Action on the plans is expected in September.

"We're not asking our units for wish lists," Magrath said. "We will recommend a 1985-87 budget that is prudent, but not bashful."

Nine proposals for building a modern telecommunications system for the university's Twin Cities campus were presented to the board. Companies — AT&T, Continental telephone, FirsTel Information systems, InterCom, Northwestern Bell (with Telco), Universal Communications systems and Northwestern Bell and Sotecor in a joint venture — have complex, complicated plans for the $20 million to $25 million system.

In December the university sent a request for proposals for a system that would include telephones, data transfer and closed-circuit television. Plans call for the system to be completed by late 1986.

Centel Communications has filed suit asking U.S. District Judge Miles Lord to overturn the university's contention that its proposal for the telecommunications system was submitted too late. Centel's suit claims the university would not accept the 160-page proposal because it was filed six minutes past the deadline of 2 p.m. June 1. Centel contends it was filed two minutes before the deadline. A yearing on the lawsuit is scheduled for Monday.

Duluth Regent Erwin Goldfine reported to the board about an evaluation of Magrath's administration, which is in its 10th year. Goldfine said there will be no written report on the results of interviews with university administrators, faculty, legislators and community leaders.

Minn. CPAs Recommend Basic Strategy

One half of all small businesses fail in their first five years, according to statistics from Dun and Bradstreet. So, before you start up a small business, the Minnesota Society of CPAs recommends some basic financial strategies that may help keep your business from being counted among the failures.

Major reason for business failure is that people rely on hope to make their business successful, says Willian Dunkelberg, a professor at Purdue university and chief economist for the National Federation of Independent Businesses. The excitement of and personal involvement in business often deter people from approaching it as objectively as possible. Important first steps include surveying the market for your service or product, and projecting sales and expenses.

Start by gathering some marketing information. You'll want to be sure that the product or service you sell is needed in the area you will be locating your business. Statistics available from local government business development agencies and from the U.S. Census Bureau can tell you about the age and income levels of the population in your area, how many cars they own and other relevant facts. This will help you determine the profile of the market for your product. In addition, the local Chamber of Commerce can probably tell you how much competition you'll be facing.

Once you've laid to rest questions about the viability of your business in the location you've chosen, you should begin to confront the financial questions. According to Johnnie Albertson, of the Small Business Administration, one of the chief causes of businesses failing early is that they are underfunded. She stresses the importance of figuring out your initial and continuing expenses and says, as a general rule, you should be prepared not to take any money out of the business for a full year.

When estimating the costs of starting yp your business and apying operating expenses, you may want to consult your CPA. You'll need a detailed checklist of expenses to tell you how much business you must generate to turn a profit; that will help you structure your prices. Basically, selling prices are set according to your total costs for materials, direct labor and overhead which includes taxes, hospitalization and workmen's compensation.

To accurately forecast these expenses, you'll need to set up an estimated expense worksheet. Start by estimating operating costs such as rent, your salary and utility bills. Next, list your variable costs such as payments for materials and labor needed to produce your product. Finally, estimate all other operating costs for selling, insurance, administrative costs and other overhead, CPAs say.

Once you've completed this cost summary, you should have a good idea of how much you must charge for your product and how much of it you must sell in order to make a profit. You may want to draw up a projected sales summary estimating how much money your business should bring in at a given price for your product. If the prices you must charge are too high to be competitive, now is the time to face up to it. Examine your cost summary and ask yourself if you can realistically expect to cut any of your costs.

Another good source for financial planning information comes from trade associations that represent your business. For almost every business, there is an association that can provide you with valuable financial data. For instance, you will be able to find the average profits in your industry, the ratio of expenses to profits and the average sales per square foot of selling space.

If you are still in the prelminary stages of planning a business, help may be available at your local Small Business Administration. Ask about the Small Business Development center.

Farmers, Motor Carriers Note Law Changes

Major changes in regulations affecting drivers and vehicles used by farmers and motor carriers were made by the state Legislature, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced.

Concerns for the safety of the public as well as for farmers and motor carriers resulted in several changes in the law, said Gordon Boldt, director, office of motor carrier safety and compliance.

Legislature repealed the law, he explained, that exempted operators of farm trucks from compliance with safety rules when such trucks are driven no more than 150 miles from home.

However, operators of farm trucks over 12,000 pounds now must comply with safety rules for safe operation and equipment. These drivers are exempt from driver qualification rules and from having a physical examination by a medical doctor. None of these exemptions apply to the transportation of hazardous materials, he stated.

For private carriers operating vehicles registered for a gross weight of more than 12,000 pounds, the legislature mandates they must comply with rules for safety operations and equipment and must keep logbooks when traveling more than 100 miles.

In addition, vehicles over 12,000 pounds must display the motor carrier's name and town so it may be read from a distance of 50 feet. Boldt reminds operators that these same requirements apply to service trucks over 12,000 pounds carrying tools or equipment.

In general for private carriers operating vehicles over 26,000 pounds, the Legislature mandated compliance with state driver qualification rules and having current health cards.

Boldt noted there are some private carriers that are exempt from observing driver qualifications and maximum hours of service rules. They are: public utilities, cooperative electrical associations and telephone companies. Also exempt are contractors transporting construction materials, tools and equipment from shop to job site if the materials are for use by the contractor in the construction or repair of buildings.

Law, explains Boldt, defines a private carrier as a person who transports property or passengers, but who is engaged in a business other than transportation when the transportation furthers the person's business.

Other changes in the law include:

—Accidents or spills involving hazardous materials must be reported.

—For-hire motor carriers granted new permits and certificates by the Transportation Regulation Board must comply with the law within 45 days.

—For-hire motor carriers who fail to renew permits or maintain insurance will receive a 45-day suspension, and may request a hearing prior to cancellation.

A copy of the amended law, Laws, 1984, Chapter 520, may be obtained from the Minnesota State Documents Center, 117 University Ave., St. Paul, 55155; phone (612) 297-3000 for $2.54 plus $1.50 for handling and mailing.

Also available from the same office is a copy of Motor Carrier Rules, Minnesota Rules, Chapter 7800, for $4.51 plus $1.50 for handling and mailing. There is only one handling and mailing charge if both documents are ordered together.

Additional information may be obtained from Boldt, Office of Motor Carrier Safety and Compliance, 416 Transportation Building, John Ireland Boulevard, St. Paul, 55155; phone (612) 296-0331.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q — Do I have to pay federal income tax on disability benefits I receive from the Veterans Administration?

A — No. All benefits received from the VA are exempt from federal income taxes; however, interest earned on benefits which are directly deposited into savings institutions and interest earned on insurance dividends left on deposit with the VA must be declared as income for federal income tax purposes.

Q — Can the interest rate on a Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan be changed?

A — If the interest rate at the time the loan is made and set forth in the mortgage note is a fixed non-adjusted rate mortgage, it remains the same for the life of the loan.

Q — Why is it necessary to have the property appraised prior to obtaining a GI home loan?

A — The law requires that the amount of the Veterans Administration guaranteed home loan may not exceed the reasonable value of the property as determined by the VA. In order to reach this determination, the VA requires an appraisal of the property by a designated appraiser.

Q — What service requirements must be met for a widow to receive nonservice-connected pension from the Veterans Administration upon the death of the veteran?

A — The veteran must have served on active duty for a minimum of 90 days during a period of war. There are also income requirements that must be met.

Q — Are members of the Reserves and National Guard eligible for burial in a national cemetery?

A — Yes, if death occurs while performing, or as result of performing, active duty for training.

Senator Leads Ban On Leaded Gas

Members of the oil and automobile industries, government agencies and environmental and health groups including the Minnesota-based lead coalition spoke out at a Senate committee hearing recently in favor of eliminating leaded gasoline.

The effort in Congress is headed by Sen. Dave Durenberger, who has introduced legislation (S. 2609) to ban leaded gas because of the health effects of airborne lead emissions, particularly on young and unborn children. The ban would take effect in 1988; however, slightly-leaded gas would continue to be available in order to fuel farm equipment, lawnmowers, antique cars and other vehicles that must use it.

"Lead poisons kids; your kids and mine," Durenberger told the audience and fellow members of the senate environment and public works committee. "The principal source of lead in our environment is the family car. Automobiles are high-speed aerosal cans of lead poisoning that congregate on city streets twice a day. Automobiles don't need leaded gasoline. We won't be dumping our cars on the junk heap when we ban lead."

In children, high blood lead levels cause brain damage and even death; at low levels, lead can cause learning disabilities, lowered IQ, speech defects and psychiatric problems.

According to studies by the centers for disease control, "For a typical child in the United States, current gasoline lead exposure probably accounts for 25 to 50 per cent of the child's total blood lead level. However, in pockets of excessive gasoline lead exposure this is likely to be higher," reported Dr. Vernon Houk, director of the center for environmental health. Studies indicate that "if there had been no lead in gasoline from 1977 through 1981, there would have been approximatwy 80 per cent fewer cases of lead toxicity during that time period," he said.

According to a study by the environmental protection agency (EPA), 1.5 million children already have blood lead levels high enough to cause a reduction in IQ by up to three points. Testifying at the hearing, EPA assistant administrator Bernard Goldstein added that new findings "suggest that potentially serious health effects may occur in a very large segment of the adult population of the U.S. — a group not previously seen as being at risk (from) ambient lead exposure." EPA currently is considering regulations to reduce or ban the lead in gasoline.

Dr. Howard Mielke of the lead coalition based in Minneapolis-St. Paul, praised the move to ban leaded gas, stating, "The capacity of our society to grow and evolve is vested in the future abilities of our youngest citizens. It is the children who will benefit the most when we as a nation decide that our cities require environments that are unburdened by toxic levels of lead." However, Mielke said the ban should be imposed before 1988, and argued that no vehicles or equipment should be exempt from the ban.

Support also came from Robert McCowan of Ashland Oil, Inc., which has a refinery in St. Paul Park, south of St. Paul. McCowan testified that "such definitive action is necessary if we are to insure continued protection of the public health." The Motor Vehicles Manufacturers association "strongly supports a phase-down" of lead in gas, but believes that the schedule and final allowable amount of lead should be left up to EPA, said spokesman Fred Bowditch.

One of the few opponents of a lead reduction was Jerome F. Cole, president of the International Lead Zinc Research Organization, an arm of the lead and zinc industries. "Quite simply we don't feel that the scientific and medical data at hand warrant a further reduction of the lead content of gasoline," he said.

Both the National Marine Manufacturers association and the national council of farmer cooperatives offered support for reducing lead in gas, but expressed concern that a swift ban or phase-down could drive up the price of leaded gas for vehicles that must use it.

UNCLE MAC MARKET

SECOND PLACE in the kiddie parade, held as part of Art in the Park festivities on Thursday, was awarded to Tommy and Eddie Swantek, who portrayed characters from a favorite story, looking real "country" in bib overalls. Their entry really kept with the theme of the festival, "Torvag Pa Stigen," which translates from the Norwegian as "Market on a Footpath."

Contracts Must Be Written For Some Transactions

People are always entering into verbal agreements to purchase such things as cars or boats, or appliances or tools or even to buy or rent real estate. All too often, everything is fine until one of the parties decides to back out before the deal is concluded.

Are such unwritten agreements legally binding?

The question is one the attorney general's office frequently gets.

The answer is: It all depends — depends on the price of the goods or the type of agreement. For instance, the rental of real estate for less than a year requires no written contract; neither does the performance of a short term service like lawn mowing or snow shovelling. However, any employment contract for longer than a year, such as house care for a vacation home, must be in writing.

But while not all contracts have to be written in order to be enforceable in a court of law, it is always a good idea to get at least something in writing to keep confusion and misunderstanding to a minimum.

Many types of contracts, however, must be written before they will be recognized by a court as valid. Types of contracts which must ordinarily be written before they are legally enforceable include:

— The sale of goods for a price of $500 or more.

— Tranfers of interest in real estate.

— Leases of real estate which are longer than one year in duration.

— Any agreement that by its terms is not to be performed within one year of its making.

— Any special promise to answer for the debt, default or doings of another.

— Any agreement, promise or undertaking to pay a debt which has been discharged by bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings.

Where a written contract is necessary, it need not be a complex document. Generally, a writing in the form of a note or memorandum will be sufficient if it sets forth the essential terms of the contract. But to be enforced in court, it must be signed by the person against whom the action is taken.

Also, separate written statements may be considered a legally binding agreement if, when taken together, they reveal the terms of the contract and contain the signature of the person against whom action may be taken.

The terms that are essential to a written legal agreement can vary depending upon the subject of the contract. Generally the text must establish a basis for believing that the parties intended to enter into a contract. Matters such as price, quantity, and the description of goods or real property being sold, can be the material terms of a contract and should be included in any written agreement.

Before you enter into significant legal contracts where large sums of money or goods of significant value or real estate are involved, you should consider consulting a lawyer. Although many verbal agreements are well-intentioned at their inception, they often go awry resulting in substantial legal difficulties for the parties. By contacting an attorney before entering into a legal contract, you can get advice on the types of provisions which must be included in an agreement for it to be enforceable.

If you have questions about contracts or contract terms, contact the Attorney General's Office, in St. Paul — 124 Ford Building, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul 55155, (612) 296-3353; in Duluth — 610 Government Services Building, 320 West 2nd Street, Duluth, 55802, (218) 723-4891.

Public Office Filings Open Tues., July 3

Secretary of State Joan Growe reminds all potential candidates for federal, state or county office in Minnesota that the period for filing affidavits of candidacy opens on July 3 and closes July 17 at 5 p.m.

The affidavit should be filed in the county auditor's office when the candidate's district falls entirely within that particular county or it should be filed in the office of the secretary of state when the district falls in more than one county. The affidavits must be accompanied by the proper filing fee or a petition in lieu of filing fee.

The following offices are up for election in 1984 and require the indicated filing fee or petition signatures:

Presidential Electors, no filing fee or petition signatures; U.S. Senator in Congress, $200 or 2,000 signatures; U.S. Representative in Congress, $150 or 1,000; Supreme Court Justice, $150 or 2,000; Appeals Court Judge, $150 or 500; District Court Judge, $150 or 500; Representative in the Legislature, $50 or 500; and County Court Judge, $50 or 500.

In order to be qualified to run for office a person must be an eligible voter over the age of 21. In addition, there are other qualifications for certain offices such as being learned in the law in the case of judges and being 30 years or older for the office of U.S. senator.

An independent of minor party candidate running for partisan office must also file a nominating petition along with the affidavit of candidacy. The number of signatures required on the nominating petition is the same as the number required on a petition in lieu of filing fee for that office.

Petitions to nominate an independent or minor party slate of presidential electors must be submitted no later than September 11. No filing fee is required for presidential electors but the nominating petition must have 2,000 signatures.

Anyone needing additional information about specific qualifications for filing for office may call the Secretary of State's Election Division at 296-2805.

Six Marshall IR Delegates At Convention

Six Independent-Republicans from Marshall county attended the state IR convention in Minneapolis recently, joining more than 1300 delegates in unanimously endorsing Senator Rudy Boschwitz for re-election.

County delegates seated at the convention included Rev. Bill Bradley, Alvarado, Ray and Alpha Warne, Grygla, Bernard and Frances Crummy and C. Einar Johnson, all of Warren.

At the convention, delegates elected eight delegates and eight alternates at large to the national Republican convention in Dallas, TX, in August, and 10 presidential electors, one from each congressional district and two at large. Those from the seventh district included Leon Olstad, Ada, current state party chairman, as national delegate; former state representative Joe Niehaus, as presidential elector; and Amy Hirst, East Grand Forks, as his alternate.

In other action, the convention adopted a platform from resolutions presented at precinct caucuses across the state on March 20, consisting of 10 general principles of Republicanism and about 100 more specific statements.

Slow Down and Live

Grygla SWCD Tree Program Now Complete

Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district tree program for 1984 was down some from the last few years and the trees have all been planted now, according to Lawrence Neuschwander, district technician.

There were a few species that were hard to get. People look in nursery catalogs and find a tree they like, Neuschwander said, but different nurseries have different names for the trees so sometimes it is very hard to know what to order. Sometimes pictures are decieving and the tree received is not what the buyer expects. Sometimes the trees may not be well adapted to area climate or soils type.

This is the time to start working on 1985 tree plans and work the soil for planting trees next year, Neuschwander said. He invited district residents to visit the SWCD office in Grygla.

Karyn Richards Selected For Internship

She is one of three Concordia graduates selected for internships which begin in August and last from nine to 18 months. Like medical internships, the dietetics program gives people experience needed to obtain professional credentials. Upon completion of their internships, the students are qualified to become a registered member of the American dietetics association.

Statue Of Liberty Is Familiar Sight To Many People

by Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

She could fairly be described as a classic beauty. Thick curls frame strong yet serene features — well-spaced eyes, long Roman nose, generous mouth and clearly defined chin. Tall-full-figured and stately in bearing, the Statue of Liberty's face and form are familiar to millions all over the world.

Her curls — some of them close to 8 feet long — surround a noble head that is 10 feet from ear to ear and 17 feet 3 inches from cranium to chin. Each eye is 2½ feet wide, her nose is 4½ feet long and her mouth measures 3 feet across. Liberty is 151 feet tall without her pedestal.

It is here pedestal, however, that anchors the lady firmly to old Fort Wood on Liberty Island in New York City's windy Upper Bay. The granite-faced pedestal is 89 feet high with a 65-foot-high base, making the entire statue 305 feet tall. Until the turn of the century, Liberty alone dominated the New York skyline. Today, she remains the most colossal statue in the world.

For almost 100 years, the classical goddess, designed by French sculptor Frederic Auguste Bartholdi and created in the image of his mother, has watched over New York's harbor. She bears a torch symbolizing liberty and wears a seven-spiked crown radiating to each of the seven continents and the seven seas. At the statue's feet are broken shackles signifying freedom from tyranny. In her left hand, she clasps a 24-foot tablet marking America's birthdate, July 4, 1776 — in Roman numerals, of course.

All in all, it was quite a birthday gift that the United States received in Paris on July 4, 1884, when Ferdinand de Lesseps, president of the Union Franco-Americaine, presented the statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World" to Levi P. Morton, U.S. Minister to Paris. On that festive occasion, de Lesseps noted that France's gift represented the contributions of 180 cities, 40 general councils, a large number of societies and more than 100,000 subscribers. "We commit it to your care, Mr. Minister, that it may remain forever the pledge of the bonds which should unite France and the great American nation." What de Lesseps didn't know then was that, by the time the statue was on her way to America, the French committee would be relieved to be rid of the 450,000-pound lady.

Liberty Enlightening the World wasn't even a gleam in her creator's eye until the evening in 1865 when Edouard de Laboulaye gathered a small group of French intellectuals around his dinner table. Laboulaye, a distinguished jurist, academic and ardent admirer of the republican form of government, believed passionately in America. To his dinner guests, he sang the praises of that long-lived republic which stood in contrast to monarchical Europe and to a France in constant political upheaval.

According to sculptor Bartholdi's account, Laboulaye speculated about a joint French-American project, a monument "to be built in America as a memorial to their independence." It would have been politically dangerous for French republicans to erect a statue to liberty in Paris in Napoleon III's Second Empire, but America was a different matter. Government at home could be more safely criticized through a statue across the sea.

Bartholdi set sail for America in the spring of 1871 in search of what Laboulaye had called a "happy idea," a plan for a monument that would "excite public enthusiasm." That summer, he traveled everywhere, making new American friends for himself and the monument. The sculptor visited the poet Longfellow and smoked a cigar with President Grant.

Bartholdi sent Laboulaye a report on his first impressions of America, right down to her peas: "Everything here is big, even the petits-pois. . ." As he traveled, the monument took definite shape in his mind. Liberty Enlightening the World would be "a statue of colossal proportions which would surpass all that have ever existed since the most ancient times." Bedloe's Island in New York harbor, gateway to the New World, became his choice as an appropriate site for the American colossus.

But monuments take time to rise and colossal monuments take lots of time. Meant for America's 1876 centennial, Liberty would not come to these shores for another decade.

Committees were formed on both sides of the Atlantic, the Union Franco-Americaine in 1875 and the American Committee in 1877. The French would raise funds to build the statue and transport it to the United States. The Americans would design, build and pay for the pedestal. Congress acknowledged the gift in 1877 and authorized a search for a site.

During the long construction period, the statue was not idle. Liberty did her part in self-promotion and fund-raising. Her right forearm and torch made a hit in Philadelphia at America's Centennial Exposition. He head appeared at the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1878. And in the summer of 1882, when she was completed to the waist, Bartholdi gave a little luncheon for 20 journalists on her right knee. Tireless promoter though he was, sometimes even Bartholdi grew impatient. He wrote to his mother: "One cannot imagine all I have had to do and especially to wait, it was like the cooking of a poor crawfish."

In 1879, the project's original architect, Violet-le-Duc, died, and a new engineer was chosen. "Gustave Eiffel was the logical choice for Bartholdi," observes Robert Vogel, curator of mechanical and civil engineering at the Smithsonian's Museum of American History. "Even before his famous tower, he had an excellent reputation based on his bridges — spectacular in their size, span and scope."

Like any classic beauty, the Statue of Liberty has good "bones." Her innovative iron skeleton, designed by Eiffel, is the framework which supports a fragile copper skin approximately the thickness of two quarter-dollars. Bartholdi chose copper because it is light, strong yet easily worked, attractive and resistant to salt-laden air. Because his giant work would have to travel across the ocean, he constructed it in 300 pieces.

No part of Liberty's shell rests directly on the parts below; each is hung independently on the iron skeleton, foreshadowing the development of the skyscraper in the late 19th century. Thanks to the genius of Eiffel's design, the statue has been able to adjust to temperature and atmospheric changes and to resist the strong winds that buffeted her.

Liberty has withstood the winds of adversity and change as well. After her formal presentation to the American envoy, she stood for months in lonely majesty, towering over Paris rooftops, in back of Bartholdi's workshop. She then spent long months on French docks packed in 214 custom-made crates marked for reassembly in New York's harbor. Liberty lacked the promised American pedestal still on the drawing board of its designer, Richard Morris Hunt, dean of American architecture. There's wasn't enough money to start the job.

Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, Minneapolis and Baltimore newspapers editorialized that their cities would raise the money in no time should the statue be offered to them. The New York Times expressed moral outrage: "This statue is dear to us, though we have never looked upon it, and no third-rate town is going to step in and take it from us."

It took another New York paper to act. Joseph Pulitzer, published of the New York World, began a relentless "people's campaign" that didn't stop until the necessary amount remaining for the pedestal's construction, $100,000, had been raised. Daily he recorded every contribution, no matter how small, and printed letters like this one: "I am only a sewing girl but I am in full sympathy with your effort." She sent 50 cents.

On the great day of Liberty's dedication, Oct. 28, 1886 — a day so wet and foggy that the fireworks had to be postponed — it is unlikely that President Cleveland, Bartholdi or any of the dignitaries and guests gave any thought to the hundreds of immigrants unloading their scanty belongings at Manhattan's Battery. They certainly in no way connected the immigrants with the statue. But two poets foresaw what Liberty would come to mean to the millions of immigrants who came to American in great waves from the year of her dedication until the mid-1920s.

Emma Lazarus, a young poet with a growing literary reputation, had written an ode to Liberty to help raise money for her pedestal. In Emma's poem, the Statue of Liberty became the "Mother of Exiles." Famed poet James Russell Lowell wrote to Emma, "Your sonnet gives its subject a raison d' etre" — literally, a reason to be — "which it wanted before."

In an irony of history, the Statue of Liberty became a national monument in the same year, 1924, that the National Origins Act set a ceiling on immigration and established a national origins quota system. Once again, Liberty's meaning was transformed. The tide of immigration ebbed, and, in two world wars, American men sailed to battle. Most of them came home — to the Statue of Liberty's welcome.

And so it came to pass that Lady Liberty — a handsome Parisian immigrant — became the symbol of America herself. Even in this day of women's liberation, she is one lady everyone wants to keep on her pedestal.

UPS and DOWNS

A roller coaster is an amusement. Ups and downs can be thrilling when you're only along for the ride.

Life brings a succession of ups and downs. How we meet them is a rather accurate measure of that intangible thing we call character. Most people discover the ups aren't all fun—the downs never are.

For in this life none of us is simply along for the ride. We have obligations and responsibilities, opportunities and duties, challenges and concerns.

All of us need the spiritual enrichment that effectively molds strong character. Faith in God and its earnest expression through worship and Christian service prepare us for the ups and downs of life.

Be among the millions who are discovering the higher and deeper dimensions that really make life thrilling. This week attend the church or synagogue of your choice.

BUDGET STRETCHING IDEAS

How A Basic Wardrobe Can Wear Different Roles

One well-cut suit can form the basis for many different wardrobe looks while staying within your fashion budget.

If your clothing budget needs a stretch, here are a few tips to help you. Good clothing stands the test of time so it's dollar-wise to invest in well-tailored, classic styles that can be varied from year to year by imaginative use of accessories.

Work around one or more neutral colors—gray is the important shade today, a go-with-anything color that works as well with darks as brights. Navy, black, brown and beige are other good choices.

Select a well-cut, go-anywhere jacket or suit of your choice in a neutral shade. Such wardrobe staples will make you look and feel good every time you wear them. Supplement this with good blouses, well-cut skirts, tailored dresses, a vest and sweater...as much as your budget can afford. Always keep in mind your neutral color scheme. This allows indefinite mixing and matching. Hosiery is an ideal way to give your neutrals different looks. Accessorize your gray suit with new pantyhose, such as Hanes Wicker Weave by Oleg Cassini, in Amethyst. It's a new refinement of pinstripe. Coordinate it with low heeled shoes and a bag in burgundy suede.

For a different, conservative look, try Charcoal Ultrasheer pantyhose and pair them with black or gray pumps.

Alive Support pantyhose in pale Dusty Blue matched with a scarf of the same color will spell fashion excitement.

The golden rule in accessories is "less is more." If in doubt, don't add anything and try to choose hosiery, belt, scarf, shoes, bag and jewelry that complement your neutral color scheme.

It's a "centsible" way to make the most of your clothing dollars.

Diced Prunes Streamline A Classic Cookie

Use Sunsweet Diced Prunes and save 15 minutes on the filling for old-fashioned thumbprint cookies.

Do you ever yearn for the filled cookies of years gone by? Prune Thumbprints are an update of grandmother's classic cookie. The difference is that you can make these cookies in a lot less time.

If you have a food processor, you can whip up the dough in a jiffy. Just remember to stir the oats and diced prunes in by hand. Even if you don't have a processor, the dough won't take long. The filling is fast and foolproof when you use Sunsweet Diced Prunes.

Sunsweet Diced Prunes eliminate the need to pit, snip, and chop prunes, saving you an average of about 15 minutes. Recipe-ready diced prunes are convenient and easy-to-use, and can be substituted in the same amount for prunes that are chopped or diced by hand. Look for this new product available in the baking and dried fruit sections of supermarkets.

PRUNE THUMBPRINT COOKIES

1 cup butter or margarine
1½ cups packed brown sugar
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk
2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
3 cups uncooked quick-cooking oats
¾ cup apricot jam
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1½ cups (1 pkg.) Sunsweet Diced Prunes

Cream butter with brown sugar. Sift flour with soda and salt, and blend into creamed mixture. Stir in milk and lemon peel; then oats, mixing well. Shape into 48 small balls, about 1¼ inches diameter, and place 2 inches apart on ungreased baking sheet. Make an indentation in center of each with rounded end of spatula or thumb. Melt jam with lemon juice and stir in diced prunes. Spoon into indentations on cookies. Bake above oven center at 375° F. about 15 minutes or just until edges brown very lightly. Let rest a minute, then remove to wire racks to cool. Makes about 48 cookies.

The Feud Continues

Alice Herrington, president of Friends of Animals, Inc., has written the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in protest of a conservation education and information program called "Project Wild".

She quotes from a study by Dr. Stephen R. Kellert of the Yale school for environmental studies which states, "aggression among adult criminals may be strongly correlated with a history of a family abuse and childhood cruelty toward animals. . . The evolution of a more gentle and benign relationship in human society might, thus, be enhanced by our promotion of a more positive and nurturing ethic between children and animals."

Somehow Herrington brings this obvious reference to domesticated pets into the argument against hunting and trapping. She said Dr. Kellert's study found that 81 per cent of teenagers now oppose killing wildlife for sport or profit. Opposing Project Wild, she states, "The promoters publicly state that children must be reached to counter their current opposition to killing wildlife for sport or profit."

She also quotes a Pennsylvania psychiatrist, Dr. Maurice E. Linden, as stating: "The huntsman is aggressive, forceful, domineering and tends to be somewhat sadistic. He likes to inflict torture. It takes a certain amount of sadism to enjoy the death throes of a dying animal."

Armed with such idiocy, half-truths, distortions, individual biases and mistaken assumptions, she calls upon the PTA to "appraise and reject this movement by hunters and trappers to infiltrate the schools." As a bid for verification of her contentions, she encloses an outdoors column from the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The column, however, is no verification of the insipid allegations at all. Writer Ben Callaway points out that outdoor sports people communicating among themselves are already sold on multiple use conservation concepts, on managing natural resources with respect for both present and future, based upon the lessons of experience.

"However, those who don't fish or hunt, or who might be opposed to these 'consumptive' sports on emotional grounds, too seldom understand the sports and the management efforts to sustain them," he writes.

"Project Wild, an ambitious attempt to substitute fact for fiction in the schools, is being introduced in New Jersey, among several states, this year. The project is targeted toward teachers of kindergarten through high school with 'an interdisciplinary, supplementary environmental and conservation education program emphasizing wildlife'. It aims to assist learners of any age in 'developing awareness, knowledge, skills and commitment to result informed decisions, responsible behavior and constructive action concerning wildlife and the environment upon which all life depends.' "

The project sounds like an environmentally good one, particularly in eastern and urban schools where the wildlife heritage is not familiar as it is in rural communities and further west. To Alice Herrington, however, the program has a different potential.

". . . a major movement is underway to teach children to enjoy cruelty to animals," she writes to the PTA. "It is promoted by state game commissions, the National Wildlife federation (comprised of 8,000 local hunting and trapping clubs) and the Wildlife Management institute (funded by munitions makers)," she adds. "They are pressing for the schools to undertake instruction in hunting and trapping, which they term 'wildlife management'. The movement is insidious, and the hunter-trapper education is padded with concern about legitimate environmental issues."

With that type of attitude and ignorance of reality at work, the need for a program such as Project Wild is evident. We hope that the PTA leadership is astute enough to recognize Herrington's alarm comes from the heart and not the head.

A Farmer's Creed

The following "Farmers Creed" has been distributed by Sperry New Holland of New Holland, PA, and is reprinted with permission of that company:

I believe a man's greatest possession is his dignity and that no calling bestows this more abundantly than farming.

I believe hard work and honest sweat are the building blocks of a person's character.

I believe that farming, despite its hardships and disappointments, is the most honest and honorable way a man can spend his days on this earth.

I believe farming nurtures the close family ties that make life rich in ways money can't buy.

I believe my children are learning values that will last a lifetime and can be learned in no other way.

I believe farming provides education for life and that no other occupation teaches so much about birth, growth and maturity in such a variety of ways.

I believe many of the best things in life are indeed free: the splendor of a sunrise, the rapture of wide open spaces, the exhilarating sight of your land greening each spring.

I believe true happiness comes from watching your crops ripen in the field, your children grow tall in the sun, your whole family feel the pride that springs from their shared experience.

I believe that by my toil I am giving more to the world than I am taking from it, an honor that does not come to all men.

I believe my life will be measured ultimately by what I have done for my fellowman, and by this standard I fear no judgment.

I believe when a man grows old and sums up his days, he should be able to stand tall and feel pride in the life he's lived.

I believe in farming because it makes all this possible.

Farm Facts And Figures

Following information is from the Central Livestock association "Shipper" magazine:

Early each morning America's 250,000 dairy farmers start their cows on the first of two or three milking trips. Within hours, more than 18 million gallons of milk will be delivered to grocery stores throughout the country.

Dairying is the only form of agriculture found in all fifty states.

What's on the menu for the average cow? Yearly she will consume the following: two and one-half tons of hay, six and one-half tons of silage (chopped green corn, sorghum, and grass legume mixtures), two acres or more of good pasture, and from four to seven thousand gallons of water. The average American family of four consumes approximately two and one-half tons of food a year; 1,233 pounds of that is dairy products.

The average dairy cow produces a year's supply of fluid milk and cream for over 40 Americans. While cow numbers are decreasing as the years go by, that attrition is offset by the steadily increasing capacity of American dairy cows to produce more milk.

Insulin for treating diabetes if produced from cattle's pancreas glands. Overall, more than 100 lifesaving, life-improving drugs can be derived from cows.

Agriculture is big business. It uses 191,000 miles of railroads, 3.2 million miles of inter-city highways and 26,000 miles of improved waterways to get food — more than 400 million tons of it — to American consumers.

Early civilizations recognized the value of dairy products. The Old Testament, for example, contains more than 50 references to milk, along with the famous phrase, "land of milk and honey."

One farmer feeds 78 people besides himself. Twenty-six of those people are located outside the United States, and he creates four off-farm private enterprise jobs in the U.S.

The average farmer is 47 years old, his farm is about 286 acres and his land is worth almost $350,000.00.

The farmer gets 35 cents of every dollar you spend on food.

Today, 90 per cent fewer dairy farmers milking 53 per cent fewer cows produce 25 per cent more milk than in 1940!

Interesting Opinions:

"The functioning of supply and demand, the fundamental, eternal economic contest, is powerful and pervasive, and dooms government attempts to circumvent it to failure. Still, government tries. American farm policy is the biggest attempt to circumvent the marketplace in U.S. history. As such, it is the biggest failure."

—U.S. Business and Industrial Council

Borrowed Nonsense:

"My wife is always asking for money," Scotty complained to a co-worker. "Last week she wanted a hundred dollars, two days ago it was two hundred and this morning she wanted a hundred dollars again."

"What does she spend it all on?" the co-worker asked.

"I wouldn't know," Scotty replied. "I've never given her any."

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District I

During the 1984 legislative session, the Minnesota legislature approved legislation designed to improve the overall economy of our state in the long-run, and restoring a semblance of economic stability to our state's economy.

The final supplemental appropriations bill approved by the legislature included a total of over $335 million in economic development initiatives, most of which are intended to maintain the current economic recovery in parts of our state, and improve the "business climate" of the state in general.

What did we do to improve the potential for our small business community to thrive and prosper in the coming years?

In addition to repealing the 10 per cent income tax surcharge tacked on in recent sessions to help resolve massive budget deficits left by the past administration, we also added $10 million in bonding authority to the state's emergency and economic development program.

That program offers special assistance to businesses which have unique financing needs, and continues the 1983 program of providing affordable loans to small businesses and farms, for pollution control and assistance with the purchase, leasing and licensing of technology-related products.

Since the availability and cost of energy to an energy-poor state like Minnesota is so important, it was significant that we also added another energy provision in the package that would provide loans to businesses for conserving energy of using alternative energy sources, and for manufacturing equipment to be used for energy conservation recovery and renewable energy resource development.

For local community development, we approved $500,000 in funds for community development corporations; $6 million in grants for local governments for local development projects; $1.1 million in funding to encourage marketing abroad; and another $30 million to the state's public and private jobs program to help fund jobs for the jobless.

In addition to the property tax relief programs offered to boost our sagging farm economy, the development bill also contained its own assistance in the form of $30 million in bonding authority for farm equipment and other capital expenditure loans.

All in all, this legislature invested wisely and prudently in the area of future development, with an eye toward the continued recovery of our local and state's business climate, and a built-in confidence in the system that has been missing over the past few years.

Advice from Anne

Perpetual Youth—Is it Only a Myth???

SUNSET BEACH, CA—Hold on to your hats dear readers because the answer seems to be a resounding, NO!!! It is out there for the taking in the form of a miracle nutrient called Nutri-Cell 2100!

For many years I have personally pursued that elusive wil-o-the-wisp called eternal youth and to be perfectly honest had just about given up hope of ever finding it. I tried all the latest creams and temporary face lifts. I tried all the latest things touted by the rash of life extension books on the market, but something always seemed to be amiss. The face lifts soon faded back into my ever-expanding wrinkles and the life extension books always seemed to ask the impossible of me. They either required that each and every day I gulp down a pound or two of pills or powder, or even worse, that I half starve myself to death by staying on an extremely limited amount of calories for the rest of my life. Neither I, nor my husband, (nor any of our friends I later found) could stand for long the 'no fun at all' regimes they demanded in order to keep us perpetually young and healthy. A good quality life, we felt, no matter how long it is otherwise extended does owe us the option of a before dinner cocktail or two and the pleasure of enjoying a good gourmet dinner when and if we like. In other words, why stay young if you can't enjoy that additional youth to the fullest???

Anne Callendar

Now, after all the interminable trial and error described above, I truly believe I have found the ultimate solution. That is why I think you, my readers, shall be as excited as I am with my discovery of a Swiss developed natural nutrient called Nutri-Cell 2100. Responsible scientific research indicates that it cannot only rejuvenate and make young again and keep young every single ageing cell in your body but makes you feel absolutely great and superendously full of energy while it is doing so!!!

For many years, in addition to all the nutrients on the market, I had tried the old mind over matter trick of convincing myself that ageing and all the aches, pains, and endless fatigue that go with it are all in the mind. The theory was that if one could control the mind, one could convince ones self that none of these things were really happening. Well . . . believe me . . . they are really happening! If one does not have all the help one can get . . . the old body just begins by natural processes to deteriorate away into that oblivion called old age. And . . . regardless of what the sages may say . . . old age is not serenity and wisdom personified. It is an endless series of new found pains, forever present aches, and a fatigue that never seems to let up.

Nutri-Cell 2100 has thank the Lord eliminated all that for both my parents, friends, and myself. And just how does it perform that seemingly impossible miracle is I'm certain the first question that comes to your mind. In researching this article I had the opportunity to read and study carefully the major medical journals that have reported on this natural body nutrient. From these reports it appears that Nutri-Cell 2100 is absorbed directly into the core of ageing cells and repairs and rejuvenates them all to a far more youthful state. It does this by strengthening the cellular membranes (they become weaker and weaker each year past 25 years of age) and thus allowing the individual cells within the body to rebuild themselves anew no matter how much damage they have suffered due to the ageing process, urban smog, smoking, or drinking.

This complete bodily revitalization seems to occur equally efficiently in all age groups from the mid-twenties to the late nineties. It keeps the young, young, and brings back a far more youthful state of mind, energy, and appearance to those who have already reached their middle and late years. Of course, the more advanced in age a person is when they begin taking Nutri-Cell 2100, the longer it takes to repair and rejuvenate the cells throughout their complete body.

The vast majority of people taking it report within a week a tremendous surge of energy and feeling of well-being. Their stamina, confidence, and ability to resist stress and worry are enhanced significantly. Their sexual lives improve dramatically (particularly the males) and general sense of optimism about the future of their lives improves almost beyond the point of imagination.

In the course of writing this article, I have personally interviewed many of those taking Nutri-Cell 2100 and found especially among couples, both young and old, that their lives have been turned around one million percent. They are more loving and understanding in their relationships, do many more active things together, and enjoy a far more pleasurable sex life.

Other interesting aspects that individuals have reported are elimination of stress caused migraines, disappearance of allergy symptoms, a smoothing of the skin, fingernail hardening and growth, increased endurance in tennis and jogging, and a myriad of other good things that come with an overall improvement in health.

Sound too good to be true? Yes it does and I admit that in the beginning I, too, had my doubts. But, as I began experiencing the same reactions cited above that skepticism rapidly vanished. I now feel like a completely new person and go about my daily chores with a sense of energy and confidence that I would never have thought possible a short time ago. That is why I, without reservation, highly recommend Nutri-Cell 2100 (available at all health food stores) to all my readers. Afterall, we only pass through this life once and as the ever-young George Burns says, "Let's enjoy it to the fullest while we may!"

Att'y. General's Office Explains Gambling Laws

"It's "Casino Night" at the Elk's lodge. A member of the local constabulary is dealing blackjack, someone from the town council is taking tickets at the door. Five bucks will get you in the door and give you a handful of "play" money which you can use to buy chances on any number of games inside. It's all for the good of a local charity so it's okay. Right?

Two people in a bar are betting between themselves on a video game which simulates a slot machine. No money goes into the machine so it's okay. right?

Wrong on both counts. Both activities are very much against the law, according to the Minnesota attorney general's office.

The fact is, the collection of laws that comprise the state's gambling statutes are among the most frequently misunderstood laws on the books. They're misunderstood not only by the public in general, but frequently by those responsible for enforcing them, the state spokesman said.

For the record then, it is illegal in Minnesota for anyone to conduct a lottery. According to state law, a lottery is a "plan which provides for the distribution of money, property or other reward or benefit to persons selected by chance from among participants, some or all of whom have given a consideration for the chance of being selected." Lotteries are not only illegal if a participant pays to purchase a lottery ticket, but it is also illegal for a participant to pay to enter a building or facility where he or she is given a "free" lottery ticket or "play money" to purchase chances for prizes.

Some Minnesotans have tried to sell chances on their homes as a means of selling the property. After a certain number of tickets have been bought (for a total price equal to what would be a reasonable purchase price), a "winner" is drawn by chance from the names of all those purchasing tickets. But this, too, is an illegal lottery.

It is also illegal in Minnesota to make a bet. The law does say, however, that private social bets don't violate the law. Minnesotans can't manufacture, sell or offer for sale any gambling device or maintain any place where gambling devices are operated. A gambling device is any contrivance which, for a price, offers the player an opportunity to obtain something of value, either directly from the device or from a person awarding prizes. To qualify as an illegal gambling device, the award of prizes must be determined principally by chance and not by skill. A good example is a slot machine. Finally, sports book-making is illegal, and was recently upgraded by our legislature to felony status.

Nonprofit, religious or veterans' organizations may legally conduct certain types of gambling activities which would otherwise be illegal, but only if they are licensed to do so by a licensing authority. (This is generally the local municipality. But after March 1, 1985, licenses will only be issued by a state Charitable Gambling Control Board.)

Even then, charitable organizations may only :(1) conduct bingo games; (2) use paddle wheels (a wheel marked off into squares containing one or more numbers and which, after being turned or spun, use a pointer or marker to indicate winning chances); (3) use tip boards (a board measuring at least 12 inches square marked off in a grid or columns in which each section contains a hidden number or numbers which determine the winning chances); (4) conduct a raffle, or (5) use pull tabs (a single folded ticket or card which conceals a number or set of numbers designated in advance and at random as prize winners).

It's absolutely illegal in Minnesota for a charitable, fraternal, religious, veterans' or nonprofit organization, or any other person or entity to conduct so-called "casino nights," to operate gambling devices requiring the insertion of a coin or token, or to sponsor games or operate devices where the winner is determined by the outcome of an athletic contest or sporting event, the attorney general's office said.

Most gambling violations are misdemeanors or gross misdemeanors. Since gambling laws are sure to get more complicated in the years ahead, it is best that Minnesotans keep apprised of what is and is not legal.

For any questions on the state's gambling laws, contact the Minnesota Attorney General's Office at (612) 296-7578.

Heading Off Heat Waves

Hot summer weather is on its way, and dairymen can help cows achieve optimum milk production during sweltering days by feeding them sodium bicarbonate. Research at the University of Florida shows that heat-stressed cows produce more milk and milkfat when bicarb is added to the ration at 1 percent of the total dry matter.

Dr. David Beede, dairy nutritionist at the University, says that sodium bicarbonate probably prevents a drop in rumen pH that often occurs in hot weather.

Research conducted in Florida during hot summer months showed that cows produced over 2 lbs more milk per day — a 5 percent increase — with bicarb added. Milk fat content increased from 3.42 percent to 3.57 percent for bicarb-fed cows. "This demonstrates that the buffering with bicarbonate was important," Beede points out.

Besides buffering, sodium bicarbonate is related to different mineral requirements of cows under heat stress conditions. After studying mineral needs of dairy cows, Beede has found that hot weather creates a greater need for potassium. That's because cows lose potassium through sweating. Plus, milk contains .15 to .17 percent potassium — even higher than its calcium content.

After further research, Beede discovered improved response to added potassium if the diet also included supplemental sodium above that normally recommended.

"There appears to be a relationship between potassium and sodium that is analogous to the well-known link between calcium and phosphorus in dairy feeding," he explains.

By adding sodium bicarbonate to the ration cows receive not only the necessary sodium they need in high summer temperatures but also the buffering benefit.

Study Shows State's Waters Are Improved

Recently-released national study shows that Minnesota's rivers, streams and lakes are cleaner today than they were in 1972 — the first year of the federal clean water act — but that much work remains to keep them that way, the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) said today.

Report, Clean Water: The States' Evaluation of Progress, was produced by the association of state and interstate water pollution control administrators, with MPCA input. It indicates that even with substantial increases in the number of waste sources over the last 10 years, pollution of the country's streams, rivers and lakes is being reduced.

Minnesota reflects the national trend, according to the report's figures which show percentage increases in waters which conform to designated use standards.

Report evaluated Minnesota water by measuring the extent to which the water supports the use for which it is designated. These include uses such as fishing, recreation, agriculture, public drinking and food processing.

All waters are assigned several uses, with the vast majority required to be suitable primarily for fishing and recreation.

In 1982, 66 per cent of the state's rivers and streams fully supported their designated use, an improvement of more than ten per cent over the 54 per cent figure recorded in 1972, the report said.

Lakes and reservoirs surveyed showed 65 per cent supporting designated uses in 1982 compared to 56 per cent a decade before.

Credit for water quality improvement statewide can be evenly spread, but in metropolitan areas improved wastewater treatment at industrial and municipal sites appears to be largely responsible, the agency said. Diverting pollutants and-or treating polluted waters has been a critical element in improving the quality of lakes statewide, the report said.

Report notes that the investment of resources by state, local and federal water pollution control agencies and by industrial wastewater dischargers "appears to be paying off".

Despite improvements, new pollution problems are emerging and old problems will require continued attention to maintain water quality, the report said.

Report calls acid rain the newest threat to water quality in Minnesota, noting that between 1400 and 2500 lakes are sensitive to acid deposition. Sewer overflows continue to prevent achievement of swimmable standards in the metropolitan stretch of the Mississippi river, the agency said.. Other water quality threats include: spills of hazardous materials, especially leaks from underground fuel tanks and pipelines; improper disposal of solid and hazardous wastes and non-point sources of pollution.

MPCA worked cooperatively with 55 states, interstate and territorial agencies to provide information for the report which compiles, compares and contrasts water quality data.

Protect Your Home During Vacationing

Home burglaries can occur anytime and are likely to happen when the occupants are away on vacation, according to Minnesota public safety commissioner Paul Tschida.

Tschida reminds Minnesotans that the 1984 vacation season could bring more home burglaries. He advises residents to make their homes appear occupied while they are gone by following these tips from public safety's Crime Watch office:

—Arrange to have your lawn mowed and sidewalk swept regularly. Also have newspapers and circulars picked up from the porch or mailbox.

—Have neighbors watch for and report to the police or sheriff any suspicious activity in and around your home. Ask them to pick up your mail, regularly check inside the home and reposition the drapes.

—Close and lock all doors and windows, including porch, basement and garage.

—Connect lights and a radio to an automatic timer to turn them on and off in the home each night.

—Light up your porch and yard with outdoor lights to deter burglars and to increase the likelihood that a would-be burglar will be seen.

—Protect doors and windows with a burglar alarm.

—Cancel all deliveries, such as milk, laundry and cleaning.

—Never leave valuables lying around. Keep them in a safety deposit box.

—Tell your police or sheriff department when you'll be leaving and how long you'll be gone. Ask them to check your home during your absence.

—Never advertise your departure in the newspaper before you leave on a trip. If you want the story told, tell it after you return.

—Join Operation Identification — a proven burglary prevention program — by contacting the local police or sheriff department.

Implementing these burglary prevention tips could save you the fear and anger often associated with home burglaries, said Tschida.
